Answer. I kept a boarding house, and by reference to the date of the account of Col. Martin, I find he commenced boarding with me at Elliot, on the 13th of September: he proclaimed in my hearing, and I think advertised, that he would open his office next morning at ten o'clock. The first application handed in was that of Mr. Franklin E. Plummer, for a quarter section float to be laid at Belfour's ferry; this was on Saturday, as I think. Soon after, I think on the evening of the same day, Governor Reynolds made application to locate a section float on the same land. Some time during the next week, by appointment of Col. Martin, the two parties appeared before him, and discussed the merits of their respective rights to the land. There was a good deal of debating, but I was not admitted within the room, and could only learn who were the speakers from their voices, or by looking through the window. Col. Martin finally decided that inasmuch as Governor Reynolds' claim was the largest, though the last applicant, that he should have it. Mr. Plummer manifested great dissatisfaction, and told me he despised the principle on which the decision was made, but should make no noise about it; perhaps there might be a hearing hereafter. He said further, that he would lay the float on a quarter of the section adjoining, which he thought would probably be as valuable as the other, if suffered to lie there.

Interrogatory fourth. What do you know in regard to James Oxberry's claim, being the tract of land on which G. W. Martin resides? State whether there was any improvements made, and where Oxberry lived at the time of the treaty, &c.?

Answer. I never was on the tract of land until near a year after the treaty. Oxberry lived about three-quarters of a mile of me, (at Elliott) on a place which he bought from William McCoy, who bought it from David Oxberry the original proprietor, as I understood by the family. He, James Oxberry, tended a small crop, during the year 1830; I know he continued to live there until after the treaty, and believe he did not move away until after the following Christmas. The place where he lived is now in possession of Mrs. Nancy Carr, but was sold at the sales as public lands.

Interrogatory fifth. Had or had not David Oxberry a reservation allowed him at the place on which he settled after removing from the place where James Oxberry lived at the time of the treaty? If so, how much?

Answer. He had three quarter sections allowed him.

Interrogatory sixth. Has he since sold it? if yea, to whom? and for what price? and to whom since sold, and for what price? State all you know in regard to it.

Answer. He sold it to John T. Hammond; the price I forget, though both of them told me: I believe, however, about two thousand dollars. I have understood it has since been sold to John McLemore, and Col. G. W. Martin; this I learned from Hammond, about the first of May, or in April.

Interrogatory seventh. Previous to the treaty of 1830, did you ever hear James Oxberry say he had any improvement on the tract of land where G. W. Martin lives? Were you in the habit of talking with Oxberry about his affairs? and when did he first tell you, or did you learn, that he claimed a reservation on said tract, where said Martin lives?

Answer. I do not recollect ever to have heard him or any other person say he had. I was in the habit of talking with him about his affairs, and thought I knew as much about them as he did himself; I cannot tell the exact time when I first heard of his claim on the north of the Yellowbusha (the Martin place) but know it was some length of time after the treaty.

Interrogatory eighth. Are you acquainted with the general character of Joseph Persons, Green Hastings, Abel Beaty, Jacob Thompson, John T. Hammond, and Kelsey H. Douglass, witnesses in this investigation?

Answer. I have known the first three for about two years; their characters, I believe, stand fair in every respect; the others I have known longer, and can say the same of them.

Interrogatory ninth. Where did you reside in 1833?

Answer. At Elliott, three miles east of this place.

Interrogatory tenth. Was the notice of the time and place for the sales of the lands, of which you have spoken, sufficient, to a reasonable extent, to enable the planters to be prepared with money at the sales?

Answer. There was great complaint among the people, against the President, for hastening the sales so unexpectedly. Both Colonel Gwin and Colonel Sterling, the register and receiver, staid at my house, and seemed to be of the opinion that there would be no sales in the fall; and when the notice came on, they seemed, from their conversation, to be taken as much at a nonplus, as others. The season of the year was one when the planters have least money, and there were no banks or mercantile houses able to advance money, to such as had credit to borrow money in that way, within any reasonable distance of this part of the State. The general sentiment among the common class of people was, that the lands would go into the hands of wealthy men, who could raise large sums of money on short notice, and that the season of the year, together with the shortness of the notice, gave such men almost entire control of the sales; and such is my own opinion. R. J. Walker, in a speech to the people, before Colonel Pratt's tavern, by way of recommending the terms proposed by the speculators, said, that it had always been the wish of the President, for the people to get the land at $1.25 per acre; and he said it was not only the wish of the President, but had always been the wish of Mr. Jackson. That the government had fixed the price of the land at a dollar and a quarter per acre, and, by the arrangement proposed, the company could get their lands at that rate, and so could the people if they closed in with the terms then proposed to them, and that this would be perfectly satisfactory to the President. This struck me at the time as something very singular, being, as I thought, contrary to law, as well as the usage of the government heretofore. I am not certain that I have used the exact words of Mr. Walker. I was much struck with that part of his speech, and have no hesitation in saying, they convey the exact idea. There is another circumstance, which has just occurred to me, which I think it my duty to state. On the morning that Mr. Walker made his speech, I went into the land office, and saw Colonel Samuel Gwin in conversation with some of the company of speculators, conversing on the subject of the company. When they went out, Colonel Gwin turned to me and said, "By George! they are about to form a company which is illegal. I expect it will break up the whole sale, and I hope it will."

JOHN SMITH.

No. 11.—James Sims' testimony:

James Sims was next called and sworn. (I did not deem it expedient to take down his testimony in relation to such facts as are already well established, by several witnesses previously examined.) The said Sims deposed as follows.

Interrogatory first. Were you present, at this place, at the sales of the lands of the United States, in October and November last?

Answer. I was generally present during the whole sales.

Interrogatory second. Was there any company or association of individuals at said sales? and if yes, state how many companies; the names and residence of each individual thus associated; the time when and the means by which you became acquainted with their existence, and also the object of such associations?

Answer. On Tuesday, the second day of the sales, I understood that there were three companies of speculators on the ground, associated together, to speculate on the public lands then offered for sale. These companies on Monday, and perhaps Tuesday, came in conflict in bidding for some lands in the Yazoo valley, and ran them very high, but I cannot state the amount. Colonel Irwin and myself were in conversation on Tuesday; and a number of the settlers came and requested us to go with Captain Howard and another person to meet the speculators, who, they said, had promised, if they would give up all their numbers, they should get their settlements at government price, and that they would make such an arrangement, if a committee, on the part of the settlers, would meet them. Accordingly we met in a room at the upper chamber of Colonel Pratt's tavern—Mr. McLemore, of Tennessee, Robert Jamison, jr., Malcolm Gilchrist, Isaac Lane, of Alabama, Thomas Bernard, Robert Walker, and Thomas G. Ellis, of Mississippi, on the part of the respective companies. We were informed that the three companies of speculators had united, that they would offer these terms to the settlers; that is, the settlers must give up to the company all the numbers they had taken, whether for the lands they lived on, or others which they had selected with a view of purchasing, and agree to bid for no lands whatever at the public land sales at Chocchuma. That the company would buy the land at as low a rate as practicable, and the settlers should each have, at cost, one eighth of a section, if one eighth would cover his improvements; if not, a quarter section. That the lands of the company should be set up at public sale, and the proceeds divided among the company in proportion to the stock of each individual. They also stated, that the settlers need fear no one who came from the States of Tennessee, Alabama, or Mississippi, solely with the view of speculating, as they believed all such had united with the consolidated company, which they then represented. The only competition, they said, which the settlers need to apprehend, was citizens from a distance, who came to buy lands with a view to settlement. That it would prevent the settlers, and speculators, from coming in conflict; and that they thought, by this means, nearly all the lands could be bought in at government prices. We urged that more land should be allowed to the settlers, at least one quarter section, any how; this was refused. We then went and reported to the citizens the terms we had made. The report did not seem to give general satisfaction. The company then directed Mr. Walker to address the people in a speech, and read them the articles of agreement. So far as it concerned the settlers, this quieted the discontented, except in a few instances. Of gentlemen who would not accede to the terms, Mr. Ford who lives above this place, refused to have anything to do with this company; Colonel Campbell, of Tuscahoma, and some others, took the same stand, and the company ran their land on them very high.

Interrogatory third. Who acted as bidders for the company?

Answer. Walker, Davis, Green, Lane, Jamison, Gilchrist and Glover, and perhaps others.

Interrogatory fourth. Was either of the auctioneers at the public sales, connected with the company?

Answer. As one of the committee on the part of the settlers, I was often in company with the speculators, and in their consultations; Mr. Holt seemed to take a part generally; from this I inferred that he was concerned with them; Mr. Rather I viewed in the same light, from the same circumstance.

Interrogatory fifth. Give the names of the members of the several companies?

Answer. I cannot name, at this moment, any member of the original Tennessee company, but that of John C. McLemore; there was another person, who acted with him, for the Tennessee company, but I cannot now call his name to mind. R. J. Walker, of Natchez; Thos. G. Ellis, of Adams county; Thomas Bernard, of Natchez; Col. Holdiness, of Lownds county; Dr. John H. Hand, of Columbus; Mr. Gibson, of Oktibihaw county; John D. Jones, of Lownds county; Lemuel N. Hatch, of Lownds county; and Thacker W. Winter, were of the company, from Mississippi. I believe that James McLaren, of Clinton, was also of the company, as he was much engaged with the consolidated company, in transacting their business; but I did not hear him say so. I think, Mr. Lloyd, of Carroll county, I believe, also belonged to the Mississippi company. Robert Jamison, jr., of Pickens county; Col. Burnett, Driver Anderson, Mr. Green, Malcom Gilchrist, and his brother, whose christian name I do not know, I think of Lawrence county, Alabama; Major Coopwood, Col. Weaver, of the county that Salma is in; Mimms Jamison, of Tuscaloosa county; and Allen Glover, of Demopolis, all of Alabama, composed, as far as I was informed, the Alabama company.

Interrogatory sixth. Who acted as auctioneers, at the United States sales?

Answer. Holt, Rather, and McLaren were the principal criers.

Interrogatory seventh. Was either of the officers of the United States, then at Chocchuma, concerned with said company?

Answer. I do not know, of my own knowledge, of but one; Col. G. W. Martin told he was concerned. I have no doubt but several other individuals were of the company, but I am not able to name them. Mr. Girault had located a float at the improvement of Capt. Smith, my father-in-law. I went to see the company, and met five or six of them near door of the land office, and told them that, on the part of the citizens, we had forgotten to provide for settlers, who had been floated off their land; and I thought it right that such should be allowed to select a quarter section, and come under the rule in favor of settlers. Col. Martin was amongst them; Gilchrist and several others refused, and walked off, when Col. Martin told that he, as one of the company, thought Capt. Smith's case a hard and peculiar one, and that he would be willing to let him in. I heard it said that Dr. William M. Gwin, the United States marshal, was a member of the company, and frequently saw him apparently in consultation with them, but did not hear him say that he was one; I was informed that he was one. I was informed that he had two shares, though I forget who told me. At the private entries, I saw him put in applications for land, in the names of several persons who were absent; and he said he was authorized to do so; at the conflicts, he would withdraw, when the conflicting claimants would do so, to go out and bid among themselves, to divide the profits; though I do not know that he received money to do so. I saw Col. Samuel Gwin, the register, file applications in the same way; but I do not know whether they were withdrawn or not.

Interrogatory eighth. Were the officers, conducting the sales on the part of the United States, apprised of the existence of the company of speculators?

Answer. I presume they could not have been ignorant on the subject; the committee on the part of the company for transacting business, at the close of the sales in each day would go into the office and pay for the land, and then transfer before Colonel Samuel Gwin the receipts of the receiver, to the settlers, and others who purchased from the company. For each transfer Gwin charged one dollar. Thacker Winter, of Madison or Hinds, informed me that Colonel Samuel Gwin applied for leave to put stock in the company, but applied about fifteen minutes too late, as the company had closed their treasury doors, until the stock then on hand should be exhausted. Witness does not recollect any other fact within the scope of the inquiries instituted by the Senate of the United States, unless it is unlawful for the officers to purchase at the sales; Colonel Sterling told me that he had bought some of the land.

Interrogatory ninth. Was Wm. M. Gwin, at the time of the sales, the marshal of the United States for this district?

Answer. I did not know him then to be the marshal; neither do I know when he was appointed.

Interrogatory tenth. Where did you reside in 1833?

Answer. At Elliot, three miles from this place.

Interrogatory eleventh. Was the notice given by the Government of the United States, such as to give planters and citizens reasonable time to provide money, so as to secure their homes?

Answer. I do not remember when the President's proclamation bears date; but the time the notice reached this part of the country, was entirely insufficient; it was at a season when money could not be raised from the crop of last year; and sufficient time was not afforded to enable the citizens to go to distant places to procure means. I do not think that there were two in five able to get money. This I think was owing to the season of the year, at which the sales came on, together with the shortness of the notice, by which, those not having credit in banks, or with able mercantile houses, were not able to raise money. Mr. Walker, in his speech, before spoken of, by way of recommending the proposals of the company to the people, said that the arrangement would enable the people and the company to get the land at $1.25 per acre, and that was all the government wanted; if such was the policy of the government, I do not think the notice too short; for a few men came prepared with large supplies of money; John B. Jones told me, that Robert Jamison, jun., and himself, were concerned, and came down to lend the people money, as there was notoriously none in the country. I rode with Jones several days to show him the country, and he told me to direct those who wanted money to come to him, and he would loan them money at fifty per cent, taking a lien on their land. Jones lives in Lownds county, Mississippi, and Jamison lives in Pickens county, Alabama.

Interrogatory twelfth. Were you present at any time during the land sales at Columbus, during the last fall? If so, state how they were conducted; whether there was any combination similar to that at Chocchuma?

Answer. I was there off and on pretty much all the time during two weeks of the sales; there was a company already formed when I arrived, on the identical principles on which that at Chocchuma had been established; with the exception that, in consideration that the settlers would give up all the numbers to the company they had taken, and not bid against the company, they should have, at cost, as much as a quarter section of land. I was present at one of the sales of the company lands, at which all persons were permitted to run land as high as they pleased. I cannot say positively that the officers of the Columbus land office were knowing to the fact of there being a combination, or company for that purpose, as I saw nothing in their conduct indicative of the fact, except Colonel Nimrod Davis, of Lownds county, Mississippi, who acted as crier at the Columbus land sales; he appeared to understand fully that there was a company, and all their arrangements, as he appeared to me, out of doors, to act in concert with their wishes, frequently while I was present.

JAMES SIMS.

No. 12.—David W. Mitchell's testimony:

David W. Mitchell was next called and sworn, who deposed as follows.

Interrogatory first. Have you entered any land at this office at any time? if so, state what were the circumstances attending such entries, and the conduct of the land officers in regard thereto?

Answer. I applied for a forty acre lot, by presenting an affidavit according to the act of Congress. The register was engaged, and said he could not attend to it then, but told me to leave my application and call again. I left my money with Mr. Ives, Colonel Gwin's clerk, also the application; in a few days I called again and Mr. Ives handed me my receipt. I discovered, immediately on reading the receipt in the office, that there was a mistake, and that the receipt did not call for the land I wished to enter. I immediately requested Cols. Gwin and Sterling to rectify the mistake; they positively refused, saying there never had been any mistakes of that nature rectified in the office, and that they had adopted it as a rule not to correct such mistakes; the error still remains uncorrected.

Interrogatory second. Have you any knowledge or information of any similar error, in regard to a forty acre lot being corrected by the land office?

Answer. I am informed by Thomas J. White, that a similar mistake was made with him, and that it was corrected on his paying the receiver five dollars; in conversation with Colonel Sterling this day, he confirmed the statement of Mr. White, and alleged as a reason for making the charge, the great trouble it would give him to alter his books.

Interrogatory third. If you know anything further, state it.

Answer. I know nothing more touching the conduct of the officers or others, of importance to be known.

Interrogatory fourth. (By the receiver, put to Mr. Mitchell.) Have you any knowledge of my having consented to the correction of an error similar to yours, subsequently to your application, except in the case of Thomas J. White?

Answer. I have not.

DAVID W. MITCHELL.

No. 13.—Thomas J. White's testimony:

Thomas J. White was next called and sworn, and who deposed as follows.

Interrogatory first. State all you know in regard to any transaction you may have had with the officers of the land office at Chocchuma, in at entering land, or correcting errors as to land entries, fees by you paid, and state fully.

Answer. Some time in the month of February last, I applied to the register of the above-mentioned land office, to enter one eighth, and forty acre piece of land. I entered them; the reason why I did not take the whole eighth, was because I had not the money; a short time afterwards I got it, and returned to the land office, for the purpose of entering the other half of the eighth that I had taken a part of. I asked Colonel Gwin if it was not possible for me to withdraw my application for the forty acre piece, and take the whole eighth, and give me a chance to take two other forty acre pieces? He said that it was; he then returned to the receiver and asked him concerning it; then Colonel Sterling at first positively refused, and said the entry had gone through his books. I observed that if he would make the alteration I would fully compensate him for his trouble, if it took five, ten or fifteen dollars; he then said he would do it for five dollars. I told him I would give it. He made the necessary alteration, and I paid him for so doing, and afterwards took two other forty acre pieces of land. I probably, in conversation with Mr. Mitchell, afterwards, might have made use of language which led said Mitchell to believe that there was an inconsistency in the conduct of the register and receiver, but if he drew any such inference, he was mistaken.

THOMAS J. WHITE.

No. 14.—Thomas G. Nixon's testimony:

Interrogatories propounded to Thomas G. Nixon, of Carrol county, Mississippi, formerly of Hayward county, Tennessee, touching the sales of public lands at Chocchuma, and before Mr. James R. Marsh, this 23d June, 1834, with his answers thereto.

Interrogatory first. Were you at the land sales at Chocchuma, during the last fall? If so, state all you know, as to the conduct of the land officers and speculators and others, so far as the same is sought to be learned by the resolutions of the Senate of the United States, just read by you.

Answer. I was at the land sales nearly the whole time; the sales were opened on Monday, and on the Wednesday following, (as I think,) it was proclaimed by R. J. Walker, of Natchez, in a speech, that a company was formed for buying land, and that an arrangement was made for the protection of settlers, and he read such portions of the articles of agreement, as he said interested the settlers. The terms proposed by Mr. Walker, were that each settler should furnish his numbers to the managers of the company, who would bid off his land, and let him have one eighth of it, including his improvement, and a quarter section, if so much was necessary to cover his improvement, at what it cost the company. Mr. Walker was concerned as a speculator and a bidder for the company, and bid off a great deal of land for it. On each day after the organization of the company, the company offered at public auction, all the lands that they had bid off during the day, in a room of the tavern, about thirty or forty paces from the land office, and at which the land officers appeared to be boarding. A Mr. Rather (said to be of north Alabama) acted a part of the time as auctioneer, both for the company and at the government sales during the day.

Interrogatory second. What were the terms of sale of the land company at their auction?

Answer. I believe the sale was for cash, and the amount at cost — the minimum.

Interrogatory third. Were you or not at the time of the public sales at Chocchuma, in October and November, 1833, and when you were bidding, required to deposit your money before your bid would be taken? By whom was this requisition made? In whose hands was the money required to be deposited, and was it so deposited?

Answer. A deposit was required of me when I was bidding by the receiver, Colonel Sterling, and I made a deposit with the receiver; a friend by me protested against the requisition. Whether the requisition was first suggested by one of the speculators or the receiver, I am not able to say.

Interrogatory fourth. How many speculating companies were there in attendance during the sales, so far as you know, or from report?

Answer. On the first day, I knew of but one, which was from Alabama, composed of Malcolm Gilchrist, Mr. Lane, Mr. Driver, Mr. Harris, Mr. Glover, and Mr. Woods, Mr. Gouldsby, and perhaps others, whose christian names I do not know. These men were together, and from their conversation I learned that they were associated in speculating. Driver came to me and told me if I did not join their company, he would buy the land on which I was settled. He proposed I should put in my money and give them my numbers, and draw of the profits in proportion that my funds bore to them. I refused, and bid defiance to them, telling them that I knew they had more money than I had, but that I intended to purchase my land or run it to a price that they could make nothing on it. I understood that there was another at the commencement of the sales, or afterwards, called the Mississippi company. Robert J. Walker, Thos. G. Ellis, Thos. Bernard, and others, were said to be of this company.

Interrogatory fifth. Was there any other transaction between you and any company of speculators at said sales other than what you have already stated?

Answer. Some of the land was run on me by a company of speculators; and Wiley Davis of Holmes county, Mississippi, told me that I better get Robert Walker to bid for one eighth of land that I wanted; which I did, and Mr. Walker bid it off at $1.62 per acre; and I subsequently sold it for $16 per acre; this was before the consolidated company was formed.

Interrogatory sixth. Was it not obvious, to all persons in attendance, that there were companies of speculators, from the open manner in which they operated?

Answer. I think it was.

Interrogatory seventh. Were you present at any time during the first two weeks of private entries? If so, state whether you saw and heard conflicting applicants bidding for land out of doors, among themselves.

Answer. In answer to an inquiry by me, made on Saturday, before the office would be open for private entry, Colonel Gwin told me that applications filed in the morning were no better than those filed in the evening; that he would look over them during the night, and the next morning let it be known who conflicted. I got here about ten o'clock on Monday, the first day; and an eighth that I wanted was entered, owing to a change of rule after my conversation with Colonel Gwin.

Interrogatory seventh. Were you present when Mr. Gold was called to make a deposit while he was bidding against Colonel George W. Martin? If so, state whether the eighth of land for which they were bidding was set up immediately and sold, on Gold not making a deposit.

Answer. I was present. Colonel Sterling demanded from Gold to make a deposit; he either refused or neglected, and the land was immediately set up and sold, and Colonel Martin bought it for six dollars per acre, and when Gold was required to make a deposit, it was crying at sixteen dollars and perhaps some cents per acre.

Interrogatory eighth. Do you, or do you not think the eighth just mentioned bid for by Gold and Colonel Martin, was very high at what Colonel Martin actually paid for it, being upwards of six dollars?

Answer. I do think it was.

T. G. NIXON.

No. 15.—David O. Shattuck's testimony:

David O. Shattuck was next called and sworn, and deposed as follows.

First interrogatory. Is there any instance in which you have known R. H. Sterling, the receiver of public money of the United States at Chocchuma, to exchange money in his hands for bills or notes of banks not current? If yea, state every particular.

Answer. I was in the office of Col. Sterling in January last, and saw him exchange, with a horse trader, from one to two thousand dollars. Sterling took Mississippi bills, and gave Tennessee bills, I think on the Union Bank. Sterling charged and received one per cent for the exchange of bills.

DAVID O. SHATTUCK.

No 16.—Colonel Robert H. Sterling's testimony:

Colonel Robert H. Sterling, the receiver of land office, was then called, and sworn and examined touching the conduct of others, and not himself, in relation to the subjects of investigation instituted by the Senate by their several resolutions which accompany my commission.

First interrogatory. Did you act as receiver of public moneys of the United States at the land sales in October and November last?

Answer. Yes. I transacted all the business in that department during the sales, with the assistance of a clerk, and since, except when I have been absent to deposit the public money in bank, and then the business was transacted on my responsibility.

Second interrogatory. On whose recommendation were the auctioneers employed to cry the public lands at said sales appointed?

Answer. There was no particular recommendation that I recollect at this moment. Rather was one of the criers, and was appointed by Col. Gwin. Some gentlemen in my presence said Rather was a good crier, and I made no objection. Mr. Griffin, of Clinton, had first applied to me to be crier, and I felt myself inclined to appoint him; however, Griffin was present, and expressed no dissatisfaction, but occasionally cried.

Third interrogatory. Was or was not Samuel Gwin, Wm. M. Gwin, or George W. Martin, interested in the company of speculators at said sales?

Answer. I do not know that Samuel Gwin was; I am of the opinion, from the appearances that came under my observation, that William M. Gwin and George W. Martin were.

Fourth interrogatory. State all you know which led your mind to this conclusion?

Answer. George W. Martin remained here but a short time after the sales commenced before he went to Columbus; common rumor said he was a subscriber to the articles of agreement of the company. I never saw the articles myself. William M. Gwin, in and out of the office, appeared to be active in all the operations that were going on among those who were speculating in lands, both at the public sales, and private entries for the first six days next after the public sales were closed, though I never heard him say that he was a member of the company.

Fifth interrogatory. Was or was not William M. Gwin employed to assist Samuel Gwin, his brother; and did he not have entire access to the papers of the register's office, both during the public sales, and the private entries for the first six days after the public sales were closed?

Answer. He frequently assisted him in calculating the area of the subdivisions of the sections during the time he remained here, which covers the time stated in the question, and frequently assisted me in my calculations, and had access to the register's office at all times.

Interrogatory sixth. Did William M. Gwin participate in the profits made by out door competition in the speculations of conflicting applicants who had withdrawn their conflicting applications at the private entries?

Answer. I never saw him receive a dollar from any of them; he seemed to be engaged in business with them, but my knowledge is limited as to details and particulars on this subject, for my own duties occupied all my time, day and night.

Interrogatory seventh. Did Mr. Plummer, Judge Black, or Colonel Bell, of Tennessee, or any other officer of the federal government, unite with the company of speculators in their proceedings at said sales, or was any general officer of this State so engaged?

Answer. Not that I know of; Mr. Bell informed me that he came here to procure land for a plantation.

Interrogatory eighth. During the sales, and the next six days succeeding, were or were not certain individuals allowed free access to the register's office, and others excluded? If yea, give the names of those so admitted.

Answer. The register's and receiver's offices were kept in the same room; all persons, without distinction, were admitted to transact their business as fast as it could be dispatched, and the press was frequently so great, that persons not having business were desired to leave the room; and it became indispensably necessary, at times, to shut and lock the door to keep them out. On my part there was no distinction made, and I do not know that the register did draw any such line.

Interrogatory ninth. Was the west half of section number thirty, in township twenty-two, range three east, and covered by a float of Willis Harkins, improved land at the time of said location?

Answer. In June, 1833, I was first on that place, and a Mr. Everett was then living on it, and had in cultivation a field of thirty or forty acres; there is evident marks on the land of ancient improvements.

Interrogatory tenth. Will you describe all that occurred between Samuel B. Marsh and others, in your office, on his application to obtain land for John Jones?

Answer. On the morning of the 22d of November, Samuel B. Marsh came into the office very early, and complained of the practice then going on in the private entries; he presented to me three applications for John Jones for $321\frac{19}{100}$ acres, and asked Col. Gwin to sign them; he refused, and said he must put them in and take their chance among the rest. Mr. Marsh remonstrated, and insisted that he should sign them, and Colonel Gwin still refused. Marsh then asked him to acknowledge that he had then applied for Jones, and that there was no other application for the same land at that time. Mr. Marsh, after a short recess, came to my desk, where I was engaged writing, with the applications, and tendered me the money for the land, and asked for my receipt; I was about to give it, but discovered that the quantity of acres was not stated, which was the register's business, and that I could not ascertain the amount to be paid. Colonel Gwin, in the mean time, had gone out, and William M. Gwin at this moment stepped in, and said, "I will answer you, Mr. Marsh," and then, at the request of Marsh, he supplied the defect in the applications. Whilst I was making out the receipts, and as they were nearly finished, Mr. Marsh, who was standing by me and reading the numbers of the land, as I filled up the receipts, observed B. C. Burnett, who was said to be a speculator, looking over his shoulder; the receipts were immediately finished, signed, and handed to Marsh, who then used some harsh epithets to Burnett for his impertinence. Colonel Gwin about that time returned and seemed excited, and some warm language passed between him and Marsh, in which William M. Gwin joined, and added he should not have had the area if he had known his object. Several persons joined in, and there was considerable altercation among them: Samuel Gwin declared he would never sign the applications, and never send the papers on, because it was a violation of the then rules. Marsh threatened him with legal proceedings to compel him, and Doctor William M. Gwin said he would purchase the land, and contest the title; the parties, however, during the day settled the difficulty, and the land dealers on that, or in a few days afterwards, dispersed.

Interrogatory eleventh. How much land was bid off and forfeited on the first and second days of the sales? State the prices bid, and the persons in whose names struck off.

Answer. I do not know with precision; I think but a small amount. Colonel Gwin is absent, and has filed away the original abstract sheets containing the information.

Interrogatory twelfth. What quantity of land was sold in the first two days and for what sum? State each day separately.

Answer. On the first day $3,180\frac{98}{100}$ acres sold for $8,111.33; and, on the second day $9,346\frac{44}{100}$ acres were sold for $19,454.38.

Thirteenth interrogatory. What quantity was sold on the two following days?

Answer. On the third day, $4,400\frac{38}{100}$ were sold for $6,795.21. On the fourth day, $8,325\frac{18}{100}$ sold for $13,001.12.

Fourteenth interrogatory. What was the number of eighths of land entered at private sale from the time of the commencement of entering until Samuel B. Marsh applied for Jones's land?

Answer. About thirty thousand acres.

Fifteenth interrogatory. How many eighths were bid off before the register by conflicting applicants, at the time of Jones's entry by Samuel B. Marsh?

Answer. About twenty.

Sixteenth interrogatory. You will state what has been the conduct and practice of receivers of public moneys, in the land offices of this State, on the subject of exchanging bank bills, so far as you may know anything calculated to answer the inquiry contained in the resolution of the Senate, which has just been shown you.

Answer. I know nothing of any established rule amongst receivers, on the exchange of money. I have, on some few occasions, exchanged money at a small premium, but have not, in any instance, given in exchange current bank paper or specie for uncurrent bills, although receivable for land; Alabama and Tennessee, for instance. The former I knew to be under par at Natchez, something like ½ to 1 per cent. I know it to be an accommodation to the Planters' Bank to exchange the Tennessee or Alabama money for that of the Agricultural Bank, or any of the banks in Louisiana, because they can more readily command the specie for it.

The following questions were put at the request of Col. W. G. Martin:

Interrogatory. Were you present on the 14th of September, when the locating agent opened his office at Elliott? If so, state what was his course generally respecting floats, or applications to locate reservations under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. What do you know respecting the application of F. E. Plummer, applying to locate a float, and what was the character of that claim? What was the character of the float laid on Belfour's bluff?

Answer. I was at Elliott on the day that the locating agent opened his office for the reception of applications to locate reservations; he proclaimed aloud, that at a certain hour he would receive applications; when the time arrived, several applications were handed in, two of which conflicted, viz: the section float granted to John Donolly, and a quarter section granted to one of Delila's children; the agent having considered the matter, he decided in favor of the former, and gave his reason to the applicants, (Gen. Runnels and Mr. Plummer,) in substance as follows: the section float was one of undoubted character; the other one comes under the second article in the supplement of the treaty, to be located under the direction of the President of the United States.

Interrogatory. Has G. W. Martin any interest in Chocchuma? If so, how did it arise, and state also if he is interested in Tullehoma?

Answer. When Chocchuma was first settled, he had the offer of a small interest, which he signified he would accede to, but afterwards declined taking it. I am creditably informed that he is interested in Tullehoma.

Interrogatory. Has, or has not, the locating agent, from your own knowledge of his official conduct, been always vigilant, and made every exertion to procure the best information he could in all cases, with a view to do justice both to the government and also to private individuals?

Answer. He has, in all cases, as far as I have any knowledge of his conduct.

Interrogatory. Did you ever hear that there were any doubts respecting the claim of James Oxberry being entitled to be registered and reserved, under the 14th article of the treaty? If so, please state the time, as near as you can.

Answer. About two months ago I heard it mentioned casually, for the first time, that it would be contested.

R. H. STERLING.

CHOCCHUMA, June 30, 1834.

I do hereby certify, that the foregoing seventy-eight pages, bound together by a ribbon, and sealed, contain the testimony of the persons therein named, taken under oath before me, by virtue of a commission to me directed, from the Committee on Public Lands, of the Senate of the United States.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this 30th June, Anno Domini 1834.

JAMES R. MARSH, Commissioner. [SEAL]

Witness:
R. H. STERLING,
SIMON HUGHES.

DEPOSITIONS FROM INDIANA—WITH REPORT.

INDIANAPOLIS, January, 1834.

Be it remembered, that upon examination of the case relating to the official conduct of James P. Drake, former receiver, and Arthur St. Clair, former register of the land offices at Indianapolis, made by T. A. Howard, Esq., United States District Attorney, and agent of the government in this behalf, the following depositions were taken, to wit: the deposition of Thomas H. Sharpe, James P. Drake, (as a witness for Mr. St. Clair,) V. C. Hanna, Arthur St. Clair, (as a witness for Mr. Drake,) B. J. Blythe, Homer Brooks, H. Parke, Basil Brown, Alfred Harrison, Calvin Fletcher, N. Bolton, John Givans, Henry Hunt, Luke Walpole, Thomas McOuat, T. M. Smith, Caleb Scudder, Isaac Kendel, David Bates, Nicholas McCarty, James Morrison, John Cain, Samuel Henderson, Noah Noble, James Blake, James Leviston, also Homer Johnson.

Depositions taken in the examination of the land offices at Indianapolis.

No. 1.—Thomas H. Sharpe's testimony:

Deposition of Thomas H. Sharpe, (first duly sworn) a witness for Messrs. Drake and St. Clair.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Did you act as clerk for me in the register's office in this place, and what time did you commence? Had you a stated salary; and was our agreement ever changed after you commenced?

Answer. I acted as clerk in your office from the 9th of June, 1831, until the removal, with the exception of about four weeks; had a stated salary of two hundred dollars per annum, which continued to be my salary the whole time that I was in the office; I was, however, permitted to take fees for making out plats for persons who called for them, but this was no part of the agreement.

Question second. Had you any knowledge of the duties of the office when you commenced; if not, who instructed you how to attend to the duties?

Answer. I had not. Mr. St. Clair instructed me how to attend to the duties.

Question third. What situation were the books and papers kept in generally; were they and the office kept neat and clean?

Answer. They were kept neat.

Question fourth. Were they kept free from dust and dirt?

Answer. The books were kept free from dust and dirt; the papers were exposed in the pigeon holes, but were brushed as occasion required; the office was kept neatly.

Question fifth. How often was I absent from home; did I attend to the office generally in person?

Answer. About two or three times in the year, and about two or three weeks at a time. You attended to the office generally in person.

Question sixth. Was there ever an instance of the applications and receipts being kept back from being entered as they were issued, for the purpose of applying scrip in payment?

Answer. I think not.

Question seventh. Do you know of my ever exchanging scrip? Did you ever pay me one cent for any you may have exchanged?

Answer. I never knew you to exchange scrip. I never paid you anything for what I had exchanged.

Question eighth. Did you exchange scrip; and if so, for whom?

Answer. I did, for Nicholas McCarty, Henry Clark, Ewing, (the Senator in Congress,) and Henry Stansbury, the three latter constituting a firm. Henry Hurst, William Hendricks, Abram Harrison, agent for Jonathan McCarty, Homer Brooks, Thomas Johnston, Colonel Pepper, and perhaps some others.

Question ninth. Do you know of any scrip which you exchanged, belonging to the original owners, or was it not the property of assigners in the hands of speculators before it came to your hands?

Answer. It was in the hands of speculators.

Question tenth. When did I receive instructions on the subject of purchasing and exchanging scrip; and what was my course when I received them?

Answer. May 29th, 1833. When you received the instructions, you in my presence inquired of Mr. Hendricks whether the instructions embraced the clerk; and his answer was, he thought not, he thought it only embraced the officers themselves.

Question eleventh. Did Mr. Gardner admit, after his examination, that the office was well kept, and that he could not find one mistake; and state also what situation the township plats were in when Mr. Gardner came here?

Answer. He stated he would examine no further, that the books were correct. I understood him in this remark to exclude the township plats. The township plats we were in the habit of marking, but there were omissions to mark. They were not relied upon in the practice of the office, except for the purpose of ascertaining the quantity of acres in case of fractions.

Question twelfth. What hours was the office kept open, and did you ever hear any complaint of the manner in which the office was kept; and was I not obliging and accommodating to the purchasers of public lands?

Answer. The usual hours were from sunrise to sunset. We attended to business at any time, (Sundays excepted.) You were obliging and accommodating, and I heard no complaint, from any quarter.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did you exchange any scrip after the instructions above referred to were received at the office?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question second. What amount and for whom?

Answer. I do not know. I continued to exchange just as before, until Mr. Gardiner came. I ceased a day or two after he came here, say about the 15th of July.

Question third. How long was Mr. Gardiner here?

Answer. He was here about two weeks.

Question fourth. Did Mr. St. Clair forbid or approve your exchanging scrip after the instructions of May last?

Answer. He did not forbid.

Question fifth. Did he know the general manner, extent, and profit of your exchanging in scrip?

Answer. He knew the general manner, but not the extent or the profit.

Question sixth. Did you never urge an increase of your salary?

Answer. I never did.

Question seventh. Did you make it a general and regular part of your business to accost purchasers who came to buy land with cash, and urge upon them the acceptance of scrip, in lieu of their money?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question eighth. Did they frequently object, fearing the scrip might not answer their purposes?

Answer. Not frequently, but occasionally.

Question ninth. What was your course when this happened?

Answer. When it happened, I read and explained the scrip. I don't recollect paying any cash, but sometimes made out a plat for the exchange. Sometimes when scrip was applied under the forty acre law, I charged no fee, as notary public, for swearing the applicant.

Question tenth. Was your general course known to Mr. St. Clair?

Answer. My general course in regard to scrip, I presume was.

Question eleventh. Did you not know that if you had not interposed with the scrip that the money would have been paid into the receiver's office?

Answer. If I had not accepted the agency for McCarty he would have exchanged by some other person.

Question twelfth. Was not your scrip agency matter of public notoriety?

Answer. Yes, sir, I suppose it was.

Question thirteenth. What amount of scrip did you exchange?

Answer. About $175,000 worth.

Question fourteenth. What part of that sum did you exchange for original holders of scrip?

Answer. The entire sum was in the hands of assignees and dealers in scrip, except $125, that was issued in Mr. McCarty's own name, as well as I remember.

Question fifteenth. Did you have any understanding with Mr. McCarty, the merchant here, that his scrip was to have preference over the scrip of all others?

Answer. Part of the time I excepted Clark, Ewing and Company, the rest of the time his was to have the preference in any exchange I might do.

Question sixteenth. Was the register's office the place of deposit of money received by you for scrip?

Answer. Generally it was: I paid the money over every night.

Question seventeenth. Did your agency in the scrip business ever prevent you from any duty of the office, either in entering in the register of certificates, in journalizing, posting, comparing, and the like?

Answer. I think not.

Question eighteenth. How much scrip did you ever exchange in one day?

Answer. Twenty to twenty-five hundred dollars' worth was the most I exchanged in a day.

Question nineteenth. Would you have continued the length of time that you served as clerk in the office at $200 per annum without the liberty of exchanging scrip?

Answer. I presume I would.

Question twentieth. Did you ever know Mr. St. Clair to be in any way concerned in exchanging or dealing in scrip?

Answer. Not except some that was assigned to him by General Duncan, of Illinois.

Question twenty-first. How much did you realize while you were clerk in the office by scrip dealing?

Answer. Between fourteen and fifteen hundred dollars.

Question twenty-second. (Upon the subject of the books.) Were you present when Gardiner examined them?

Answer. I was most of the time.

Question twenty-third. Did you find any instance in which lands had been entered upon the tract book and other records as sold, and not marked on township plats?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question twenty-fourth. Were they numerous?

Answer. There was a goodly number of them.

Question twenty-fifth. Is Mr. Gardiner's statement, now before you, upon that subject probably correct?

Answer. I cannot say.

Question twenty-sixth. Did you find any tracts marked on the township plats as having been sold, but which were not so entered on the tract books and other records? Upon this subject state the facts entire.

Answer. There were a few, very few, such cases. In all such cases I am satisfied the lands so marked on township plats were vacant, and had been marked either by mistake in taking the wrong township plat, and making a corresponding tract, or by being misled by the section lines.

Question twenty-seventh. Did you find any lands that were marked by Mr. Gardiner "lost," after searching on the records for them?

Answer. There were two such instances, but they were for lands sold in Mr. Hanna's time.

Question twenty-eighth. Were the books kept by you while you were clerk, as they were in the former register's time?

Answer. Up to the time of the examination of Gardiner, as to the manner of the entries.

Question twenty-ninth. Are the tract books much blotted and erased?

Answer. There are some erasures and some blots.

Question thirtieth. Did these blots and erasures occur in Mr. Hanna's time, or did part of them occur while Mr. St. Clair was register?

Answer. I think some of the blots occurred in Mr. St. Clair's term.

Question thirty-first. What say you as to erasures?

Answer. There is a number of erasures, but many of them are owing to the incorrect entries of the former register.

Question thirty-second. Was the small tract book in bad order when Gardiner was here?

Answer. Some of the leaves were loose, and it needed binding, and it has since been bound. It was bound immediately after he left; it is now in a good state of preservation, and was when Mr. St Clair left the office.

Question thirty-third. Are the tract books numerically arranged?

Answer. No.

Question thirty-four. State the reason why so many entries appear in the back of the book?

Answer. It was owing to the omissions of the clerk, who opened the books, not having entered every section and part of section in proper order, and leaving no faint lines for such omitted sections and parts of sections, it became necessary to carry them to the back of the book.

Question thirty-fifth. Was there any index kept to any of the books?

Answer. None.

Question thirty-sixth. Where was the office kept, when Mr. Gardiner was here as examining agent?

Answer. It was kept over the counting room of Mr. Harrison's store, in the second story.

Question thirty-seventh. Did persons have to pass through the store in going into the office?

Answer. Through the counting-room.

Question thirty-eighth. Was there a scrip agent, or dealer in that room, to catch or see purchasers of land as they came in?

Answer Yes, there was, after I ceased to exchange.

Question thirty-ninth. Was there any scrip exchanged by scrip exchangers or dealers, while Gardiner was here, after you ceased?

Answer. I think there was, I am not certain.

Question fortieth. Was the office kept under lock and key?

Answer. There was no shutter to the stairs door that led up in the office, but the outer door was locked. The stairs led from the counting-room into the office.

Question forty-first. Did you constantly compare the books while you were clerk?

Answer. Not in every instance; sometimes it was neglected. There were constant monthly comparisons of the tract books with the district map, applications, receiver's receipts, final certificates, and monthly abstracts, also with the blotters.

Question forty-second. Were the duties of the office entirely performed by you?

Answer. Not entirely. The writing in the books, with the exception of the tract books and blotter, was done by me, (except also, that other clerks were occasionally called in.) Many of the applications were made out by Mr. St. Clair, and purchasers were attended to by him.

Further examination by Mr. St. Clair:

Question first. Was not the assignment of the scrip made before it was sent here, and the powers of attorney, under which it was made, filed in the General Land Office, and the scrip certified by the Commissioner?

Answer. Generally it was.

Question second. Did I not request you to desist exchanging scrip as soon as I was informed the department intended the instructions of May last to apply to clerks?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question third. Did you tell Mr. Gardiner that forty entries had been in a day, and that you had exchanged scrip in the whole of them?

Answer. No, sir.

Question fourth. Does not Mr. McCarty exchange as much scrip now, in proportion to the sales, as he ever did?

Answer. While I remained in the office, after I had desisted dealing in scrip, I think he exchanged as much as I had exchanged before, in proportion to the sales, or as I could have exchanged.

Question fifth. Who originally opened the tract books?

Answer. I am satisfied they were opened before Mr. St. Clair took the office.

Question sixth. Was the journal kept as it was originally opened by General Hanna, my predecessor?

Answer. As to the form of the entry, it was, until July last.

Question seventh. Was there an instance of a single entry having been made that was not entered on the tract book?

Answer. Not while I was in the office.

Question eighth. Had I any instructions requiring me to make an index to all the books?

Answer. No, sir. There are some instructions as to the tract book.

Question ninth. Did I not have a building erected (detached by itself) for the register's office?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question tenth. Was not this done to prevent the exchange of scrip?

Answer. That was the reason you assigned to me.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) When did Mr. St. Clair first request you to desist from scrip exchanging?

Answer. It was when Gardiner was here; from an intimation in Gardiner's letter to him, he supposed it was a part of his (Gardiner's) instructions. The letter purported to give quotation from his instructions.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Was not your being notary public an accommodation to the purchasers of public lands; and did you charge them more than they would have paid a justice?

Answer. I so considered it, and they frequently so expressed themselves. I charged only the legal fee given to a justice of the peace.

Question second. Did you inform Mr. Gardiner that you had done all the business of the office since June, 1831?

Answer. I did not. I think it probable I told him I was the only regular clerk during all that time.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Is the statement shown to you, (marked No. 4,) a statement showing the whole order in which the tract books were opened?

Answer. I think so.

Examination of Mr. Sharpe, as to receiver's office;—Gen. Drake present:

Question first. (By Gen. Drake.) State whether you were acquainted with my manner of keeping my office, my books, papers, &c., and whether they were well kept?

Answer. I think they were.

Question second. Was I in the habit of returning the receipts and applications, from day to day, as required by the instructions from the department?

Answer. They were almost universally received on the same day the entry was made; occasionally, when an entry was made late at night, they were not returned until early next morning.

Question third. Did I ever, to your knowledge, receive money for land, and, after the purchaser had left the office, apply scrip in lieu of it?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question fourth. Was I not always accommodating to the purchasers of public lands?

Answer. I considered you very much so.

Question fifth. Were my books kept in a good book-case, secure from dust and dirt?

Answer. Yes, sir, generally.

Question sixth. Did you assure Mr. Gardiner that Mr. St. Clair had not been written to, or otherwise notified of his arrival in July last, as examining agent?

Answer. I stated to him I had not written to Mr. St. Clair.

Questions by T. A. Howard:

Question first. Did you know, at the time you stated to Gardiner you had not written to Mr. St. Clair, that any other person had written?

Answer. I do not know whether I knew at that time that Mr. St. Clair had been written to. I knew afterwards that Mrs. St. Clair had written.

Question second. Was it a common practice for the "merchants and other business men of the place," (Indianapolis,) just before the end of a quarter year, to go round, and borrow money, saying they only wanted it until the receiver returned,—or do you know of any such practices?

Answer. I do not know of any such practices.

Question third. Was it said by the people, generally, or by any portion of the community, that Gen. Drake was speculating on the public funds?

Answer. I don't know that I ever heard it stated.

Question fourth. Do you know of his dealing in scrip, or exchanging it for others; or of his being in any manner engaged in the traffic?

Answer. When I first began to deal in scrip, as scrip agent, I was not a very good judge of money, and sent the scrip and money to the receiver, by the purchaser, for the purpose of getting Gen. Drake to judge of the money for me; he did so, for two or three weeks, and received the money for me; without this, I know of no other.

And further this deponent saith not.

THOMAS H. SHARP.

Sworn to, this 21st January, 1834.

CALEB SCUDDER,
Justice of the Peace, Centre Township, Marion County, Indiana.

No. 2.—J. P. Drake's testimony:

James P. Drake, examined as a witness on behalf of Mr. St. Clair.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Do you know how often I was absent from home, during the period of my holding the register's office?

Answer. I do not know the number of times, but I suppose two or three times a year.

Question second. Do you know where I went, and the business that took me from home?

Answer. Generally to Cincinnati; once, I think, to Illinois. It was, as I understood, on the business of your father's estate.

Question third. Did I attend to the duties of the office in person?

Answer. Yes, sir, generally you were present in the office.

Question fourth. Have you had much business with those who entered land here while I was register? and if so, do you not know from them that I was accommodating and obliging to the purchasers of public lands?

Answer. I have seen and conversed with most of those who were land buyers while you were register, and they were generally well satisfied with your attention and accommodating course towards them.

Question fifth. Was not Mr. Sharpe's acting as a notary public an accommodation to land purchasers?

Answer. I think it was.

Question sixth. What situation were the office, books, and papers kept in generally?

Answer. They were kept in good order.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) In journalizing, ought not the journal to present a full statement of each entry?

Answer. I think it ought.

Question second. Does the journal kept in the register's office present that statement?

Answer. I suppose it does, in an abbreviated form.

Question third. Is not a rigid, constant, uniform comparison of land office books indispensable to insure that accuracy which is necessary for the security of purchasers, and the prevention of double sales?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Was there not a rigid and accurate comparison made at the end of each month with the books of each office?

Answer. Yes, sir; embracing the tract books, blotters, receipts, final certificates, abstracts, and applications, also with the general maps.

Question second. Has not the journal been kept by me as it was originally kept by my predecessor?

Answer. It has, up to the first of July last, since which time it has been kept by making entries on the journal at full length.

And further this deponent saith not.

Sworn to January 21, 1834.

J. P. DRAKE.

CALEB SCUDDER, Justice of the Peace, &c.

No. 3.—V. C. Hanna's testimony:

Valentine C. Hanna, examined on behalf of Mr. St. Clair.

Question first. Did you act as clerk for me while I was register of the land office at this place?

Answer. Yes, sir, I did.

Question second. When did you commence clerking for me?

Answer. In September, 1829.

Question third. Who opened the tract books?

Answer. Part was done by my father, (R. Hanna, former register,) and part by R. A. Templeton. He was clerk under my father.

Question fourth. Were they opened, and all the lands offered at public sale before I was appointed?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question fifth. Did I attend to the duties of the office in person?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question sixth. Was I obliging and accommodating to purchasers?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question seventh. How were the books, papers and office kept?

Answer. As neat as possible.

Question eighth. Were purchasers accommodated at all times?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question ninth. Do you know of my ever exchanging scrip?

Answer. No, sir.

Question tenth. Do you know of my ever receiving one cent for scrip exchanged in the office by any one?

Answer. No, sir.

Question eleventh. Was I much from home while you were my clerk?

Answer. I thought not.

Question twelfth. Could I not, if I had thought proper, have made two or three thousand dollars by exchanging scrip?

Answer. I don't know as to that matter; I know you could have made something while I clerked there; there was not then a great deal exchanged.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did you, while you were clerk, exchange scrip for any person as an agent or otherwise?

Answer. I did.

Question second. Was your practice in this respect known to Mr. St. Clair?

Answer. I believe it was.

Question third. How much did you exchange while you were clerk?

Answer. About $1,900.

Question fourth. Was it for original holders, or assignees?

Answer. Assignees.

Question fifth. How long did you clerk for Mr. St. Clair?

Answer. Probably about a year.

Question sixth. Who was clerk in the office with you?

Answer. Part of the time George Lane was.

Question seventh. Do you know of any scrip having been exchanged in the office, while you were there, by any person except yourself?

Answer. No, sir.

Question eighth. With regard to the tract books, what was their condition when Gardiner was here?

Answer. So far as I know, the small tract book needed binding; they were in as good condition as they could have been kept in, considering that they had to be turned to at every sale, and every examination for a purchaser, which would sully and deface them, and give the leaves a bad appearance.

Question ninth. Do you know of any other scrip dealing, than that already mentioned by you?

Answer. None in reference to the register's office, except I have understood of Mr. Sharpe's exchanging; but I don't know of my own knowledge.

Question tenth. Who was clerk after you?

Answer. Mr. Sharpe.

Question eleventh. What was your salary?

Answer. Ten dollars a month, and board.

Question first. (By Mr. St Clair.) For whom did you exchange scrip?

Answer. For Mr. Hendricks and Mr. McCarty; for Hendricks, $1,000; for McCarty, (the merchant of this place,) $900. It was for Governor Hendricks that I exchanged.

Question second. Was not the assignment of the scrip made before it was sent here, and the power of attorney under which it was made, filed in the General Land Office, and certified by the Commissioner?

Answer. Yes, sir, I believe it was.

Question third. Did not George Lane leave me before any scrip was issued, and you re-engaged?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question fourth. Were the township plats marked when I took possession of the office?

Answsr. No, sir.

Question first. (By General Drake.) Were you clerk awhile in my office?

Answer. About a month.

Question second. While you were there, was there not a rigid examination of all the books?

Answer. Yes, sir, so far as I knew anything of the books. I was posting, and we examined every day.

Question third. Were the books kept neat, clean, and in good order?

Answer. Yes, sir, as much so as possible.

Question fourth. Did I not attend to the current duties of the office personally?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question fifth. Did you ever hear that I was speculating on the public moneys?

Answer. No, sir.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Was there any scrip exchanged in the office while you were there?

Answer. No, sir.

Question second. Did you ever know of General Drake, or any of his clerks dealing in scrip, or in any manner exchanging it with purchasers?

Answer. No, sir.

Question third. Was it a common thing for merchants and other men in business, to go about just before a quarterly return, and borrow money, saying, they only wished it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. I never heard such talk.

Question fourth. Do you know of General Drake's borrowing large sums of money, or any amounts of money, while he was receiver?

Answer. No, sir.

Question fifth. Do you know of General Drake's filling up assignments or relinquishments on scrip, for Mr. McCarty, the merchant here?

Answer. I have been in the office and seen his clerks writing on the back of scrip; but I don't know what they were writing.

Question first. (By General Drake.) Were there monthly comparisons made while you were clerk in the offices?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question second. Were you the clerk of your father?

Answer. I was, when Mr. St. Clair took the office, and for two years before. And further this deponent saith not.

V. C. HANNA.

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No. 4.—A. St. Clair's testimony:

Mr. St. Clair examined on behalf of General Drake.

Question first. Did you make a deposit for me in the month of July last?

Answer. In the month of July last, I was called on business to Cincinnati, and when I started, you brought me a draft on the Branch Bank United States at Cincinnati or Louisville, for $5,000, assigned to you by the superintendent of the national road, and requested me to deposit it to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States. At the same time, I think, you gave me a letter, addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, requesting me to enclose one of the certificates of deposit, and mail it at Cincinnati. I made the deposit, I think, on the 10th July, and, at the time, I had no knowledge of Mr. Gardner's coming here to examine the land offices.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know of General Drake's dealing in or exchanging scrip, or speculating on public money, or borrowing money, by himself or others, just before he would go on or send to make a deposit?

Answer. I think he has exchanged some for Mr. McCarty, the merchant, and for General Duncan. That for Duncan was directed to General Drake, and received by his clerk, and probably exchanged before he got home, (he being absent when it came.) I think as to this latter scrip, there was compensation, but whether to the receiver or to his clerk, I don't know. The whole amount of Duncan's was about $4,000 worth. I am under the impression compensation was also received for exchanging McCarty's scrip. After General Drake refused to exchange for McCarty, he applied to me. As to speculating in public funds, I have no idea he ever did. I never heard that he did. I never knew of his borrowing money here; I knew of his borrowing money in company with Mr. Blythe, with whom he was in business; but this money was borrowed at Cincinnati. And further this deponent saith not.

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No. 5.—B. J. Blythe's testimony:

Mr. Blythe, a witness for General Drake.

Question first. (By General Drake.) Are we not partners in business?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question second. How did we get money to carry on our business?

Answer. We borrowed $14,000 from the Commercial Bank at Cincinnati, and General Drake borrowed $1,000 from the canal fund, on which note I was security, and that money I used for the firm; and I have done all the business, and General Drake knows no more about it than any other man.

Question third. Did I ever give you $10,000 of my own money?

Answer. No, sir; you never gave me a cent.

Question fourth. Are you in the habit of entering lands for other persons, and taking a lien at 50 per cent?

Answer. I have been in the habit of entering lands in my own name, and taking from 20 to 30 per cent; and when the money was paid, making a title to the person for whom I entered the land; but I have not done anything at that business since last spring.

Question fiifth. Am I, to your knowledge, in the constant habit of lending sums of money to various persons, returnable at every quarter, and receivable again, a short time after the commencement of a new quarter?

Answer. You were not while I was in the office; nor have I heard that you have been in the habit of doing so, since I left the office.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know anything of any dealing in scrip, in any mode whatever, either as principal or agent, by General Drake or his clerks, at any time heretofore?

Answer. Yes, sir; during the absence of General Drake, shortly after his appointment, or perhaps in the year 1830 or 1831, some scrip was received by Mr. McCarty, the merchant in this place, which he brought to the receiver's office, and requested me to exchange it, (I being then a clerk of the office,) for which he gave me one per cent. I do not know whether General Drake knew anything of the transaction or not. I know that I got the amount of one per cent for exchanging. Afterwards, General Drake was in the habit of exchanging scrip, but I cannot say what he got for making the exchanges, if anything; I don't know of anything he received as compensation.

Question second. How much scrip did you exchange?

Answer. Probably $5,000 or $6,000 worth.

Question third. How much do you suppose General Drake exchanged?

Answer. I have no idea.

Question fourth. Did you, as clerk, or as partner of General Drake, have any hand in exchanging or dealing in scrip, except as you have now stated, at any time during his continuance in office?

Answer. No, sir.

Question fifth. Was General Drake a partner of yours, in relation to the lands which you entered in your name, and for which you received an interest of from 20 to 30 per cent of the person for whom you purchased them?

Answer. Yes, sir; General Drake was a partner in the profits; the land was entered in my own name.

Question sixth. Did you, individually, or as partner, ever receive any accommodation from General Drake, by a temporary loan of public moneys, to any amount, at any time whatever?

Answer. I think not, sir. Sometimes, when I would meet a man for whom I wished to enter land, as before mentioned, I would go into the office and enter the land, and in the course of an hour bring the money. I never neglected it longer than twenty-four hours.

Question seventh. Did General Drake's situation in the receiver's office ever enable you to make advantageous entries, by being enabled to make good selections of choice pieces of land, that you would not have been enabled to make, if your partner had not been in that situation?

Answer. No sir; I never entered a piece of land (except once) unless it was when the person wishing it entered brought me the numbers.

Question eighth. Was it matter of notoriety that this partnership business existed between yourself and General Drake?

Answer. It was not generally known.

Question ninth. Was it common before General Drake would go on to make a deposit, for merchants or any other persons, to go about borrowing money to any extent, with a promise to return it when the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. Not to my knowledge; nor had I heard that it was so.

Question tenth. Did you, while you were clerk, ever know of scrip being applied in making up the records when there had been money received for lands at the receiver's office?

Answer. No, sir.

Register's office:

Question. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Have you been frequently in the register's office in this place, while I was register?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question second. Did you examine the office at my request, last November?

Answer. I looked over the books.

Question third. What situation were the books and papers in, when you made the examination?

Answer. I thought the books were in a good situation—clean, and neatly kept. I can't say anything about the papers.

Question fourth Do you know the situation of the township plats and tract books when I took possession of the office?

Answer. I believe a part of them were lying in sheets, not bound. In this I may be mistaken. The town plats were not marked.

Question fifth. Was I not generally closely confined in the office, paying attention to the duties thereof?

Answer. Generally, when at home.

Question sixth. Was the register's office, (during my term,) books, and papers kept neat and clean from dust and dirt?

Answer. I think so.

Question seventh. Was I often from home?

Answer. Not often; from three to five times a year, and from one to two weeks at a time.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) When you examined the books, in November last, did you compare them?

Answer. No. I only examined as to the manner in which the books were kept.

Question second. Do you know whether the books are correct on comparison, or not?

Answer. I do not.

And further this deponent saith not.

B. J. BLYTHE.

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No. 6.—Mr. Brooks' testimony:

Mr. Brooks examined as a witness, on behalf of Mr. St. Clair.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Were you frequently in the register's office while I was register?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question second. Was I generally there, attending to the duties of the office?

Answer. Most generally, when not absent from home.

Question third. Have you not entered a large number of tracts of land in this district during my term of service in the office?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question fourth. Have you had much business with those who have entered land here, while I was register?

Answer. I have had business with a number of persons who entered land.

Question fifth. Have you ever heard any complaint?

Answer. I never did. I have heard a general manifestation of satisfaction.

Question sixth. Was I not considered an accommodating and obliging officer?

Answer. I never heard any complaint to the contrary.

Question seventh. What situation was the office, books, and papers, kept in?

Answer. They were all, I believe, kept neat and clean.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know anything about the accuracy of the books?

Answer. No, sir, I don't know that I do.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) How often was I absent from home?

Answer. Three or four times, I suppose, from six days to three weeks each time, during 1831. I don't certainly know as to the other years. In the summer of 1832, you were in the northern army against the Indians, about four weeks.

And further deponent saith not.

HOMER BROOKS.

Sworn to, before me.

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No. 7.—H. Parke's testimony:

Mr. Parke, on behalf of General Drake.

Question first. (By General Drake.) For what length of time have you been acting as clerk in the receiver's office?

Answer. I commenced in July, 1831; and have continued, generally, ever since.

Question second. Were you present on the 13th day of July last, when Mr. Gardiner came to examine the receiver's office?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question third. What amount of military bounty land scrip had been received in payment of public land, from the 1st to the 13th of July, inclusive?

Answer. If I am not mistaken, the amount was $1,592.50.

Question fourth. Was not that amount in the office, when Gardiner came into the office?

Answer. I believe it was.

Question fifth. Can you state the amount of cash received in payment of lands, from the first to the thirteenth of July, inclusive; and the balance due from me to the United States, on the thirtieth of June last?

Answer. The amount of cash received from the first to the thirteenth, inclusive, is $1,140.63. The balance on the thirtieth June last, was $3,922.41. This appears from the books, and I believe it to be correct.

Question sixth. Can you state what amount was due from me to the United States, on the thirteenth July last?

Answer. From the books, there appears to have been $63 04. This I believe to have been the true balance.

Question seventh. What amount of cash was there in the chest at that time?

Answer. Between six and seven hundred dollars.

Question eighth. Were not my accounts with the United States kept correctly?

Answer. I believe they were.

Question ninth. Was I not in the habit of making monthly deposits?

Answer. You were, generally, I believe.

Question tenth. Did I borrow $5,000 of any person while Mr. Gardiner was here?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question eleventh. Is there an index required in the department to any book in my office?

Answer. I know of no such requisition.

Question twelfth. Did any person come to the office to borrow money, while Gardiner was there?

Answer. I don't recollect it.

Question thirteenth. "Was I in the habit of loaning sums of money of various amounts, to numerous persons, returnable temporarily every quarter, and receivable again, in a short time after the commencement of a new quarter?"

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question fourteenth. Was I in the habit of speculating on the public moneys?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question fifteenth. Were the books of the office kept in a book-case, free from dust and dirt; and did not Mr. Gardiner say that mine was the first office where they were so kept, and that they were just as they should be?

Answer. I recollect of hearing Gardiner make the statement in substance.

Question sixteenth. State what you know in relation to exchanging scrip, in the receiver's office, while I was receiver?

Answer. I think General Drake exchanged a few hundred dollars for Mr. McCarty in September, 1831, but am not certain. Afterwards, I believe in the spring or summer of 1832, I exchanged, I think, about $4,000 for General Duncan, of Illinois, for which I received, as well as I can recollect, two per cent.

Question seventeenth. Has there ever been any scrip exchanged in the office since the reception of the Secretary's letter of 14th May, 1833, relative to scrip?

Answer. I know of none.

Question eighteenth. Were we in the habit of making monthly comparisons of the receipts, certificates of purchase, entries on the maps and tract books, the monthly abstracts of sales, and the blotter, with the register?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did Mr. McCarty ever deposit any scrip in the office to be filled up, either by assignment or relinquishment, as he might be able to find purchasers?

Answer. I don't recollect of any, except what I have before mentioned.

Question second. Did he send scrip by purchasers assigned in blank, to be filled up by the receiver at the office, so as to answer the purposes of such purchasers?

Answer. The purchasers bought scrip in that way.

Question third. When was that practice commenced?

Answer. It commenced when General Drake ceased to make exchanges in 1831.

Question fourth. Did Mr. Sharpe ever send any in that way?

Answer. Yes, sir, I think he did.

Question fifth. Do you know of any other facilities, of any description, afforded by General Drake to scrip dealers, either by himself or clerks, than what you have mentioned?

Answer. I think not.

Question sixth. How much scrip was received in the office in the time that Gardiner was examining it, say up to the 25th July last, from the 13th?

Answer. Nearly fifteen hundred dollars.

Question seventh. How much cash in that time?

Answer. About two thousand dollars.

Question eighth. How many sales were made from the 1st of January, 1833, to the 1st of July, same year?

Answer. Twelve hundred and sixty, I believe.

Question ninth. How many cash sales were made for sums over $50?

Answer. About one hundred and thirty sales.

Question tenth. Do you know of any other scrip agent than those already mentioned, having had facilities afforded him at either office?

Answer. No, sir.

By Mr. St. Clair, as to register's office:

Question first. To whom did General Duncan, of Illinois, send his scrip?

Answer. He sent it to General Drake.

Question second. To whom was it assigned?

Answer. The first and second lots were assigned to Mr. St. Clair.

Question third. How much of it was assigned to me?

Answer. I don't recollect; I suppose about $1,150 worth.

Question fourth. What did I say and do when you presented the scrip to me to assign?

Answer. I do not recollect what you said the first time, but the second time you refused—you at length assigned it. You stated that it was assigned to you without your knowledge or consent. You requested me to inform General Duncan not to forward any more to you.

Question fifth. Who exchanged it?

Answer. I did.

Question sixth. Did you or General Drake ever pay me anything for assigning it?

Answer. I did not, nor do I believe he did.

Question seventh. Was the assignment to me certified by the Commissioner of the General Land Office?

Answer. I do not recollect to have seen the assignment, but I think it was.

Question eighth. In what situation were the books and papers kept in the register's office; were they kept neat and clean?

Answer. I think they were.

Question ninth. Did you ever hear any complaint of the manner in which the business was done?

Answer. I don't recollect of any.

Question tenth. Did I not pay strict attention to the duties of the office?

Answer. I believe you did.

And further saith not.

H. PARKE.

Sworn to, before me.

CALEB SCUDDER, Justice of the Peace, &c.

No. 8.—Mr. Brown's testimony:

Mr. Brown examined on behalf of Mr. St. Clair.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Did Mr. Gardiner put up at your tavern when he was here in July last, examining the land offices?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question second. Did you have any conversation with him about the register's office?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question third. What did he say about the manner in which it had been kept, and the exchange of scrip?

Answer. He said the office had been well kept; that there were some objections to the township plats, but it was owing to the course of the former register, Mr. Hanna; that his report could not be otherwise than favorable, in justice to the land officers. He said he would make out his report before he left. He said the exchange of scrip was carried on by Mr. Sharpe, and that Mr. St. Clair was not connected with Sharpe. He said, also, that he was authorized to take depositions, but that he was satisfied as to the manner of exchanging scrip; that Mr. St. Clair was anxious to take depositions, but he did not think it necessary. This conversation was after the examination.

Question fifth. Did not a large portion of the purchasers of public lands put up with you since you have been keeping public house in this place?

Answer. A great many have.

Question sixth. Have you ever heard any complaint against me, in any way, from any of them?

Answer. I never have.

Question seventh. Was I much absent from home?

Answer. I did not think a great deal; twice or three times a year; and two or three weeks at a time.

Question eighth. When at home, did I not attend strictly to the duties of the office?

Answer. I never heard any person complain of your inattention, and I never was in the office when you were not there. When purchasers came in I frequently went with them, or sent with them some person, and they were always attended to at all times.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did Mr. Gardiner make these statements to you voluntarily, in a conversation sought by himself?

Answer. Yes, sir; we became very well acquainted, and he spoke very freely to me on the subject.

Question second. Did you see much inclination manifested by persons here, to seek interviews and conversations with Mr. Gardiner?

Answer. A good many gentlemen called on Mr. Gardiner, and he was invited to their houses, but I supposed it to be out of respect to him.

Question third. Do you know whether Messrs. Drake and St. Clair were apprised, from time to time, of his statements with regard to their official conduct?

Answer. I think they and myself talked on that subject.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Did not Mr. Gardiner take pains to induce General Drake and myself, and our friends, to believe that his report would be very favorable?

Answer. That was his expression to me, that it would be very favorable; that he could not do otherwise than report favorably.

Question second. Did Mr. Gardiner say whether the books in the register's office were brought up?

Answer. He said that when he first went into the office the books were a week or ten days behind, but before he left the office they were up.

Receiver's office:

Question first. (By Gen. Drake.) State what he said in relation to the receiver and his office.

Answer. I sent a note at his request up to Gen. Drake, on the 13th July. A few days after he came in and said he had finished his examination of the receiver's office, and that the office was very well kept, and did credit to Gen. Drake; that Gen. Drake told him that he had sent five thousand dollars to Cincinnati, and that if this were so, he had all the money up to a cent; that he was acquainted with land office business, and it was owing to this that the appointment was sent to him without his request; that he had accepted it to accommodate an old friend. He was perhaps a little intoxicated when he talked this way.

Question second. Was it "a common practice with merchants and other business men of the place, to go about just before the end of a quarter year, and industriously gather up all the money they 'could' obtain," saying "they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?"

Answer. I never heard that suggestion by anybody.

Question third. Did you ever hear it reported that I was speculating on the public money?

Answer. I never did before his examination; never in any way only from the report made by him.

Question fourth. Do you know that I have ever used a dollar of the public money in keeping up the tavern kept by you?

Answer. I do not. I have heard you refuse to loan money, saying you had none except the public money.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know, from any quarter, that there were reports made to Gardiner, by persons here, respecting Gen. Drake's dealing and speculating in the public money or in scrip?

Answer. I do not.

Question second. Have you no reasons to believe that such statements were made to him?

Answer. No other only his own report.

Question third. Do you know of Gen. Drake's loaning public money at any time, or of borrowing money in order to make his deposits?

Answer. I do not know either.

Question fourth. Do you know of his dealing in scrip, or of exchanging it for others?

Answer. Nothing, only what he told me himself: that he exchanged a few hundred dollars for McCarty, (the merchant here.) I know of his refusing a Mr. Clarke, from Zanesville, about a year ago last November.

And further saith not.

BASIL BROWN.

Sworn to, before me.

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No. 9.—Alfred Harrison on behalf of register:

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Were you frequently in the register's office while I was register; and if so, how were the books and papers kept?

Answer. Yes, sir. The books and papers I never examined until after the removal. I merely looked at the face; and, as far as I examined them, they appeared to be neatly kept. I believe the books were kept in their places in the book-case, only when in use. The papers appeared to be free from dust and dirt.

Question second. Did I attend to the duties of the office in person?

Answer. You had a clerk who attended to the business of making the entries in the books, and your personal attention you gave so far as to be present attending to purchasers. Very seldom, when in town, out of the office long at a time.

Question third. Do you know of my exchanging scrip?

Answer. I don't know that you ever did. I once advised you to deal in scrip, and you said you would have nothing to do with it.

Question fourth. Could I not, if I had been so disposed, have made two or three thousand dollars in exchanging scrip?

Answer. Yes, sir; I think you might have made two thousand at least.

Question fifth. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Gardiner on the subject of scrip?

Answer. Mr. Gardiner seemed disinclined to talk to me on the subject, but said he was satisfied Mr. St. Clair had nothing to do with the scrip himself, but that he had advised him to prohibit the dealing in scrip in his office; which he said he had done. I gave my own impression, and not Gardiner's words.

Question sixth. Had I not a building erected separate and detached from other rooms, for an office, for the purpose of preventing "scrip exchangers" from exchanging with purchasers?

Answer. The office you have had built has no connection with any other rooms; it was built, as I understood you, for the purpose of avoiding scrip exchanges.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did the office remain in your building until Mr. St. Clair was removed?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Question second. Did you or any other person act as a scrip agent or dealer in the counting room, immediately below the office?

Answer. I did not, but Mr. McCarty occupied the counting room for the purpose of exchanging. When he would be absent, he would ask me to attend, but I do not recollect making a single exchange. I never acted as scrip agent until Mr. Gardner left here.

Question third. Is it the practice of scrip dealers, or has it been, to make assignments in blank, and send such assignments to the office to be filled up by the land officers, or their clerks?

Answer. I never made any exchange in that way; I was a stranger to the practice when I commenced exchanging.

Receiver's office:

Question first. (By General Drake.) Were you a merchant in this place all the time that I was receiver?

Answer. Yes, sir, until August last.

Question second. Was it "the common practice of merchants and other business men, to go about just before the end of a quarter year, and industriously borrow money, saying they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?"

Answer. I believe it was not. It was not so with me. I never heard it rumored in town.

Question third. Did you ever hear that I was speculating in the public money?

Answer. I never heard it before Gardiner's report, to my knowledge.

Question fourth. Did you ever hear of my loaning public money?

Answer. No, except to the road superintendents, in anticipation of their drafts; I have gone myself to General Drake and got money, say a few hundred dollars, for a short time, just as I would to a neighbor merchant.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) In the loans made to you, did General Drake ever call on you, giving as his reason, that he wished to make his deposits?

Answer. No, sir.

Question second. Do you know of any agreement or understanding between General Drake and McCarty, the merchant, respecting scrip?

Answer. No, sir, I do not.

Question third. Did various persons, to your knowledge, seek interviews with Mr. Gardiner, while he was here, for the purpose of conversing with him, respecting his examination?

Answer. None that I know, except myself. I went to him merely to give him information respecting the part Mr. St. Clair had acted in regard to scrip. I proposed to make a statement on oath. (This was done at the instance of Mr. St. Clair.) He declined taking my statement, appearing to be satisfied.

And further saith not.

ALFRED HARRISON.

Sworn to before me,

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No 10.—Mr. Fletcher's testimony:

Register's office.

Question first. (By Mr. St Clair.) Have you been in the register's office while I was register, doing business as a purchaser or otherwise?

Answer. Yes, sir; I had business frequently at the office. There was an attention paid by Mr. St. Clair, that I thought rather superior to what had been by his predecessor.

Question second. Did you examine the office at my request, last November; and if so, what was its situation?

Answer. I made a slight examination, and gave a certificate, which was predicated mostly on the general conduct of the register and his clerk as officers. The books appeared neat and clean, and the papers preserved from dust and dirt.

Question third. Did I pay prompt attention to the duties of the office?

Answer. In my intercourse with the office, Mr. St. Clair was generally present, and was prompt and attentive to business.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did you compare the books in your examination?

Answer. No, sir; my statements are made from my general intercourse with the office, and from the general appearance of the books. I found my own matters always accurately attended to.

Question second. Did you know from any quarter, that various persons sought interviews with Mr. Gardiner while he was there, in order to draw him into conversation respecting his examination?

Answer. I believe I can answer in the negative, that I don't know of any person seeking interviews for that purpose.

Receiver's office.

Question first. (By General Drake.) Did you examine my office?

Answer. Yes, sir. I found the books neat, and also always found business promptly attended to, and entries accurately made.

Question second. Was it common for merchants and other business men to go about borrowing money, just before a quarterly deposit, saying they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. It was not common. I remember one or two instances in which Mr. Gaines applied for money, saying General Drake was going away, and he only wanted it a week or two, until after he got back.

Question third. Have you ever heard it charged against me, that I speculated in the funds of my office?

Answer. No, sir.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know anything respecting loans made by General Drake to merchants?

Answer. I have no knowledge except as above stated.

Question second. Do you know anything respecting General Drake, or any of his clerks dealing in or exchanging scrip?

Answer. No, sir.

Question third. Do you know of any speculation by General Drake, by entering lands for others in which his private interest would in any manner conflict with his official duty?

Answer. I do not. I wish to state, in conclusion, that I know of persons who were busy in giving Gardiner information, but I am not willing to give names; whether he sought them or they him I know not.

And further saith not.

CALVIN FLETCHER.

Sworn before me,

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No. 11.—Mr. Bolton's testimony:

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Did you have any conversation with Mr. Gardiner while he was here examining the land offices in July, about the register's office; and if so, what did he say about the manner in which it had been kept?

Answer. I had frequent conversation with him at my printing office, and he spoke well of the manner in which the business had been conducted; and the impression left on my mind was, that it was satisfactory to him. He spoke of improvements by Mr. St. Clair in the office.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did you compare the books of Mr. St. Clair's office?

Answer. Yes, sir. My examination was general, not particular. I did not compare the entries; I only looked to amounts, the good appearance and the like. The books and papers were neatly kept, and were free from dust and dirt.

Question second. Do you know of any persons going to Mr. Gardiner, for the purpose of drawing him into conversation respecting his examination, and the report he had to make to the government?

Answer. No, sir.

Question third. Do you know anything about the scrip dealing that has been carried on here, that connects itself with either of the land offices?

Answer. I know nothing of my own knowledge.

Receiver's office.

Question first. (By General Drake.) Was it common for merchants, and others in business, to go about just before the close of a quarter year borrowing money, saying they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. I don't recollect of having heard any such expression.

Question second. What was the condition of my books just before I left the office?

Answer. On general examination they corresponded—had been very neatly kept.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know of General Drake's loaning public money, or speculating in it, or was there any general opinion prevailing that he was so engaged?

Answer. I never heard any such opinion.

And further saith not.

N. BOLTON.

Sworn to before me,

CALEB SCUDDER, Justice of the Peace.

No. 12.—John Givan's testimony.

Question first. (By General Drake) Did you ever borrow any money of me? And if so, how much, and for what period?

Answer. I don't recollect of borrowing any.

Question second. Was it the practice of the merchants and others here to borrow money just before a quarter year expired, saying that they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. I never heard anything of the kind spoken of.

Question third. Was it the common opinion here that I speculated on the funds of my office?

Answer. No.

Question fourth. Are you a merchant here?

Answer. I am, and have been about twelve years.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did you ever loan General Drake money to aid him in making his deposits?

Answer. No, sir. I have remitted money by him to Cincinnati to pay debts of my own, enclosed in a letter.

Question second. Do you know anything of his dealing in or exchanging land scrip?

Answer. Not that I recollect.

Question third. Do you know of any facilities afforded by him to dealers or exchangers of land scrip?

Answer. I don't know of any.

And further saith not.

JOHN GIVAN.

Sworn to before me,

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

No. 13.—Henry Hurst's testimony:

H. Hurst called and examined by T. A. Howard.

Answer. I had four hundred dollars worth of scrip, and applied to Mr. St. Clair to exchange it; he said he could not, but referred me to Mr. Sharpe. I did not apply immediately, but applied to General Drake, who said he could not exchange it; but referred me to Mr. McCarty, who had engrossed the other office. I applied to Mr. McCarty, and he said it could be done in three or four days. I went to Sharpe, who seemed at first to decline, until I told him I had seen McCarty. He took the scrip, and in a few days I applied at the register's office, and got the money; this was in June last, I think. This is all that I know respecting scrip; I am no dealer in it; and only obtained the exchange of the above amount as stated. Mr. St. Clair said, at the time I applied to him, that he had never exchanged any, and never would. Mr. Sharpe deducted one and a half per cent when I called for my money. I had no reason to believe that Mr. St. Clair had any part of the compensation.

Question. Do you know whether it was generally reported here that General Drake was engaged in speculating in the public funds?

Answer. I don't know that it was. I have heard it talked about, but I don't know that it was general.

Question. Do you know of his borrowing money to make deposits, or of loaning public money?

Answer. No, sir.

First question. (By Mr. St. Clair, for General Drake.) Have you any reason to believe that General Drake ever did speculate in any way in the public funds?

Answer. The only reason I have to believe it, is, that it was said Blythe and Drake were in partnership; and last summer General Drake showed me his books, which showed, at the end of several quarters, a balance to a large amount.

Question second. Do you know of General Drake making any advances to Blythe or any other person?

Answer. I do not; as to myself, I know nothing about it.

And further saith not.

Question first. (By Gen. Drake.) Do you know that while I was receiver of public moneys, that it was a custom for merchants and other persons in business, to go about borrowing money, at the close of each quarter year, saying that they would return it when the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. I never heard of such a thing.

Question second. Do you know that I ever speculated in the public funds?

Answer. I never heard so. I am a merchant.

No. 20.—Nicholas McCarty's testimony:

Mr. McCarty, merchant, called by Mr. Drake and Mr. St. Clair.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Do you know of my ever exchanging scrip?

Answer. I do not know of your having any connection with it.

Question second. Did you not request me to act as your agent, and did I not refuse?

Answer. You said you could have nothing to do with it. I asked you if I might be permitted to remain in the room, by myself or agent? You said you would not pretend to turn any one out of the room. I then asked if I might engage Clairborne Hanna? You said you had no objections to it; you did not expect to control him. The time was about 1831, early in the year. You said the scrip was consignable, consequently receivable, according to the forms prescribed; and you did not feel disposed to interfere. I don't think you had any knowledge of the compensation that I was to give Mr. Hanna, or Mr. Sharpe, who also exchanged for me. I don't think you had any part of the compensation.

Question third. Was the scrip you had here the property of original holders, or of assignees, for the purpose of speculation?

Answer. The scrip I received was generally from Philo Hale, Mr. Ewing, and Mr. Buckingham; (Mr. Ewing was the Senator in Congress.) There was a small part of the scrip I purchased myself. They were all assignees, and held it for speculation.

Question fourth. What did Mr. Gardiner say to you about the manner I had kept the office?

Answer. He said the office appeared to be kept in good order; that he had had some difficulty with Mr. St. Clair's brother-in-law, but it should not affect him. He suggested to me that I had better speak to Mr. St. Clair to get a statement from Mr. Sharpe relative to the scrip he had exchanged. Mr. Gardiner's conversation left the impression on my mind that he was favorably inclined with regard to Mr. St. Clair, and the manner in which he had kept his office.

Question fifth. Were not the assignments of scrip made before it was sent here, and the power of attorney, under which it was assigned, certified by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to be on file in his office?

Answer. The greater portion of it was so certified by Mr. Hayward.

Question sixth. Did I not prohibit the exchange of scrip in the office as soon as I understood, from Gardiner, that the instructions applied to clerks?

Answer. Immediately you did.

Question seventh. Could I not, if I had been so disposed, have made 2,000 or 3,000 dollars by exchanging acrip?

Answer. I should think so.

Question eighth. Do you know of any instance when I ever received a single cent for exchange of scrip?

Answer. No, sir.

Question ninth. Did I keep my office neat, and my books and papers clean from dust and dirt?

Answer. So far as I saw from time to time.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did you have an agreement with Mr. Sharpe, that he was to give you the preference in scrip exchanging?

Answer. Yes, sir. He was not to undertake, to my exclusion, to exchange for others.

Receiver's office:

Question first. (By Gen. Drake.) State what you know in regard to my dealing in scrip?

Answer. I made a bargain with you to present my scrip to purchasers, for a small per cent, and after a short time you declined it, giving as a reason, as well as I remember, that you thought it might lead to some wrong suspicions by the department, for you to have any hand in exchanging, or something to that amount. It was shortly after the first scrip came on. I bought some scrip of you once, perhaps one or two thousand dollars. You sold it as the attorney for Mr. Morgan.

Question second. Was it the custom of merchants and others here to go about, just before a quarter year expired, borrowing money, saying they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. I don't know that I ever heard of such a thing.

Question third. Do you know of my speculating on the public money?

Answer. I do not.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Has Gen. Drake performed any services for you as scrip agent, either by writing relinquishments, assignments, or otherwise, in the exchange of scrip since May last?

Answer. About the time Gardiner was here, Gen. Drake, at my request, and to save my coming to the office in person, or sending a clerk, wrote the relinquishments for my accommodation; but there was no compensation.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Had you any agent stationed in Conner's and Harrison's store, or counting room, during Gardiner's stay here, or did you inform him so?

Answer. I did not. I attended there myself.

Question second. Have you exchanged as much since Mr. Sharpe ceased, as before, in the same time?

Answer. No, I have not. Mr. Harrison, my agent, when he goes to his meals often misses a purchaser, the office being constantly kept open; while I attended myself I did not miss a solitary entry, to which scrip would apply.

Question first. (By Mr. Howard.) What did you state to Gardiner, with regard to watching for purchasers?

Answer. I stated that I would be obliged to watch every purchaser that came in; and may have said that I would stay at the counting room until I got under way, and then get some one to attend for me.

Question second. Have you had very extensive money transactions with Gen. Drake, while he was receiver.

Answer. I have considerable. Sometimes he made advances to me, and sometimes I made advances to him, perhaps from $20,000 to $50,000 in all. Sometimes Gen. Drake would state to me that the advances he asked of me were on account of specie he had on hand, and desired the paper to deposit; at other times, it was in consideration of drafts which he expected to receive, or had received of Johnson and Milroy, as superintendents of the national road. These advances rarely amounted to a very large sum at one time; varying from $500 to $2,000; possibly, sometimes as high as three thousand. Gen. Drake proposed to me to give me the silver, and I refused to receive it, preferring to wait and receive the drafts, or paper.

And further saith not.

CALEB SCUDDER, Justice of the Peace.

No. 21.—James Morrison's testimony:

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Have you been frequently in the register's office, while I was acting as register?

Answer. I have.

Question second. (By same.) Did you examine the office, at my request, last November?

Answer. I did.

Question third. In what situation were the books and papers of the office at that time?

Answer. The examination was not thorough; that is, I only looked into them generally; but the examination was such as to satisfy me that I have not been mistaken in my previous opinion, that the books and papers were neatly kept and preserved with care.

Question fourth. What do you know of my personal attention to the duties of the office?

Answer. I always considered that you gave strict personal attention to the duties of your office; and presume that no one can, in truth, say otherwise. I had good opportunity for judging, as the duties of my own office kept me very closely in town; and during the time of your service as register, our relations being intimate, we were much together. I can, therefore, say, with great confidence, that, unless when you were occasionally absent from home, your personal attention might be said to be constant.

Question fifth. (By same.) State whether I was much from home?

Answer. I think your absence could not amount, altogether, to more than from five to eight weeks during the year, and generally not more than ten days, or two weeks, at a time.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) In your examination of the books, did you compare them?

Answer. Not critically.

Question second. (By same.) Did you compare the town plats with the tract books?

Answer. I did not.

Question third. (By same.) Did you compare the registry of certificates with the journal?

Answer. I did not. I did not consider my examination as amounting to a comparison of any book or paper with another. It was a mere cursory examination.

Receiver's office:

Question first. (By Gen. Drake.) Was it a custom of the merchants, or men of business, of this place, to go round, and industriously borrow money, just before I went on to make my quarterly deposits, saying, they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. I never knew or heard of any such custom; nor of one solitary instance of the kind.

Question second. (By same.) Have you known or understood that I was speculating on the public money?

Answer. I have no knowledge of the matter; nor have I any information from any one who pretended to know. You, as other men in office, supposed to have the means, may have been accused of so doing, but I cannot refer to any instance in which you were ever specially accused of the unlawful or improper application of public money. I have heard it suggested, that you might have a hand, in some way, in a speculation of revolutionary scrip; but, further, I have heard of no charge of speculation. The most and nearly all that I have ever heard of the scrip speculation, has been since it was said you were removed from office, and in reference to Colonel Gardiner's report.

And further saith not.

JAMES MORRISON.

No. 22.—John Cain's testimony:

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Did you have any conversation with James B. Gardiner, Esq., when he was examining the land office?

Answer. Yes, sir, I had.

Question second. State distinctly what it was that passed between you.

Answer. Mr. Gardiner, soon after he came here, came to the post office, and, after inquiring for letters, made known the cause of his visit to Indianapolis. Next day a conversation passed at Mr. Brown's. He asked about scrip; I told him I knew nothing about it, except what common report said. He then asked about the attention of Gen. Drake and St. Clair to their offices; I replied that I was not as well acquainted with Drake's office as with Mr. St. Clair's: that St. Clair manifested a disposition to give satisfaction to all persons concerned, and was one of the most attentive officers I knew.

Question third. Did you give Mr. Gardiner any information respecting scrip?

Answer. No, sir, none at all.

Question fourth. Did you speak to him of any money that you or any person else had seen passing between General Drake's office and McCarty's store?

Answer. No, sir; Mr. Gardner told me after he had examined General Drake's office, or while he was examining it, that he had seen or was told that there was money passing between the receiver's office and McCarty's store.

Question fifth. What common report did you refer to when you told Gardiner that you knew nothing except what common report said?

Answer. I have heard the matter often spoken of that there was scrip exchanged in the two offices.

Question sixth. Has it been common here for persons in business to borrow money, saying they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?

Answer. It is a matter I never heard of until this investigation.

Question seventh. Is it a commonly received opinion, or has it been, that General Drake speculated in the public funds?

Answer. I don't know that it is; I have frequently heard it spoken of, but whether the speculations referred to were on public money or other funds I know not. As to the scrip I do not know that General Drake had anything to do with it, nor did I ever hear any such thing of Mr. St. Clair.

And further saith not.

No. 23.—Samuel Henderson's testimony:

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) During the time that General Drake kept the receiver's office in this place, was it "publicly talked of," or generally believed, that General Drake was in the habit of speculating on the public funds?

Answer. It was talked of; but whether generally, I am not able to say. I have heard such talk.

Question second. Was it common for persons in business here to borrow money, saying they only wanted it for a few days, or a short time, until the receiver returned from Cincinnati, where he would go on to make his deposits?

Answer. Not to my knowledge. I have no recollection of hearing any such conversation.

Question third. During Mr. Gardiner's stay here, did you hear from any quarter that bags of silver were seen passing between the receiver's office and McCarty's store, or do you know such to have been the fact at any time?

Answer. I don't think I heard any such thing.

Question fourth. Have you any knowledge relative to General Drake or his clerks dealing in scrip, or exchanging it at any time?

Answer. I have not.

Question fifth. Was it generally believed here that they, or any of them, were engaged in scrip dealing in any form?

Answer. Such was the general rumor amongst those with whom I conversed. When Gardiner was here he came to me and asked me upon the subjects indicated in your questions; I told him, of my own knowledge, I knew nothing; his reply was, "It comes to me from every quarter."

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair, on behalf of General Drake.) Do you know of a single instance of speculation in the public funds by General Drake?

Answer. No, sir.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know of any speculation in public funds, any dealing in scrip, or any other act of official misconduct by General Drake, than what is disclosed or referred to in your foregoing answers?

Answer. No, sir.

Register's office.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know what portion of Mr. St. Clair's time he was absent from Indianapolis while he was register?

Answer. He was frequently away; I cannot say anything like the precise time.

Question second. Was it notorious that scrip was exchanged by Mr. Sharpe at the register's office?

Answer. I think so.

Question first. (By Mr. St. Clair.) Were you intimate with me, or did you visit the register's office frequently, so that you could judge whether I was at home or not?

Answer. I was not frequently at the office, or at your house; living so near I could consequently know whether you were frequently absent from town.

Question second. Was I, when at home, often in the street, or did I keep myself very close?

Answer. I saw you very frequently in the street. I think you did not keep yourself very close. And further saith not.

No. 24—Gov. Noble's testimony:

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) During the time that General Drake kept the receiver's office here, was it common for merchants, and other men in business, to go about borrowing money, about the time he would go on to make his deposits, saying that they only wanted it until he should return from Cincinnati, or do you know of any instance of the kind?

Answer. I know of none.

Question second. Was it publicly talked of here, that he was engaged in speculations on the public money; or that he or his clerks, were in the habit of dealing in or exchanging scrip?

Answer. As regards speculations on the public funds, such was public rumor; but I have no knowledge of its accuracy myself. I have heard it remarked, that exchanges of scrip were made by those in the service of the general; this was the first or second year of his service.

Question third. Do you know of any other general rumor here respecting any other official misconduct, either of Drake or his clerks?

Answer. I heard, as public rumor, that General Drake assisted with the funds of this office, Dr. Canby, in making his deposits; and I have had persons pointed out to me as being here on that business, but this rumor is not confirmed by any fact within my own knowledge.

Question fourth. Can you name the persons who were so pointed out to you?

Answer. I cannot, certainly, but think a Mr. Wilson, of Crawfordville, was one; I also heard that General Johnson, the road superintendent, had received $4,000 from General Drake for the benefit of Canby.

Register's office.

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) Do you know of Mr. St. Clair's dealing in scrip, or suffering it at his office, or of his absence from Indianapolis while he was register; or of his neglecting in any manner his duty as a public officer?

Answer. I have not seen Mr. St. Clair engaged in any scrip transactions, but have seen exchanges making by his clerk; I have known him occasionally to be absent to the eastern part of the State and to Ohio, during his service; but I know of no neglect of the duties of his office.

Mr. Gardiner having referred to me, I am perhaps placed in the light of an informant, secretly, and wish to explain by stating, that I was invited to the room of Mr. Gardiner, when he named the object of his visit, and the rumors that filled the country, charging the land officers here with speculations in scrip, and other improprieties. He referred to his instructions, and spoke of his willingness to do his duty, but said he was a stranger, and knew not to whom to apply, as regarded the allegations that both the officers were dealing in scrip, and that the receiver was concerned in a broker's office, &c.; I said to Mr. Gardiner that I had heard these reports, but knew nothing of their truth; that I had no doubt the receiver would admit them, if true; that I entertained for the receiver the most friendly feelings, which, with the fact of my removal from the same office on political considerations, would forbid my communicating information were I in possession of any. And further saith not.

No. 25.—James Blake's testimony:

Question first. (By General Drake.) Did I borrow $5,000 while Mr. Gardiner was here, to your knowledge?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question second. Was it the practice of merchants, and other men in business, just before I would go on to make my deposits, to go about to borrow money, saying, "they only wanted it until the receiver returned from Cincinnati?"

Answer. I do not know of any such thing to my own knowledge. While Gardiner was here, I had a conversation with him, and he asked me if General Drake was not concerned in the loan office. I told him I understood he was, and gave him my reasons for believing it, that Mr. McCarty had told me he was endorser for General Drake and Blythe at Cincinnati, for $5,000.

Question third. Do you know in any instance of my speculating on the public money?

Answer. I do not.

Question first. (T. A. Howard.) Do you know of General Drake's dealing in scrip, or suffering his clerks to do so, by exchanging it or otherwise?

Answer. I do not know it.

Question second. Was it generally talked of here, that General Drake speculated in the funds of his office?

Answer. I have heard such things, but from, or by whom, I do not recollect.

Question third. Do you know of any other malconduct of General Drake, as a public officer?

Answer. I do not, of myself.

Question fourth. Do you know of General Drake's making loans of public money? or have you heard it commonly spoken of that he was in the habit of making loans, in any manner, of such funds?

Answer. I do not know it. I have heard it spoken of, but by whom I would not pretend to say.

No. 26.—Deposition of James Leviston:

Question first. (By T. A. Howard.) State if you know anything respecting any scrip transactions, in which either General Drake or Mr. St. Clair, or any of their clerks had any agency, and anything connected therewith?

Answer. I know of no scrip transactions in which either General Drake or Mr. St. Clair was, to my knowledge, concerned. During the session of the legislature last winter, my brother at Jeffersonville sent me two thousand dollars in scrip to get cashed for him; on making inquiry where I could probably succeed in getting the scrip cashed, I was directed to call on Mr. Sharpe at the register's office for that purpose; I did so, and was informed by Mr. Sharpe that Mr. Nicholas McCarty had deposited with him a larger amount of scrip than could be cashed by him before the close of the session, and that therefore he could not accommodate me without Mr. McCarty's permission. I called on Mr. McCarty, but failed in getting that permission.

Sworn to before me,

CALEB SCUDDER, J. P.

COLUMBUS, November 28, 1834.

DEAR SIR: I have completed, as far as practicable, the objects of my appointment as commissioner for the examination of the land office at this place; and although my success has not been so complete as I could have desired, owing to facts which I have elsewhere represented to the committee, yet I have succeeded in clearly proving some acts, which I consider perhaps as outrageous as any that have been committed at any office. You will not fail to see at once the effect of such an arrangement as was made by the receiver at this place with G. W. Martin. The effect would be to enable any one man thus favored, to monopolize the entire sales, bid off the lands at whatever price he might put down competition; of course the people, attending the public sales, will have dispersed in a few days after the sales have closed; they have no idea but all things, in regard to the transaction, are fair. A short time after the sales, the person thus purchasing by agreement, forfeits the land; the whole affair is canceled, the receipts destroyed, and the land becomes subject to entry in the usual manner, and this being known only to a few privileged individuals, of course, they can enter the land at the minimum price. This, sir, has been the course pursued here, which is, in every particular, proved by the evidence of the receiver himself, and more particularly by the evidence of Adolphus G. Wier, who was, as will appear from his deposition, an acting clerk in the receiver's office at the time. The facts of such an agreement being made, of Martin's purchasing under it, of the canceling of the purchase, destroying the receipts, and erasing or marking out the "sold" on the books and maps, are all distinctly proved. The witness was of opinion that this was by the permission of the Commissioner of the General Land Office; but he had not the means to ascertain this fact. At any rate, I conceive if he did give such permission, that it was only adding another individual to the fraudulent act; for I should think the Commissioner of the General Land Office could not legally allow such conduct. Of this fact, however, you can ascertain more directly and fully from the office of the commissioner of the land office there.

From the numerous complaints made to me of the conduct of G. W. Martin, Choctaw locating agent, I am of opinion that it would be well for the committee to institute an inquiry into his conduct. I did not consider myself authorized to take any evidence in regard to him, for reasons which I have stated elsewhere. I can, however, say, that should the committee think proper to have such inquiry made, and will give me the necessary authority, I will attend to it, provided the compensation allowed me will justify me in doing so. I feel it my duty to inform you of the habits of the officers here. I can assure you that the register, Major Dowsing, is a sober, industrious, persevering man in the discharge of his official duties, and I should think it difficult to better that appointment, in these degenerate times. The receiver is all the time drunk; so much so, as to incapacitate him from the discharge of his official duties. He has clerks who are attentive. His situation is so notorious here, that I am of opinion that it would be well enough, for those opposed to the present order of things, to say nothing about it, but let him alone; for I find it has the effect of "opening the eyes of the blind" in many instances here, and disgusting many more, and, upon the whole, I think his being retained in office has the effect of materially injuring the administration here. These are, however, only a few hints, incidentally dropped, for your consideration. The fact is notorious here, that he is never sober enough to attend to any business.

The sales of public lands commence here next Monday. I shall remain here, perhaps, during the sales. I find the fact of my presence, and the knowledge of my business here, causes considerable uneasiness among the speculators, who are daily coming in. They are afraid of me; they fear I have been authorized and directed to remain here and watch them; and I have no doubt my presence here, under the circumstances, will save a very large amount of money to the general government. Though I remain upon private business, yet I shall not undeceive them. They have taken up the idea that I am authorized to stop the sales, if I find anything like combination; this I rather encourge. Thus you will perceive I am rather an unwelcome guest among the speculating gentry. Enclosed I send you a statement of charges in relation to this business, and will write to you again in a few days in relation to that part of the business. I, you will preceive, mention fifteen days, as the time I have been engaged in this business. It is true I was not that many days actually engaged in taking testimony; but I was engaged in searching it out, and particularly in ferreting out the circumstances of the affair with G. W. Martin, and, in fact, a longer time. You can allow me what compensation you think proper; or it may be governed by the usages in such cases. I beg leave to refer you to my next letter, which I will write in a few days on this subject.

I am, your friend, G. C. WOOLDRIDGE.

To Hon. GEORGE POINDEXTER, Washington City.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1265. [2D SESSION.

RELATIVE TO DELAY IN ISSUING PATENTS FOR CONFIRMED LAND CLAIMS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 16, 1834.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 16, 1834.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives, passed 11th December, 1834, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to report "the causes which have retarded the issuing patents in favor of the claimants to lands in the State of Louisiana, which have been confirmed by virtue of the different acts of Congress which have been passed for the adjustment of land claims within the said State," I have the honor to transmit herewith a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to whom the resolution was referred, which gives the information required.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JOHN BELL, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 13, 1834.

SIR: In compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 11th instant, directing a report to be made to that House of "the causes which have retarded the issuing of patents in favor of the claimants to lands in the State of Louisiana, which have been confirmed by virtue of the different acts of Congress which have been passed for the adjustment of land claims within the said State," referred by you to this office, I have the honor to report:

That, by the existing laws, all the confirmed claims in Louisiana have to be surveyed under the authority of the United States, and that none of the plats of the townships in which such claims were situated could be considered as complete, so long as the land offices were kept open for the reception and adjudication of claims, as, until the question of title was definitely settled, those plats would not show such a discrimination between the public lands and private claims, as would enable the government to act upon them with confidence, and that, until the survey of the township was completed, it was impracticable to know what might be the interferences between the lines of the different claims, or to prepare the particular plats of each claim, giving to the tract its proper sectional number, by which the land was to be identified and described in the certificate of the register, and the patent founded thereon.

The nature and value of those claims were such as to render it necessary that the surveys should be executed with the greatest care and circumspection, and none but the most experienced and faithful deputies should, therefore, have been employed in their execution, while the peculiar nature of the country rendered the progress of the surveyor not only slow in the execution of the work, but limited the season for active operations in the field to but a portion of the year. Another great impediment to the prompt and faithful execution of the surveys in the alluvial portion of that State, which includes the great body of the claims, has been the insufficient maximum allowance per mile which the law has prescribed for surveying; and as the same maximum was paid for surveying the uplands and pine barrens of the State, it was difficult to procure competent deputies to execute the surveys of those claims, and the adjacent low grounds, so long as they could procure more profitable contracts for surveying in those parts of that and the adjacent States, where they could execute their work with greater rapidity and less risk as to health.

These causes, combined with the former and peculiar organization of the surveying department in that State, rendered the surveying of the public and private lands, and the preparation of the plats, both tedious and difficult; but the act of 1831 having abolished the offices of the three principal deputy surveyors, and established that of a surveyor general, the surveying operations have, since then, been carried on with more vigor, and it is believed that the execution of the surveys yet required, and the preparation of the plats, will progress with greater efficiency and rapidity. At the same time, I cannot but again urge upon the legislature the absolute necessity, if the surveys are expected to be finally closed within a reasonable time, of allowing some additional compensation to be made to the deputies, in those cases where it is found, from the peculiar nature of the surveys, to be utterly impracticable to procure the work to be executed for the present maximum fixed by law.

The existing laws only authorize the issuing of patents upon the production of the patent certificates of the register, accompanied by the necessary plats of survey; these plats are, in the first instance, after having been prepared and recorded in the surveyor general's office, forwarded by him to the proper register, who has to compare them with the reports and all the other documents in his office, preparatory to granting his patent certificate therefor. This is often a work of much labor, and for the performance of which he receives no special compensation from the government, but is allowed certain fees, payable by the claimants.

In the southeastern district of Louisiana, although the private claims are not definitely settled, there being one report of the land officers upon such claims now before Congress for their decision thereon, the plats of 130 townships and fractional townships have been returned to this office, and it is presumed that the particular plats of a portion of the private claims in those townships have been sent to the register's office, although patent certificates have been transmitted in but two cases, upon both of which patents have issued. The reasons why more certificates have not been issued, are not known to this office; but from the statements made by the register at Opelousas, hereafter alluded to, in relation to the claims in his district, it may be inferred that it arises, in part, from a similar indifference on the part of the claimants themselves as to procuring their patents.

In the St. Helena district, the plats of 112 townships and fractional townships have been returned to this office, while the land officers, so far as known to this office, have issued but one certificate, which has been patented under date of the 27th October, 1833. The surveyor general for Louisiana stated that "between four and five hundred plats of private claims in the district of St. Helena have been prepared from the notes in this office. I am bold to say, not only that there has been no remissness (as might be supposed from the tenor of the letter of the land officers at St. Helena to you, dated 10th January last,) on my part in bringing up this branch of the arrears, but that great pains have been taken, and great diligence used in so doing. It is scarcely necessary to say that the labor, both mental and mechanical, was very considerable in making out such a number of plats from old, ill written notes; some of the plats attempted were set aside on account of bad closing." This office has, for some time past, been in the expectation of receiving numerous patent certificates for the claims in that district, as their transmission has been urged upon the officers, but the causes which have delayed their transmission are not known.

In the district north of Red river, the plats of 199 townships and fractional townships have been received; but as, during almost the whole of the period in which the land offices were open for the adjustment of claims, that district formed part of the then western district, the claims were acted upon at Opelousas, and the patent certificates therefor are to be issued by the register at that office. The only report made from the land office for the district north of Red river, being that under the act of May, 1820, embraces about seventy claims; twelve patent certificates are known to have been issued by the register, and eight of them have been patented.

In the southwestern, or Opelousas land district, the plats of 147 townships and fractional townships are on file.

The register had, up to the last advices on the subject, issued six hundred and twenty patent certificates for the claims in that district, and the district north of Red river, and patents had been issued for four hundred and forty-nine of those cases. The patents on the other cases have not been issued, in consequence of the interference of the surveys with each other, the want of township plats, or the certificates have been returned for correction or re-examination, with the exception of a few of them, upon which patents will be issued so soon as the other business of the office will admit.

In conclusion, I would call your attention to the enclosed extract of a letter from the register at Opelousas to this office, dated 25th July, 1833, as showing not only the indifference of the claimants respecting the issuing of patent certificates, but, also, their absolute rejection of the patents themselves, as long as the present fee of two dollars is demandable by the register for delivering the patents; and with a view to expedite the business, I am induced to recommend that the present provisions of law, which require the payment of fees to the register, by the claimants, for issuing patent certificates, or delivering the patents, be abolished, and that a reasonable compensation be made by the United States to the officer for the performance of those duties.

All which is respectfully submitted.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

The Hon. Levi Woodbury, Secretary of the Treasury.

Extract of a letter from Valentine King, register of the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated 25th July, 1833.

"Your letter of the 1st instant, with sixty-three of my patent certificates for explanation and correction, has been received, and the subject shall receive immediate attention.

"The immense labors which I have had to perform without any compensation, induce me to ask if I am bound to issue patent certificates unless the parties demand them. Hitherto I remember but four instances, out of more than six hundred, where any applications have been made. I have acted only on the plats and titles before me, and by directions from the General Land Office.

"Unless relief is extended to the office, I despair of ever accomplishing the final adjustment of the claims. I do verily believe that more labor must be performed to complete them than has been already performed by boards, translators, clerks, and deputies, at an expense of $40,000 paid by the government. I must be my own clerk and translator, amidst the intricacies of about 4,000 claims, resting upon tattered and badly written French and Spanish titles. For what I have already done I have not received more than $50, and have little prospect of ever receiving $50 more; and to make the prospect more discouraging, heavy additional duties, without fee or reward, are required under the sixth section of the act of 3d March, 1831, in relation to interfering titles. And, last of all, the people will not have the patents for pay. I sent a whole bundle to one neighborhood, and they refused, to a man, to receive them on condition of paying the fees, and here they lie!

"Were the register paid, as the surveyors now, as the various commissioners, &c., heretofore, a reasonable compensation, say from $3 to $4, on the issuing of each patent, payable by the receiver, (that officer being made the patent depository, as register now is,) I should be able to employ a competent force to bring up the business with dispatch, and with much more accuracy than can possibly be expected from a single officer charged with a variety of other public business.

"I sincerely hope that these remarks may induce you to direct your efforts, which I am almost persuaded cannot fail of success, to the accomplishment of some measures which may effectually meet the objections here stated."

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1266. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO BOUNTY LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 18, 1834.

Mr. CHAMBERS, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Hosea King, late a musician in the army of the United States, reported:

That they have examined his case, from which it appears, that on the 23d of October, 1810, he enlisted in the army of the United States as a musician, for the term of five years, and that he remained in said service until the expiration of said term, when, on the 24th of October, 1815, he was honorably discharged. During which period, he had to encounter the fatigues, hardships, and perils of a war service. He has received all the pay and emoluments to which he was entitled under his contract of enlistment, and under the provisions of the act of Congress providing for that enlistment and service; but as soldiers afterwards enlisted, and who served a shorter time than himself, have received from the bounty of government the same and more pay, as well as bounty land, he desires that Congress will extend to him a like bounty. The act of Congress granting bounty lands in addition to pay, was passed the 24th December, 1811; and if Congress, on the apprehension of war, and for a war service, chose to extend the inducement to enlistment, so as to encourage an increase of the army, and did not think proper to extend the provisions to those who had been before that enlisted under other circumstances, the soldier who has received, under the laws that regulated his enlistment and services, all that was provided, has no claim on the justice or bounty of his county, unless he has become disabled and infirm by reason of that service, which is not alleged in the present case. The petitioner's case is not a solitary one, but belongs to a class of cases, embracing all who enlisted before December 24, 1811. And if the land bounty should be thus extended, it should be by a law of Congress, embracing all that class of cases; the propriety and policy of which may well be questioned, and when presented, will deserve attentive consideration for its retrospective operation in one class of cases, which would furnish precedents for like claims by officers, agents, and other claimants, who might appeal to the equity and bounty of their country for a like remuneration, beyond the emoluments and provisions of the law under which they acted or served.

With these views, the committee think the petitioner is not entitled to relief, and submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the petitioner is not entitled to relief.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1267. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 22, 1834.

Mr. CHAMBERS, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Henry Bright, reported:

That the petitioner alleges that he is a citizen of Mobile, and claims a lot in said city, by purchase from persons who had been in the actual possession thereof more than ten years before the 15th of April, 1813, and ever since that time.

By the fourth section of the act of May, 1822, confirming the report of the register and receiver, all persons in the actual possession of lots, and which "had been built upon, improved, or occupied before the 15th of April, 1813, shall be entitled to grants therefor," provided that no claim shall exceed seven thousand two hundred square feet. The petitioner alleges that, if application had been made to the register and receiver, there could have been no doubt of a confirmation of their title; but this was not done, owing to the ignorance of the claimants, then in possession, of our laws and language.

The facts, as alleged by the petitioner, are clearly proven by witnesses certified to be respectable by the register of the land office at St. Stephen's, and who further certifies that the title has been regularly transferred to the present claimant.

The committee are of opinion that the claimants to said lot ought not to lose title by their omission, from ignorance or other cause, and report a bill for his relief.

STATEMENTS OF THE AMOUNT OF THE TWO AND THREE PER CENT OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS IN ALABAMA YET DUE THE STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 23, 1834.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 23, 1834.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the Senate of the 15th instant, directing the Secretary of the Treasury "to communicate to the Senate the amount of the two per cent of the proceeds of sales of public lands lying within the State of Alabama, reserved to be applied to the making a road or roads leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress; and also, if any, what amount of the three per cent of the said proceeds of sales of public lands, reserved to be applied to internal improvements within the State, be now due the State,"—I have the honor herewith to transmit to the Senate a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, which gives the information called for by this resolution.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. M. VAN BUREN, Vice-President United States and President of the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 22, 1834.

SIR: In reply to the resolution of the Senate of the 15th instant, (which you have referred to this office,) in the words following, to wit:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to communicate to the Senate the amount of the two per cent of the proceeds of sales of public lands lying within the State of Alabama, reserved to be applied to the making a road or roads leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress; and, also, if any, what amount of the three per cent of the said proceeds of sales of public lands, reserved to be applied to internal improvement within the State, be now due the State,"—I have the honor to report,

That two per cent on the amount of the net proceeds of the sales of public lands in the State of Alabama, to the end of the year 1833, was	$104,268 92
That by the returns of the land officers of that State for the 1st, 2d and third quarters of 1834, the same would amount to	10,487 06
	$114,755 98
That by the returns of the land officers of that State for the 1st, 2d and 3d quarters of 1834, not yet adjusted, there appears to be due to Alabama of the three per cent fund, under the act of March 2, 1819, the sum of	$15,730 58

The amount due that State of the three per cent fund, under said act, up to the commencement of 1834, having been paid by the Treasury.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

The Honorable LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1269. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 23, 1834.

Mr. CLEMENT C. CLAY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Isaac Wellborn, jr., reported:

That the petitioner represents himself the purchaser of a tract of land in Jackson county, Alabama, which was reserved to one Thomas Harrison, the head of an Indian family, under the treaties concluded between the United States and the Cherokees, in July, 1817, and February, 1819. He states that he purchased fairly, and for an adequate consideration, of an individual who derived title from the sole heir of said Thomas Harrison, who continued to reside on said reservation during his life, and died thereon. He asks a confirmation of his title, that he may securely enjoy his rights and the product of his labor. The proof which accompanies the petition establishes satisfactorily that said Harrison continued to reside on said reservation till his death; that he left but one child, a daughter, who married one Samuel Guntre, and united with him in a sale and conveyance to Edward Guntre, and that the latter sold and conveyed to the petitioner and his brother, William Wellborn. Authenticated copies of the deeds of conveyance, in both instances, accompany the petition. It also appears that the widow of Harrison is dead. By the terms of the treaty under which this reservation is claimed, the heads of Indian families were entitled to a "life estate, with a reversion (remainder) in fee simple to their children, reserving to the widow her dower;" but it is expressly "provided, that if any of the heads of families, for whom reservations may be made, should remove therefrom, then, in that case, the right to revert to the United States." The object of the petitioner is no doubt to guard against the loss of the testimony, (it being merely parol,) by which he is now able to prove the continued residence and death of the reservee on the tract of land, and which might hereafter result in the defeat of his title. Under this view of the case, the committee believe it but reasonable to quiet the title, by the relinquishment of the reversionary interest of the United States; and, for that purpose, they report a bill.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1270. [2D SESSION.

STATEMENTS OF THE AMOUNT OF LANDS, SOLD AND UNSOLD, IN THE STATES AND TERRITORIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 27, 1834.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 27, 1834.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 11th instant, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to report to the House—

"1st. What quantity of public land has been offered at public sale in the several Territories.

"2d. What portion remains unsold and subject to private entry in the States and Territories, respectively, and how long the same has been so subject in each.

"3d. What portion of the public land offered, and not sold, at auction, has since been bought at private sale.

"4th. What quantity of public land has been sold, and for what sum, in each year, from the year 1822, inclusive.

"5th. And the number of acres in each State and Territory, the number sold in each, and the amount received therefor,"—I have the honor herewith to transmit a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, which gives all the information called for, that the records of his office will enable him to furnish.

It will be seen by the copy of a letter addressed to the Commissioner, hereto annexed, that he has been requested to obtain from the land offices the necessary information to enable him to prepare a further and full report, as called for by the House, as early as practicable.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JOHN BELL, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 23, 1834.

SIR: In reply to a resolution of the House of Representatives, passed on the 11th instant, in the words following, to wit:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to report to this House—

"1st. What quantity of public land has been offered at public sale in the several States and Territories.

"2d. What portion remains unsold and subject to private entry in the States and Territories, respectively, and how long the same has been so subject in each.

"3d. What portion of the public land offered, and not sold, at auction, has since been bought at private sale.

"4th. What quantity of public land has been sold, and for what sum, in each year, from the year 1822, inclusive.

"5th. And the number of acres in each State and Territory, the number sold in each, and the amount received therefor," and which has been referred to this office—I have the honor to submit the accompanying tables, marked A, B, and C.

That portion of the second clause of the resolution requiring to know how long the unsold land has been in market, in each State and Territory, cannot be satisfactorily answered. Under a call for similar information, by resolution of the House of Representatives, passed 3d January, 1833, information was furnished which had been collated from the district land offices, which affords the best idea the nature of that call would admit of, of the length of time the unsold lands had been in market, to the date there given.

I regret that at this time it is not in the power of the office to do other than refer to the information furnished in obedience to the former call, and which forms table B, herewith transmitted.

In reference to the third clause of the resolution, requiring to know "what portion of the public land offered, and not sold, at auction, has since been bought at private sale," I have to remark that there are no means of coming at the desired information without a resort to the district land offices, which could not be done, and the information obtained, in time for the action of the present Congress.

The land office returns of sales have always been rendered for monthly periods, (and where the term of duration of a sale is divided between two months, the report of proceedings thereunder forms part of the returns for these months,) and they seldom, if ever, discriminate between the auction sales and private entries of land, except by the price, in those cases where the auction sale exceeds the minimum rate per acre.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. Levi Woodbury, Secretary of the Treasury.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 23, 1834.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 26, 1834.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your report of the 23d instant, under the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 11th instant. It is my intention to transmit this report to the House to-morrow, and I request that you will take the necessary steps to procure the information from the several land offices, to enable you to make a further and full report, as called for by the resolution, as early as possible.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

E. HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1271. [2D SESSION.

ON A CLAIM FOR SCRIP FOR A VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 29, 1834.

Mr. MAY, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Francis Jarvis, reported:

That they are entitled to a land warrant numbered six thousand three hundred and forty-five, for one hundred acres of land, and was located in the Virginia military district in Ohio. It was afterwards ascertained that it was located upon land already appropriated; that the applicants took the warrant and filed it with the Commissioner of the General Land Office, claiming scrip under the act of Congress of the 30th May, 1830, and the same was not acted on until after the act of Congress of the 31st day of March, 1832; land scrip was then refused, and the petitioner asks for scrip in place of his warrant.

The act of Congress of the 10th of August, 1790, authorized the location of the Virginia military land warrants between the rivers Scioto and Miami, (L. L., p. 408,) and the act of the 9th of July, 1794, authorized the holders of such warrants to have them located and surveyed, and to get patents for the lands from the War Department. The act of the 20th of May, 1826, authorized the obtaining of the warrants at any time before the 1st of June, 1829, and until the first of June, 1832, for their location, and until the 1st of June, 1833, for obtaining their patents; and it made further provision that "no holder of any warrant which has been, or may be, located, shall be permitted to withdraw or remove the same, and locate it on any other land, except in two cases"—in case of an "eviction" by judgment of a court, or unless "found to interfere with a prior location and survey;" and authorizing their relocation upon any unappropriated lands on the east of Ludlow's line, in said district. At what time the entry or location of the present military warrant was made, does not appear to the committee; it is probable it was made before the passage of the law of 1826, above referred to, and the claimants, in that event, would have been entitled to relocate the same in the military district, as above stated, without the interposition of Congress.

On the 30th of May, 1830, Congress passed another law, providing for the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line during the revolutionary war who were entitled to military land bounty, by which they, or their assigns, are authorized to surrender "to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States such of their warrants for the said land bounties as shall remain unsatisfied, in whole or in part, and to receive certificates of scrip for the same, at any time before the 1st of January, 1835," and directing the Secretary to require the production of the certificates of the "register of the land office in Kentucky and the certificate of the surveyor of the military lands of the Virginia line," that the warrants had not been located, surveyed, or patented, in Kentucky, attested by the seal of his office.

It seems that a construction was given to this law, at the Land Office, by which those claimants who had located their warrants between the Miami and Scioto rivers might surrender them, and obtain scrip, under the preceding act; the precise construction put upon this law at the Land Office is not known to the committee. On the 30th of March, 1832, Congress passed another law, explanatory of the law of 1830, in which it is expressly said that the act of 1830 "shall not be construed to extend to any land warrants heretofore issued, which have been located, surveyed, or patented, on the lands reserved and set apart for the satisfaction of military bounty lands due to the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line, upon the Continental establishment, or for the satisfaction of the officers and soldiers of the Continental army," and re-enacting the law of 1826, for their benefit, for seven years. The present applicants claimed scrip under the act of 1830, and were prevented from obtaining the same by the passage of the law of 1832; and the question now presented to the committee is, whether the applicants are within the provisions of the act of 1830, and entitled to scrip, or whether it is the duty of Congress to make any other provision for the claimants than what is given by the act of 1826, re-enacted by the law of 1832.

The committee is of opinion that the law of 1830 was intended to apply to that class of claimants who had not "located" or "surveyed" their claims, or had them "patented," and that the present applicants, having had their claim located in the military district in Ohio, are not provided for by the act of 1830; but, if the land located by them has been lost, either by an eviction, or having been located on an older and better claim, that their remedy is under the act of 1826, and needs no further legislation on the part of Congress.

It is urged, on the part of the applicants, that, as their warrant has been located on land which had been appropriated by law before their location was made, that they ought to be considered in the same light as other claimants who had not located their claims, and entitled to the benefit of the act of 1830. It is a sufficient answer to this argument, that the law of 1830 was not intended to apply to that class of claimants, and the committee is not of opinion that the provisions of the act of 1830 should be extended; and, so far from extending the provisions of the act of 1830, the committee is of opinion that justice to the government requires that it should be restricted, if not repealed altogether. If the government once yields to the principle that the claimants of warrants which have been located, surveyed, or patented, may be removed and located on other portions of the public domain, on account of the land being lost, either from interference with older and better titles, or an inability to identify the land claimed, there is no knowing to what extent the government may hereafter be rendered liable for claims heretofore believed to have been satisfied, or how much injustice may be done to the government by the adoption of such a principle. The government provides public lands for the payment of such claims, and it is the duty of individuals to select for themselves; and if, in discharging this duty to themselves, they are so negligent as to select lands already appropriated, or to permit other and better titles to be acquired to the same land, by their inattention, negligence, or any other cause, it is believed that the government does enough for the applicants by permitting a removal of such claims to other unappropriated land in the same district which was set apart for the satisfaction of such claims, without extending to them the privilege of relocating their claims upon any of the public lands in the United States—or, in other words, paying to the holders the present minimum price of the United States lands.

It is believed there is yet remaining unsold a considerable quantity of land in the military district in Ohio, which is subject to the satisfaction of the claim of the present applicants; and, if it be a sufficient reason for allowing the location of said warrants on other public lands out of said district, that the remaining land in said district is not good, the same principle would extend to those who have been so unfortunate as to have had their claims located on bad land, whether claims for revolutionary services, or for services in the late war.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1272. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 29, 1834.

Mr. MAY, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of James Latham, deceased, reported:

That it appears to your committee that James Latham did, during his lifetime, to wit, on the 26th day of November, 1826, purchase from the United States, at the land office in Springfield, Illinois, by virtue of a Vincennes pre-emption floating claim, the northeast fractional quarter of section No. 9, in township No. 8 north, of range No. 8 east, of the 4th principal meridian, and received from the register of the land office a certificate of purchase for the same; that, sometime thereafter, the said James Latham died, by which the management of his estate devolved upon Richard Latham and Philip C. Latham, heirs of said James Latham, who made frequent application to the Commissioner of the General Land Office to receive a patent for the land thus purchased. But the county commissioners of Peoria county having also made application to purchase the land in question, under the provisions of an act of Congress of 26th May, 1824, the Commissioner of the General Land Office refused a patent to the heirs of Latham, and thus the matter rested till Congress, at their last session, passed an act authorizing the county commissionors of Peoria county to purchase the land, subject to the claim of the heirs of James Latham; and that, in pursuance of the act aforesaid, the county commissioners purchased the land, and the heirs of Latham now ask the privilege of surrendering the land located by him, and that they be permitted to locate any quantity of land, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, in lieu thereof, upon any of the public lands of the United States not otherwise appropriated, and lying within the limits of the State of Illinois.

The following considerations induce the committee to regard the petition in a favorable light:

The land officers, acting as the general agents of the government in the sale of the public lands, permitted the purchase of the tract in question to be made by James Latham, deceased. It is a well settled principle in civil jurisprudence, that the principal is bound by the acts of his agent, where the agent acts within the general scope of his authority. In the instance before us, such authority clearly existed; the land officers being the general agents of the government to dispose of the public domain, with no other restriction than that of being forbidden to sell any lands at a less price than $1.25 per acre. If this position be maintained, the committee cannot perceive any right in the legislative department of the government to pass a law authorizing the sale of the same land, under any circumstances whatever. But, waiving all argument on this point, the committee are of opinion that considerations of justice and equity require that the prayer of the petitioners should be complied with, especially when it is considered that the land entered by James Latham, deceased, as before stated, embraces the present town of Peoria, and is immensely valuable; which tract, by reason of the conflicting claim aforesaid, his heirs are now desirous to relinquish. Your committee, therefore, ask leave to report a bill for the relief of the petitioners.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1273. [2D SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF CREATING THE OFFICE OF SURVEYOR GENERAL FOR THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 30, 1834.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a resolution directing them to inquire into the expediency of establishing a surveyor general's office for the State of Illinois, reported:

That the subject-matter of inquiry embraced in the resolution has occupied the careful attention of your committee; and from an examination of the letter of the surveyor general at St. Louis, dated 12th November, 1832, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, as well as from satisfactory information derived from other sources, your committee are of the opinion that the interests of the United States, no less than the interests of Illinois, require the establishment of a separate surveyor general's office for that State.

Your committee are fully satisfied that the business of the present surveyor general's office for the States of Illinois and Missouri has, for many years, been rapidly accumulating, and that, from a variety of causes, it must continue to do so for many years to come. It is apparent to your committee that the sales of the public lands have been greatly retarded in Illinois from the want of the township plats, which could not, in many instances, be furnished by the surveyor general to the different land offices; and, for the same cause, a large portion of the settlers on the public lands have been unable to avail themselves of the beneficial provisions of the different laws granting to them the right of pre-emption. It is also represented that the original field notes are fast decaying; and the surveyor general, in his letter to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, above referred to, says, "it is recommended that the whole be recorded with as little delay as practicable, for many of the notes of the old surveys are in a perishable condition, being, in numerous instances, nearly illegible, on account of the indifference of the ink and paper, which are decaying with evident rapidity, and, if much longer delayed, will be a serious loss to the public." After summing up all the estimates, the surveyor general says that "it will require thirty-six clerks to bring up the arrears of the office two years, allowing three hundred working days to the year."

From these facts, it would seem that, if the interest of the general government were alone consulted, the propriety of creating an additional surveyor general's office for the State of Illinois would cease to be a matter of doubt. But considerations of equity and justice to a sister State, laboring already under many impediments, by reason of the large quantity of public lands lying within her limits, and owned by the general government, impel your committee to regard, in a favorable light, any proposition having for its object the speedy extinguishment of the title of the government to the lands in question.

Regarding it as a sacred duty on the part of the government to afford every facility and convenience to its citizens, not incompatible with the general welfare, your committee indulge the hope that the office proposed to be established will meet with no serious opposition. Without a surveyor general's office, the citizens of Illinois must be subject to great expense and inconvenience in traveling beyond the limits of their own State, to procure from the office copies of records and other documentary evidence, either to enable them to defend their titles to the lands they hold, or to cause accurate surveys of their lines and boundaries to be run and marked. From these considerations, together with the information contained in a letter addressed to the committee by the Hon. Wm. L. May, and intended to form a part of this report, your committee are induced to report a bill.

WASHINGTON, December 25, 1834.

To the honorable Chairman, and members of the Committee on the Public Lands:

GENTLEMEN: By a resolution of the House of Representatives, passed a few days since, your attention has been called to the subject of the establishment of a surveyor general's office in the State of Illinois; and, as one of the representatives of the State, knowing, to some extent, the wants of her citizens, and the great necessity that exists for the establishment of such an office, your honorable committee will not, I trust, deem it an act of supererogation on my part, if I suggest some facts in relation to the proposed inquiry.

The western States have long indulged the hope that the liberal and salutary suggestions contained in the different messages of our present Chief Magistrate, in relation to the future disposition of the public domain, would have received the sanction of Congress, and that the time would at length come when the public lands would cease to be regarded as a source of revenue, and that a more liberal and enlightened policy than the one hitherto pursued would have characterized the conduct of the representatives of the nation. The injurious effect of this course of policy on the part of the federal government towards the new States is too palpable to have escaped observation, and need not now be insisted upon. Whatever course, then, Congress may ultimately adopt in relation to a question of so much interest, and particularly to the new States, all will admit that the true policy of the general government, as well as the interest of the States, requires that every facility for the sale of those lands, by which an increase of revenue would flow into the Treasury, should be afforded. And when it is considered that the whole of the State revenue of Illinois is derived from the land tax, and that it is, at present, entirely insufficient to defray the ordinary expenses of the government, the propriety of a speedy extinguishment of the title of the government to the lands lying within the limits of the State, in order that those lands may be subject to taxation, must at once be perceived, and readily admitted. It cannot well be imagined that there exists a disposition, on the part of any of the older members of the confederacy, to pursue a course of policy calculated to retard the growth of the younger States, or withhold from the enterprising citizens who are crowding to the west, and particularly to Illinois, the means of securing to themselves and their families comfortable homes upon which they may sit down after their toils, and enjoy the fruits of their industry.

And yet, if Congress refuse to establish the office proposed, it will have the effect to check emigration, and virtually to deprive many citizens of the opportunity of purchasing the soil upon which they may be disposed to settle. For it is in vain to establish land offices for the sale of the public lands unless the public surveys can be made, and the township plats furnished. By referring to the report of the surveyor general for Illinois and Missouri, it will be perceived that an incredible number of township plats remains to be furnished for Illinois, besides a large amount of other descriptions of labor remaining to be performed, and requiring many years for its completion.

I am well assured that although the land office at Quincy, Illinois, has been established almost four years, yet has there been no sale of public lands, for the want of the township plats, which could not be furnished by the surveyor general; and most of the land offices in the State are, more or less, deficient in this respect.

It is also hoped that the committee will conceive something to be due to the convenience of so large a portion of the people who are now compelled to leave their own State to obtain from the surveyor general's office in Missouri any authenticated record, or copy of a survey, which they may have occasion to use; and should our land titles ever become litigated, (a thing highly probable,) the inconvenience to which the citizens of Illinois would be subjected in procuring records, &c. would be incalculably great.

The committee, it is hoped, will also bear in mind that in almost all the States and Territories in which the public lands are situated, an office of surveyor general has been established; and I cannot persuade myself that the claims of Illinois will meet with less courtesy or consideration from the committee or from Congress.

With these imperfect and hasty suggestions, which fall far short of all the arguments which might be advanced, allow me to hope that a bill creating the office aforesaid will be reported and sustained by you.

With sentiments of great respect, I remain, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM L. MAY.

RELATIVE TO CLAIMS FOR SCRIP FOR VIRGINIA NAVY AND MILITARY BOUNTY LAND WARRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 2, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 1, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the Senate, dated the 23d ultimo, requesting the Secretary of the Treasury "to transmit to the Senate, as early as may be practicable, the number and the amount of navy and military Virginia revolutionary land warrants now on file for scrip in the General Land Office, not heretofore communicated, the names of the individuals who performed the service, and, also, the names of the persons or agents who filed the warrants, or are interested in the same; also, that the Secretary of the Treasury be further requested to inform the Senate of the amount of suspended navy and military Virginia revolutionary bounty land scrip now lying in the General Land Office, the names of the individuals who performed the service, and the names of the persons or agents now claiming scrip, and the reasons for suspending the delivery of the same,"—I have the honor to transmit herewith the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to whom the said resolution was referred, which gives the information required.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. M. VAN BUREN, Vice-President of the United States and President of the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 31, 1834.

SIR: In compliance with the following resolutions of the Senate, dated the 23d instant, viz: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to transmit to the Senate, as early as may be practicable, the number and the amount of navy and Virginia revolutionary land warrants now on file for scrip in the General Land Office, not heretofore communicated, the names of the individuals who performed the service, and, also, the names of the persons or agents who filed the warrants or are interested in the same; also, that the Secretary of the Treasury be further requested to inform the Senate of the amount of suspended navy and military Virginia revolutionary bounty land scrip now lying in the General Land Office, the names of the individuals who performed the service, and the names of the persons or agents now claiming scrip, and the reasons for suspending the delivery of the same,"—I have the honor to submit two statements containing the information required.

The statement A contains the number and amount in warrants surrendered, since the 15th ultimo to this day, being 36,220 acres.

The statement B contains the amount of suspended scrip on Virginia military warrants, being 12,538⅓ acres, and the reasons thereof.

With great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1275. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN WEST FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 2, 1835.

Mr. PORTER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Millan de la Carrera, reported:

The petitioners state that, in the year 1809, the intendant general of West Florida made a grant to their ancestor for 798 arpens of land, situated within the district of Pensacola.

That this ancestor, who held a commission under the Spanish government, removed from Florida to Pensacola about the time the territory was taken possession by the United States, and soon after died.

That his executrix forwarded the grant to an agent in Pensacola, to be presented to the commissioners of West Florida, which they supposed was done, and the grant confirmed, as all others of a similar nature were; but, on the death of their agent, it was discovered that the business entrusted to him had been neglected, and that the grant had not been presented to the commissioners. On these facts they pray an act to confirm their title.

Accompanying the petition is the original grant. It is complete in itself, and carries with it internal evidence of being genuine.

And, in addition, there is the testimony of witnesses, that it was within their knowledge the grant issued to Carrera; and that, for several years preceding and following the date of the grant, he had a saw mill erected on the premises.

The case presents no difficulty in regard to the facts on which relief is demanded; and the facts bring the parties within the laws passed in relation to titles to land in Florida. The committee are of the opinion that the prayer of the petitioner should be granted; and they report a bill accordingly.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1276. [2D SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF A GRANT OF LAND TO ALABAMA FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN RIVERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 2, 1835.

Mr. MERCER, from the Committee on Roads and Canals, to whom the subject was referred, reported:

That, by an act of Congress approved the 23d of May, 1828, 400,000 acres of unappropriated lands were granted to the State of Alabama, for the purpose of improving the navigation of the Tennessee, Coosa, Cahaba and Black Warrior rivers. By the first section of this act, the application of the proceeds of the sale of the above lands is directed to be made to the navigation of the Muscle shoals and Colbert's shoals, in the Tennessee river, and such other parts of the river as the legislature of Tennessee may direct. The committee are informed that a part of the canal, at Muscle shoals, has been completed, and will shortly be in use; but the seventh section of the above act provides that the said rivers, when improved as aforesaid, shall remain forever free from toll for all property belonging to the Government of the United States, and for all persons in their service, and for all citizens of the United States, unless a toll be allowed by an act of Congress.

The committee are aware that no canal whatever can be sustained without an annual expenditure for its necessary repairs, nor a canal having locks, and of the large dimensions of this, without the maintenance of lock tenders; and it would seem but reasonable that the expense of sustaining such an improvement should be defrayed by those who use it. Retaining the provision of the act of 1828, exempting the property, and all persons in the service of the United States, from any charge for using an improvement effected, in a great measure, by grants from the national funds, the committee report a bill to give the assent of Congress to any act which the State of Alabama may pass for imposing such tolls on the canals around the Muscle shoals and Colbert's shoals, as shall be necessary to provide the means of sustaining their lock tenders, and keeping them in repair.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1277. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 6, 1835.

Mr. CLAYTON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Thomas F. Reddick, reported:

The infant heirs of Thomas F. Reddick petition the government to be confirmed in a grant of six hundred and forty acres of land, and found their claim to it upon the following grounds:

On the 30th of March, 1799, Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, issued the following order: "It is permitted to Mr. Lewis [Tesson] Honoré to establish himself at the head of the rapid of the river Des Moines, and his establishment once formed, notice of it shall be given to the governor general, in order to obtain for him the concession of a space sufficient to give value to the said establishment, and, at the same time to render it useful to the commerce of the peltries of this country, to watch the Indians, and keep them in the fidelity which they owe to his Majesty." The order further gave extensive privileges to trade with the Indians.

Immediately upon this permission, Lewis Tesson Honoré, as it fully appears, took possession of a tract of land now lying in the district of St. Charles, on the river Mississippi, above the river Des Moines, and about two hundred and fifty miles above St. Louis. While in possession, he became indebted to one Joseph Robidoux, who applied, under the then existing government, and according to its laws, to the proper authority, for process to compel payment of said debt. The application or suit went through the usual forms, and the officer directed to levy and sell the real and personal property of the said Tesson. Accordingly, he gives a full description of the land in the following words, which shows a complete settlement of the same, viz: "The land lies at about six leagues above the river Des Moines, and he seized, first, one lot of ground 150 feet in depth by 120 in width, fenced all round with piquets; upon which lot there is a house of 30 by 25 feet, covered with bark, and distributed into one parlor and three rooms. Item: one lot of ground, situated to the north of the above described lot, and adjoining to it, 150 feet in depth by 20 in width, fenced on the front and dividing line with piquets, and the rest a rail fence. Upon this lot is a log house of 20 feet by 15. Item: one lot of ground, to the south of the first above-mentioned lot, and adjoining to it, of 150 feet in depth by 120 in width, upon which are one log house and three buildings serving as outhouses. Upon this lot there is an orchard composed of apple trees, peach trees, and apricot trees—in all, about one hundred; the whole fenced in with piquets and rails. Item: one lot of ground, fenced all round, and which has been cultivated several times, containing about four arpens. Item: the four lots here above-mentioned are a part of one league square which has been granted by the government to Mr. Lewis Tesson, alias Honoré, whose titles are in the archives at St. Louis of Illinois. The said league (square) was also seized."

The whole of this property, thus minutely described, was exposed to sale at the church door as the people came out from service, being the usual time and place of selling property under execution, on the 15th day of May, 1803, when Joseph Robidoux became the purchaser. Tesson was in possession from 1799 to the above time of sale, and was then permitted to remain in possession until 1805, two years longer. In April, 1805, the land was sold at public sale by the executor of Joseph Robidoux, when Thomas F. Reddick became the purchaser, and from a short time thereafter he and his heirs have been in continued possession of the property. Upon this evidence, Frederick Bates, acting as commissioner, granted one mile square (640 acres) to Thomas F. Reddick, under certain acts of Congress passed in 1812, '13 and '14, but qualified the grant by inserting the condition "If Indian right extinguished." No authority can be found in any of said acts for annexing this condition, and it must be very obvious if the justness of the claim warranted the grant while supposed to belong to the Indians, nothing has impaired it so as to withhold it—now it belongs to the government. Indeed, it would seem that these children have a just claim, if not to the league square, which would be equal to 7,000 acres, at least to the 640 allotted to them by the commissioner, both by the actual settlement of the land under the Spanish government, and the regular disposition of it under their laws, as well as the privileges allowed by our own statutes after the territory fell to this government.

23D CONGRESS.] No 1278. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 6, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom has been referred the petition of Richard T. Archer, reported:

That it appears that the said Richard T. Archer was one of the assignees of the grant of lands made to the trustees of Jefferson College, in the State of Mississippi, by the terms of which such assignments were allowed to be entered and located on any public lands not appropriated in the said State. That, at the sale of lands at Chocchuma, in said State, in the fall of 1833, the said Archer, on the first day of the sales, applied to the register of the northwestern district in the late Choctaw purchase to enter certain lands, of which the south half of section thirty-three, of township twenty, of range two east, in said district, was part: that the said application was rejected by the register without sufficient reasons, the land being subject to entry. In consequence of this rejection, the petitioner was obliged to enter his floating grant on lands of very inferior value. The rejection having been illegal, the petitioner would be entitled to have the sales of all the lands covered by his location vacated: this, as the lands have been acquired by other persons, he does not wish to do; but the half section thirty-three, township twenty, range two east, having been reserved from sale, he wishes that he may be allowed to purchase that at the government price, as an indemnity for the very considerable loss he has sustained by the illegal refusal of his application to enter his grant, which was for a much larger extent. John C. McLemore, being called on for his opinion in regard to the relative value of the lands applied for by the said Archer under a Jefferson College float, and the land subsequently located for said Archer, gives it as his opinion that the land applied for by said Archer is decidedly of better quality and of much greater value than the land located for him. Under these circumstances, the committee think this application of the petitioner reasonable, and report a bill for his relief.

23d Congress.] No. 1279. [2d Session.

NUMBER OF LAND OFFICES AND LAND DISTRICTS IN THE UNITED STATES, AND THE AMOUNT OF SALES AND EXPENSES AT EACH.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 7, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 6, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 12th of December last, directing the Secretary of the Treasury "to communicate to the House the number of land offices and land districts in the United States; the time when they were established respectively; the quantity of land sold or remaining unsold; and the amount of money received in each district, and the expense of keeping up the land system in each State where it exists,"—I have the honor herewith to transmit to the House the accompanying report and documents, received from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to whom the resolution was referred.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JOHN BELL, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 5, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, passed on the 12th ultimo, "that the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to communicate to this House the number of land offices and land districts in the United States; the time when they were established respectively; the quantity of land sold or remaining unsold; and the amount of money received in each district, and the expense of keeping up the land system in each State where it exists," and which you have referred to this office,—I have the honor to submit the accompanying document marked A, which shows the names of the land offices and land districts, and the dates of the several acts by which the offices were created, and the amount of money paid by purchasers at each office.

Also, document marked B, which shows:

1st. Quantity of land remaining unsold which has been offered at public sale, and was subject to private entry on the 30th September, 1834.

2d. Quantity of land sold, and the amount paid by purchasers for the same, to the 30th September, 1834.

3d. "Expense of keeping up the land system;" which has been construed to mean the expenditures during the last calendar year, consisting of the emoluments of registers and receivers, and the contingent expenses of their offices; the emoluments of surveyors general and their clerks, and contingent expenses of their offices; and the expenditures for making the public surveys.

In consequence of the numerous alterations in the boundaries of land districts, made at different periods in most of the States and Territories, the moneys exhibited in table A, as paid by purchasers at the different offices, have no exclusive relation to the lands at present within the organized limits of the districts of land subject to sale at those offices, but relate to all the lands which at different periods have been subject to sale thereat.

It is also to be remarked that the quantities of land sold and remaining unsold, shown by table B, are stated in the aggregate of States and Territories, and not by land districts, inasmuch as the numerous alterations in the boundaries of the land districts above alluded to have rendered it impracticable to state those amounts in reference to the existing limits of the districts, without resort to the township plats in the district land offices, which could not be had in time for any action of the present Congress.

I have the honor to be, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

The Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 5, 1835. ELIJAH HAYWARD.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1280. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 8, 1835.

Mr. CHAMBERS, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Cornelius Innis, reported:

That the petitioner represents that he was formerly known by the name of Quesnel Escofeel, a resident of the parish of Rapides, in the State of Louisiana, and that he is the owner of a certain requete, or petition, addressed to the Spanish authorities in the former province of Louisiana, dated 23d June, 1802; which document has been exhibited to the committee, and, being the only evidence of title or claim accompanying the petition, has received the consideration of the committee.

This requete, or petition, is addressed to the intendant general of the province, bearing date the 23d June, 1802, supplicating him to grant the petitioner, Quesnel Escofeel, a tract of land situate in said province, the petitioner obligating himself to comply with the ordinary regulations—to cultivate the land granted to him, to open the roads required, &c., &c.; added to which is a writing purporting to be the certificate of Valentine Layrard, that the lands applied for "were the property of his Majesty, and free to be disposed of."

In this the committee are at a loss to discover any title, or, in the absence of confirmatory evidence, any inception of title that would either pass the land described, or furnish any claim to that or any other land.

There is no evidence that this petition, with the accompanying certificate, is genuine, there being no witness, seal, or anything accompanying it to authenticate it. It does not appear even to have been presented to the intendant general, or any other officer of the province having authority to make grants or concessions; and on it does not appear that there was any concession made, or any sanction or encouragement afforded to the applicant.

For anything that appears to the committee, it was no more than an intended application, which was retained by the individual applicant, and who might pursue, or abandon it, as he thought proper, and which, of itself, without sanction or possession, could give no right or color of claim.

As this application was to the Spanish intendant general, after the treaty of St. Ildefonso, in 1800, by which the province was ceded by Spain to France, and though publicity was not given to that treaty and cession, yet it was known to John B. Morales, the intendant general, who, from that circumstance, either abstained from making grants and concessions, or was cautious in doing so. If he had not been so restrained, there was, under the regulations establised by Morales for conceding lands, an omission of many circumstances required necessary to the validity of this grant. By article fifteen of the regulations of J. B. Morales, adopted the 17th July, 1799, it was provided that "all concessions shall be given in the name of the King, by the intendant general of this province, who shall order the surveyor general, or one particularly named by him, to make the survey and sell the land." By article sixteen, the survey, as made, was to be returned in the form presented; and, by article seventeen, it is provided that "in the office of the finances there shall be a book numbered, where the titles of concessions shall be recorded."

* Exclusive of the lands in Mississippi and Alabama, acquired from the Chickasaws by the treaty of the 20th October, 1832, and of all expenditures connected with the survey of the same, which are to be reimbursed to the government out of the proceeds of sales; the net proceeds accruing to the tribe.

When such were the regulations in relation to grants of land within the province of Louisiana, the failure to comply with them, and obtain the evidence of title in the manner required by the law of the province, would bar the applicant of all right or claim.

Even if there had been a concession by the Spanish authority subsequent to the treaty of St. Ildefonso, without possession being taken by the grantee, such grant, being declared void, under the act of Congress of 26th March, 1804, would confer no right.

The applicant has not, at any time, filed in any office his claim for registry, or presented the same to any commissioner or other officer of the government for recognition.

The omission to prosecute this application to obtain a concession, unaccompanied with possession, or any registry, for a period exceeding thirty years, is, in the opinion of the committee, under the laws of Congress, a conclusive bar to the claim, there being no proof of any minority as alleged, nor would minority, if it exist, supply the omission to obtain a concession and order of survey, the very foundation of the grant.

At the time of the grant, the applicant is not represented as a minor; and, in the application, he undertakes to comply with the ordinary regulations, in cultivating the land, &c.

The committee are, therefore, of opinion that the claim is not well founded, and ought not to be granted, and submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the petitioner is not entitled to relief.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1281. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 9, 1835.

Mr. AMOS DAVIS, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of John Armstrong, reported:

The petitioner alleges that he is the claimant of a tract of 640 acres of land lying within the late neutral territory between the Rio Hondo and Sabine rivers, in the State of Louisiana; that he continued to reside on said land until the month of October, 1832, at which time he was driven off the same by Jehiel Brooks, Indian agent, at the Red river agency. He makes reference to a letter of said agent to him, which is filed with the petition, and prays Congress to allow him to change the location of his land. It appears from the certificate of the register of the land office of Opelousas that the petitioner's claim to the said tract of land has been confirmed by an act of Congress, approved 24th of May, 1828, and such being the fact, Brooks, the Indian agent, by virtue alone of his agency, could have no authority whatever to expel the petitioner from the land. If he done so, his act was a mere trespass, for which it is supposed the party aggrieved could have ample redress in a court of justice. If the agent undertook upon himself, as is inferred from the statement of the petitioner, to do an unlawful act, he clearly exceeded the limits of his trust, and no principle is better established than for this the government is not answerable. But conceding the right of the petitioner for redress against the government, it is not perceived that justice requires that he should be allowed to change his location; all that should be done is a confirmation of title, and as that is already the case he has only to cause the location to be made according to the act of Congress referred to, after which a patent will issue in conformity to its provisions.

The committee therefore recommend the rejection of the petition.

The United States, as appears by the certificate of the register of the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, granted John Armstrong 640 acres of land, the location and boundaries of which are designated. He was in possession and had been long living on it, when the agent for the Caddo Indians, by virtue of an authority unknown to me, ordered him to leave the land on the ground it was situated in the territory of those Indians. Whether this be so or not I cannot tell, as I am not aware that the right of these Indians to any territory within the limits of the United States has ever been recognized. It is, however, clear that Armstrong was dispossessed of his property by the act of the agent, who is an officer of the government. The only question to be determined is, whether the United States will permit an equal quantity of land to that of which Armstrong was dispossessed by their officer, to be located elsewhere, upon condition that he relinquish all claim to the tract within the Indian boundary. The answer, it appears to me, cannot be difficult.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 12, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Louis Pellerin, deceased, reported:

That it is shown, to their satisfaction, by legal evidence, that, in the year 1764, the governor of Louisiana, D'Abbadie, granted, in the usual form, the land claimed, to the ancestor of the petitioners, Louis Pellerin, to wit, a prairie called the Prairie Basse, having a front of sixty-three arpens by a depth of one hundred and twenty-six, equal to a superfices of seven thousand nine hundred and thirty-eight arpens. It appears, by evidence taken before the commissioners at Opelousas, that this land is occupied, but whether by those deriving title from the petitioners, does not appear.

The grant being, in the opinion of the committee, a valid one, ought to be confirmed; and the committee report a bill to that effect.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 12, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Greenwood Leflore, reported:

That the petitioner states that the south half of section number thirty-three in township number twenty, range number one east adjoining the lands of said petitioner in the Chocchuma district, State of Mississippi, has heretofore been reserved from sale on account of some difficulty in the location of two sections of land reserved to the petitioner in the treaty with the Choctaw tribe of Indians, made at Dancing Rabbit creek. The petitioner states that all the land in this neighborhood is sold; that he lays no claim to said half section; that he was desirous to have embraced it in his reservation, and the difference between himself and the locating agent in the manner of locating the reservation is the reason why it was not offered for sale. The petitioner therefore prays that he may be permitted to purchase said land at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. The petitioner in this case has stated in his petition that he has not sustained any loss in consequence of his being refused to locate his reservation upon the said tract of land, nor is there anything before the committee which goes to prove that his reservation has not been laid upon land as valuable as that which the petitioner asks the privilege of purchasing at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. The committee has not been furnished with any facts showing that the government is in default in anywise with the petitioner, therefore ask to be discharged from the further consideration of said petition.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1284. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 12, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of William Marberry, reported:

That said claimant alleges that he had a private claim confirmed for 640 acres, certificate No. 716, in the parish of St. Tammany, Louisiana; that he was absent from home when the private claims were surveyed, and that he had left an agent to cause the survey of it to be made, which was neglected, and his land returned as public land and a portion of it sold by the United States. He asks to be permitted to have the whole tract located in township seven, range three, east, where he has made considerable improvements by mistake.

It appears by the certificate of the deputy surveyor that 120 acres of said tract of 640 acres was taken by Lerville Bahan, and, as the deputy surveyor certifies, includes the best part of said tract, and that the balance is of no value.

The committee are of opinion that there is no sufficient excuse made to justify a relocation of said private land claim; that if everything be true as alleged, which is not doubted by the committee, it might furnish a case justifying the repayment of his money to Bahan, or authorizing him to relocate his one hundred and twenty acres of land. But if Bahan has the better title, it originated in the neglect of the present claimant or his agent, for which the United States are not responsible, and the utmost liberality on the part of the United States could not justify an appropriation of more than one hundred and twenty acres for the use of the applicant.

The committee do not perceive any sufficient ground to justify any relief whatever, at present.

ON A CLAIM TO BOUNTY LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 12, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Zebulon Baxter, reported:

The petitioner states that he is a native of the United States; that, at the commencement of the late war with Great Britain, he resided in the province of Lower Canada, and had resided there about twelve years; that, in consequence of the commencement of the war, he removed from Canada into the county of Franklin, State of New York. In the month of June, 1813, he enlisted as a Canadian volunteer in the county and State aforesaid, for the term of one year, under the command of Captain James B. Spencer, of the 29th infantry; that he served as a corporal under the command of said Spencer, until the first of December, of that year, when he was transferred to a company commanded by Captain Elam Lyndes, of the same regiment, served out his term of enlistment, and was discharged on the 15th of June, 1814. All these facts are corroborated by the affidavit of James B. Spencer, made and sworn to before William Hogan, first judge of the Franklin county court. The petitioner produces his discharge, signed by G. D. Young, lieutenant colonel commanding 29th infantry, showing that he had served in said regiment one year; discharge dated June the 15th, 1814. Petitioner also produces the affidavits of David Baxter and Thomas Smith, who swear that Zebulon Baxter was a citizen of the United States anterior to the late war between the United States and Great Britain. The affidavits of Thomas Smith and Amasa Foreman go to prove that said Baxter, during the war aforesaid, volunteered in the service of the United States, in the campaign of 1813 and 1814, and served in the capacity of corporal in a company commanded by Captain James B. Spencer, in the 29th regiment of infantry, and continued therein until honorably discharged by order of Colonel Gilford D. Young. The petitioner further states that, in the year 1817, he employed a person to make out his papers to obtain his bounty land, &c.; that they were forwarded, and, until recently, he had not distinctly understood the situation of his claim, which he now understands has not been allowed. The act of Congress approved March the 5th, 1816, granting bounties in land, &c., to certain Canadian volunteers, gave to each non-commissioned officer, musician or private, 320 acres; but on the 3d of March, 1817, Congress passed an act to amend the aforesaid act, reducing the quantity of bounty land to the non-commissioned officer, musician or private, to 160 acres, which act was to continue and be in force for the term of one year and no longer. The petitioner did not as it appears from the papers, make any application to acquire his lands until after the passage of the act of 3d March, 1817; therefore, if entitled at all to bounty land, can only be entitled to 160 acres; and the only evidence before the committee that an application was made to the department for his bounty land is by a note written on the discharge with red ink, in the following words: "Not entitled to bounty land under this enlistment." The committee, however, believing the affidavit of James B. Spencer to be true, and his affidavit being corroborated by the affidavits of other persons, are inclined to the belief that he is entitled to relief, and for that purpose report a bill.

IN FAVOR OF THE CORRECTION OF AN ERROR IN A LAND PATENT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 12, 1835.

Mr. ASHLEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of John Tice, reported:

That, on the 17th day of March, 1818, a patent issued in the name of William Pennington, late a soldier in the army of the United States, for the southeast quarter of section twenty-eight, of township eight north, in range one west, in the tract heretofore appropriated for military bounties, in the State of Illinois, and on the 14th of December following a patent issued in favor of Abm. Foot for the same quarter section. It appears that a mistake occurred in describing the tract patented to Pennington; it should have been the northeast, in place of the southeast, quarter of section twenty-eight, in the township and range above mentioned. In 1823 Pennington transferred his title to the said southeast quarter to the petitioner, who, it appears, has since paid taxes on it, but understanding that the tract had been assigned to another individual, who, from the verbal statement of Tice, it appears, has the land in possession, he is willing to relinquish his title to that quarter, provided he can be permitted to select another within the district aforesaid. The committee considering the prayer of the petitioner reasonable and proper, report a bill accordingly for his relief.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1287. [2D SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF AN EQUITABLE SETTLEMENT OF THE ACCOUNTS OF THE RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS AT HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 13, 1835.

Mr. CLAYTON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the widow and children of the late General Brahan, receiver of public moneys at Huntsville, Alabama, reported:

That, by the proclamation of the President of the United States, a sale of public lands was ordered at Huntsville, on the first Monday in February, 1818. It further appears by the statement of General John Coffee, that "a plan was proposed by some of the capitalists about Huntsville, by which they were to form a company of every man who chose to join it, and who had a sum of money to invest in the capital stock. The company were to purchase all the land, or as much as they could, for the joint benefit of all concerned, to the amount of their capital; after the public sales were over, they were to put up to public sale all their purchases, and the profits made were to be divided amongst the company. They proposed, as it was termed, to run down small capitalists, or such as would not join their company. It was understood that the company sent out men on the different public roads which led to Huntsville, to meet strangers coming in to purchase, to get them to join the company, and thereby keep down opposition to their scheme. In this state of things the officers of government present, viz., General John Brahan, as receiver of public moneys, Colonel John Read, as register of the land office, and myself, as surveyor of public lands, felt it a duty, by all the means within our reach, to oppose the plans of the company, and prevent them, if possible, from purchasing the lands at the minimum price, or below its real value, and thereby speculate upon the government, and on those persons who were desirous to purchase for actual settlement. Counsel was consulted on the propriety of stopping the sales by the register and receiver, if it was found that the lands were about to sell for less than their value. The two latter gentlemen expressed great anxiety on the subject lest the interest of the government should be affected." It seems, from the statement of Judge Minor, then acting as attorney general for the Mississippi Territory, and the county of Madison in Alabama, that he was once or oftener applied to by Colonel Read and General Brahan, and his opinion asked as to the legality of postponing the sales in consequence of the combination formed to purchase the public lands for the purpose of speculation, and that he gave it as his opinion it could not be done. The sales therefore went on, and, through the influence of the officers of government, opposition was excited against the speculators, and, says General Coffee, the first tract of land offered for sale "was bid off for something like twenty dollars (per acre), far beyond any calculations which we had made of the value of the lands; this seemed to raise great excitement in the immense crowd of people present; all seemed to feel interested on one side or the other, and, as the sale progressed, the feeling raised. Much of the land that day was sold for twenty dollars and upwards; General Brahan took an active part in bidding against the company, and of course became the purchaser of several high priced tracts the first day. The sales continued from day to day with the same feelings of opposition, and I feel well assured that many persons bid during the sales more than double the sum they would have given before the sales commenced; I know it was the case with myself, and feel well satisfied it was the case with General Brahan, for we had many conversations on the subject. I knew at the time he had a large sum in scrip, and towards the close of the sales I heard the General remark that his commissions would be worth something like thirty thousand dollars, which, in addition to his scrip, he thought would pretty well cover all his purchases."

Judge Minor confirms fully the statement of General Coffee as to the combination of speculators to purchase the public lands, and the great solicitude felt by General Brahan and Colonel Read as to the consequences; and, upon his opinion that nothing could be done by way of postponing the sales to prevent it, they were put up under the hope of exciting opposition against the company, which was effectually done; he adds, that "General Brahan bought to a very large amount at these sales; and that, from all I saw and heard, I believe that his activity in bidding had a considerable effect in enhancing the prices. I have been informed, and believe, that he has since sold land certificates to a large amount, bought at these sales, at a discount of fifty per cent."

Under the circumstances above stated, and in a spirit of opposition to what was conceived an unjustifiable attempt to defraud the government, General Brahan was induced to purchase very largely of the public lands, and, indeed, to an amount, from causes which he could not control, beyond his ability to pay. He relied confidently upon realizing for the government the full amount of his purchases from actual settlers who were seeking establishments at that time in very great numbers, never calculating in the remotest degree upon making anything, the high prices given for the lands rendering that impossible; but unfortunately a most unfavorable change in the existing state of affairs took place, which wholly disappointed his expectations. The act of 1820 changed the mode of selling lands from a credit to a cash system, which greatly reduced the value of lands that had been purchased under the former system; and add to this a great fall in the price of the staple commodity of the country, and an unusual and sudden diminution of the paper circulation of the banks, which had theretofore been as unusually increased.

As soon as General Brahan discovered the unfortunate situation in which his zeal in the first instance for the public interest, and then the untoward changes of the times, had involved him, he lost no time in making it known to the honorable William H. Crawford, then Secretary of the Treasury, with a prompt offer to secure the government by lien on his property, in whatever sum he should be found indebted. In the month of December, 1820, General Brahan placed in the hands of certain trustees appointed by the agent of the Treasury Department, good bonds amounting to upwards of forty thousand dollars, and a large amount of real estate under a deed of trust, subject to the entire control of the Secretary of the Treasury, the proceeds of which, when collected, were to be applied to the credit of this debt, estimated then, but not accurately ascertained, at about $80,772. It appears, also, that the original bond of the said Brahan was lost, and that he very promptly renewed it, under a promise, however, that he should not be placed in a worse condition than he would be under the old one, if it were in existence, and should be liable only for the amount found to be actually due on a final settlement of his accounts at the Treasury Department.

In the year 1821, Congress passed an act granting relief to purchasers of public lands; and under the provisions of that law, the said Brahan, as is stated by the petitioners, and confirmed by Judge Minor, sold the certificates for most of the lands he had purchased, at fifty cents in the dollar upon their original cost, thereby losing not less than thirty thousand dollars, but faithfully applying these proceeds to the payment of the debt due the government.

The petitioners state, and show by a document from the Treasury, that by great exertions and sacrifices, and the sale of the greater part of his active and most valuable property, the said Brahan has paid to the government the sum of $80,864, which sum exceeds the principal of the debt, as appears by another Treasury document, $7,252.

The petitioners rest their hopes of relief upon the foregoing facts, a summary of which, and the considerations which they naturally suggest, are simply these: that their husband and father acted in every equitable sense, and in the strictest character of disinterestedness, as the agent of the government, voluntarily, it is true, but justly entitled, not only from the motive which influenced him, but from the actual service rendered the government, to all the benefits which an authorized agency would have secured him. That this risk and consequent loss was incurred against an unprincipled combination seeking to rob the government of its revenue. That the attempt was counteracted, and a most profitable sale effected, by means of the excitement and opposition created by the officers of the government against this confederacy of speculators. That, in proof of the disinterested character of the agency, an attempt was made on his part to postpone the sales, if it could be lawfully done, with a view to prevent an honestly apprehended injury to the government; and when that could not be done, he made his purchases at prices that utterly forbid the idea that the slightest hope of profit could have been entertained. That, if this view of the subject be correct, and it can scarcely admit of a doubt, justice and equity, and especially the magnanimity of a government that seeks nothing contrary to these great principles, would hold him in no other light than that of a trustee. That he honestly made known his case, and the misfortunes growing out of it, to the government, and promptly secured it to the full amount of its demand against him. That he renewed his obligations to it by a second official bond, upon being required, in consequence of the loss of the first. That, notwithstanding the high prices which he gave for the lands, he would have been enabled to have extricated himself from difficulty, but for the intervention of certain causes which he had no right to expect, two of them growing out of the acts of the government itself, viz: the alteration of the mode of selling its lands, and the taking away from him his commission, being one per cent, which, according to General Coffee's testimony, was one of his principal reliances to discharge his debt, actually mentioned by him at the close of the sales. That the government has extended to other purchasers of lands, at various times, great indulgence and relief, under circumstances which by no means possessed the merit of the present application, because, in those cases there existed only the simple relation of seller and purchaser; but in this case it is extended to that of purchaser, for an enormous consideration, to prevent a gross fraud upon the seller's rights. That the government has lost nothing by the sales, for they have received every dollar of the principal, resulting, as it did, from a most extravagant price, produced under such an excitement, purposely created for the public interest, as that, in the words of General Coffee, "more than double the sum was given for the lands than would have been given before the sales." That, not only the principal has been paid, but upwards of $7,000 of the interest with it, contrary, as is believed, to the usages of the government in its outstanding accounts against very many officers; that, besides this heavy loss, he lost his office at the time, in consequence of his delinquency—a delinquency, as will be perceived, occasioned by no malfeasance, but purely from a zeal to serve the public interest, followed up by misfortunes entirely beyond the exertion of the most prudential vigilance to prevent. Under these circumstances, the petitioners, a widow and seven children, state "most respectfully, that although the losses of the decedent, from the peculiar pressure of the times, were very great and embarrassing, they have the consolation to believe that he saved to the government, by the course which ruined him and the future prospects of his family, nearly half a million of dollars. The decedent, at his death, owed some other debts to a considerable amount, so that, unless his estate can be relieved of the interest which has accrued on the government's debt, it will be unable to pay its debts, and all the property left by the decedent will be swept away from the petitioners, and his infant children will be left penniless to seek a living upon the cold charities of the world." They therefore pray that the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized by law to settle and adjust the accounts of the said John Brahan, so as to release his estate from the payment of interest on account of his said debt to the government.

The committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioners is reasonable and just, and ought to be granted, and for that purpose report a bill.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE RECEIVING AND DISBURSING OFFICERS, STATIONED IN THE STATES WHEREIN LAND OFFICES ARE ESTABLISHED OR PUBLIC WORKS BEING CONSTRUCTED.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 13, 1835.

WASHINGTON, January 13, 1835.

To the House of Representatives:

In compliance with the resolution of the House of the 8th instant, requesting "copies of every circular or letter of instruction emanating from the Treasury or War Departments since the 30th day of June last, and addressed to either the receiving or the disbursing officers stationed in States wherein land offices are established, or public works are constructing under the authority of Congress," I transmit, herewith, reports from the Secretaries of the Treasury and War Departments, containing the information sought for.

ANDREW JACKSON.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 12, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with your directions, I have the honor, herewith, to transmit to you copies of every circular or letter of instruction emanating from this department since the 30th day of June last, addressed to receivers of public moneys. No circular instructions, since that period, have been issued by this department, addressed to disbursing officers stationed in States wherein land offices are established, or public works are constructing under the authority of Congress.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, August 6, 1834.

SIR: For the mutual accommodation of the public officers and creditors in your neighborhood, and of yourself and the Treasury Department, I propose hereafter to direct warrants in their favor, to yourself, for payment, when desired by them.

It will be in your power, also, before a warrant is obtained by them, and whenever you have confidence in their honesty and solvency, to take an assignment or draft, by them, in your favor, of their supposed claim on the Treasury, to pay its amount, and, on its being forwarded here, to receive a warrant in your own behalf, for the sum due. All the warrants paid in the manner first stated, or received in your own name, will be ample vouchers in your behalf, on a settlement of your accounts, and, in this way, the officers and creditors of the government will often be saved travel and expense. You will have to make less frequent deposits, and at less hazard, as the balance on hand, to be deposited at the end of each month, will, probably, in this way, become considerably reduced, and the department will have the satisfaction of obliging others, through its own officers, without increasing sensibly the risk or labor of any. You will please to notify such public officers and creditors as live near you, of the existence of this arrangement, in order that they may, if convenient and agreeable, take advantage of its benefits.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

P. S.—You will take receipt on the bottom of the warrants paid, and return the warrants and receipts to this department monthly.

Addressed to the RECEIVERS of Public Moneys at Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Arkansas, and Florida.

Circular to the collectors of the customs and all receivers of public money.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 5, 1834.

Whereas, by the act of Congress passed 31st July, 1789, it is provided "that the duties and fees to be collected by virtue of this act shall be received in gold and silver coin only;" and, by a usage under that act, and a similar one as to the payment for public lands, it was customary to receive only specie, and the notes or bills of banks redeemable in specie, until 1814; and, after a different practice, adopted in 1814, Congress, on the 30th April, 1816, resolved, "That from and after the 20th day of February next, no such duties, taxes, debts, or sums of money accruing or becoming payable to the United States, ought to be collected or received otherwise than in the legal currency of the United States, or Treasury notes, or notes of the Bank of the United States, or in notes of banks which are payable and paid, on demand, in the said legal currency of the United States." And whereas, the practice, under that resolution, conformed to its provisions till January 21st, 1828, when permission by this department, under certain assurances from the Bank of the United States, was given that drafts or checks of that bank and its branches should be received for the public dues, though said drafts or checks were not notes of the bank, not being, like notes, signed by the president and cashier thereof, nor originally made payable to bearer, nor according to the subsequent decision of the Supreme Court, coming within the description of a note or bill. And whereas, Congress have never authorized the issuing of such drafts for the purpose of circulation as currency, and have refused, though urgently and repeatedly requested, to permit the issuing even of notes of the bank of the smaller denominations so signed; and the great extent to which the said drafts, of small denominations, have been put in circulation as currency, seeming to be directly repugnant to the spirit of the act incorporating the bank, and of the subsequent proceedings of Congress; and doubts having arisen as to the legal liability of the bank to redeem the said drafts in specie, under the penalty provided in the charter for the non-payment of "its bills, notes or obligations;" and the counterfeits of the said drafts having become very numerous and difficult of detection, and those who sell or utter them being likely to escape punishment, in consequence of questions which arise in prosecuting them under the said charter—it is therefore deemed proper, in order that the clearly expressed views of Congress should be enforced, and the agents of the department protected from risks and losses by said drafts, to revoke the permission granted in 1828; but, with a view to give due notice, to the community and bank, of the contemplated change, not to allow the revocation to take effect till the period hereafter mentioned.

Hence, in conformity to the requirements of the aforesaid acts and joint resolution of Congress, all collectors of the customs, and all receivers of public money, are hereby enjoined that, after the first day of January next, they shall not receive, in payment of duties or of public lands, any coin or paper except such as is described in said resolution, viz., "the legal currency of the United States, or Treasury notes, or notes of the Bank of the United States, or notes of banks which are payable and paid, on demand, in the said legal currency of the United States."

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 10, 1835.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office transmits to the Secretary of the Treasury, by request, copies of all the circular letters issued by him since the 30th June last.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Circular to registers and receivers of the United States land offices, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 22, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: Annexed is a copy of an act of Congress, approved 19th June, 1834, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,'" approved May twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and thirty, together with a copy of the former act.

1st. The recent act provides, "that every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year 1833, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May 29th, 1830, and the said act is hereby revived, and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer," to wit, to the 19th June, 1836.

2d. The fact of cultivation in eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and that of possession of the land applied for on the nineteenth of June, eighteen hundred and thirty-four must be established by the affidavit of the claimant, supported by such corroborative testimony of disinterested witnesses as shall be satisfactory to you both. The evidence must be taken by a justice of the peace in the presence of the register and receiver, wherever convenient, and be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by them, as may be best calculated to elicit the truth; and when not convenient for the witnesses to attend before the register and receiver, the evidence is to be taken by a justice of the peace, and be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by him, as shall be best calculated to elicit the truth.

The credibility of the testimony is to be certified by the justice of the peace, and by such other persons of the neighborhood as can certify the same.

3d. Possession on 19th June, 1834, and cultivation in 1833, are both essentially necessary to the conferring of the pre-emption privilege, the absence of either of which requisites will vitiate the claim. The building of a mill is a "possession," but, without actual cultivation, it does not confer the privilege under the law. The extent and nature of the cultivation are points concerning which the law is silent. The cultivation of a crop of grain, esculent roots, or other vegetables of ordinary culture in the peculiar section of the country, is to be regarded as sufficient as respects the requisite of "cultivation," together with the ordinary fence or other suitable enclosure; or, when no crop or product has been taken from the land, and it shall appear to your satisfaction that the claimant has, in good faith, made the usual preparations for a crop, as, when he shall have cleared ground and enclosed the field, and ploughed the soil preparatory to the ensuing seed-time, and with intent to sow or plant, such shall be regarded and taken as a sufficient cultivation to entitle him to the benefit of the act.

The erection of a dwelling-house, for the purposes of habitation, will be regarded as a requisite of "possession."

4th. The provisions of the act are not available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required, before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor can the right of pre-emption extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which by law may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever.

5th. Should any tract of land, subject to private entry at the date of the act, be entered at ordinary private sale, and a pre-emption claim be duly established thereto within the term of two years from the date of the act, the former entry is null and void, and the register and receiver are hereby required to make monthly reports of all such interfering sales, designating the tract, date of sale, name of purchaser, quantity of acres, and purchase money; also, name of pre-emptor and date when satisfactory proof of pre-emption was admitted. On such reports, orders for repayment will be issued.

6th. Where a person inhabits one quarter section and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other, at his discretion, provided such occupant shall designate, within six months from the passage of this act, (viz. from 19th June, 1834,) the quarter section of which he claims the pre-emption, and file in the office of the register a relinquishment of the right of entry to the other; but in all cases where those six months shall expire before the date of the public sale of the township, including such claim, the designation and relinquishment must be made prior to the day of such sale.

7th. Where an improvement is situate in different quarter sections, the claimant is entitled to enter such two adjacent legal subdivisions, viz., the east and west half-quarters, as will include his improvement.

8th. Where an improvement is situate on a fraction containing less than the quantity of a quarter section, such fraction must be taken in lieu of an entire quarter section. Should the fraction contain more than the quantity of a quarter section, the claimant will be permitted to take according to the legal subdivisions of such fraction, so as to include his improvements, and obtain the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, as nearly as practicable, without any further subdivision.

9th. In cases where two or more persons are settled on the same quarter section, the two first actual settlers who cultivated in 1833, and had possession on 19th June, 1834, are entitled to the right of pre-emption. If an equal division of such quarter by a north and south, or east and west line will not secure to each party his improvements, they must become joint purchasers and patentees of the entire quarter section; if otherwise, it will be divided so as to secure to the parties respectively, their improvements; in either case, the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

10th. You are requested to make monthly reports of those cases where two persons obtain a pre-emption on the same quarter section.

11th. Transfers of pre-emption rights, prior to the issuing of patents, will not be recognized.

12th. The act of 20th May, 1830, applied only to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished at that date. Hence the right of pre-emption to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished subsequent to that date, can be claimed only in virtue of cultivation in 1833, and possession on 19th June, 1834.

13th. In making your usual returns to this office, you will, in all cases of purchases under this act, designate them by marking on the returns the certificate of purchase and receipt thus: "Pre-emption, act of 1834." Separate returns, and a distinct series of numbers for pre-emption "receipts" and "certificates," are not admissible.

14th. Inasmuch as the ordinary private entry of lands, subject thereto at the date of the act, must be permitted to proceed at the hazard of interfering with the pre-emption claims which may be established within the two years allowed by the act, it is indispensably necessary, by way of precaution, to require each applicant at private sale to file with his written "application" an affidavit to the following effect, to wit:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that, since the first day of January, 1834, viz., on or about the ——— day of ———, I personally inspected the tract of land designated in the annexed application, viz., the ——— quarter of section No. ———, in township No. ———, of range No. ———, in the district of lands subject to sale at ———, and that there was not, at the time, any person residing thereon, or cultivating the same; and I do not believe that any pre-emption right exists thereto, either under the act of 29th May, 1830, or that of 19th June, 1834."

In case the party applying to purchase did not personally inspect the tract, he may be permitted to file, in the above form, the oath, or affirmation, of any person who alleges to have made such personal inspection; and, in all cases, you must be satisfied of the credibility of such testimony.

15th. Where the occupant alleges that he is unable or unwilling to pay for a full quarter section, he may be permitted to enter the half quarter which shall include his improvements, to be either the east or west half of such quarter, the divisional line running north and south, in the mode prescribed by the act of 24th April, 1820; but in such case he will be required to file a relinquishment of his further right of pre-emption for the quantity authorized by the act.

16th. You are each entitled by law to receive from the party interested a fee of fifty cents on each case of pre-emption admitted under the act.

17th. The evidences adduced in support of pre-emption rights admitted under this act, and also the oaths required of purchasers at ordinary private sale, are to be carefully enclosed in the appropriate certificates of purchase, and transmitted therewith to this office, accompanied by your joint certificate as to the credibility of the witnesses.

The evidences adduced in support of cases not admitted, are to be carefully filed in the register's office, with suitable endorsements thereon.

18th. By the 3d section of the act of 19th June, 1834, persons residing on the public lands, and cultivating the same, prior to the year 1829, but who were deprived of the advantage of the act of 29th May, 1830, by reason of the construction given to the same by the Secretary of the Treasury, are authorized to enter, at the minimum price, one quarter section of the public lands within said land district. This provision can be available only to those whose right to a pre-emption in virtue of cultivation and possession prior to 1829 shall be established by satisfactory proof; and who, from any cause originating in the restrictions and limitations imposed by the Secretary of the Treasury, which have not had a remedy by the act of 14th July, 1832, or that of 2d March, 1833, have been deprived of the advantages of the act of 1830. When such cases shall be presented, you will specially report them, with all the testimony, for the decision of the department.

19th. Where floating rights to eighty acres are granted under this act, they must be located and paid for at the time of entry of the tracts on which such floating rights accrue.

In the execution of the act, the utmost vigilance and diligence, on your part, are requisite to detect fraud, and determine the character and credibility of the testimony. A faithful and impartial discharge of your duty are alike essential to protect the government from imposition, and the honest claimant in his right.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

——— ———, Commissioner.

P. S.—It will be proper to give publicity to the law, and to these instructions, by distributing copies of this circular throughout your land district; for which purpose, a number of copies will be furnished. It is also desirable that the newspapers published in your district should gratuitously publish the same, for the information of the community.

The forms of journal and ledger now used by the register and receiver will be discontinued from and after the 1st of October next. A form of ledger, to be substituted by the receiver, will be furnished as soon as practicable.

AN ACT to revive the act entitled "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved May 29, 1830.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved May twenty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and thirty; and the said act is hereby revived, and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That, where a person inhabits one quarter section and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other, at his discretion: Provided, such occupant shall designate, within six months from the passage of this act, the quarter section of which he claims the pre-emption under the same.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all persons residing on the public lands, and cultivating the same, prior to the year eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, and who were deprived of the advantages of the law passed on the twenty-ninth May, eighteen hundred and thirty, by the constructions placed on said law by the Secretary of the Treasury, be, and they are hereby, authorized to enter, at the minimum price of the government, one quarter section of the public lands within said land district.

Approved June 19, 1834.

ANDREW JACKSON.

AN ACT to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter with the register of the land office for the district in which such lands may lie, by legal subdivisions, any number of acres not more than one hundred and sixty, or a quarter section, to include his improvement, upon paying to the United States the then minimum price of said land: Provided, however, that no entry or sale of any lands shall be made, under the provisions of this act, which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States, or either of the several States in which any of the public lands may be situated.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if two or more persons be settled upon the same quarter section, the same may be divided between the two first actual settlers, if, by a north and south, or east and west line, the settlement or improvement of each can be included in a half-quarter section; and in such case the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That, prior to any entries being made under the privileges given by this act, proof of settlement or improvement shall be made to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the land district in which such lands may lie, agreeably to the rules to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for that purpose; which register and receiver shall each be entitled to receive fifty cents for his services therein; and that all assignments and transfers of the right of pre-emption given by this act prior to the issuance of patents shall be null and void.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not delay the sale of any of the public lands of the United States beyond the time which has been or may be appointed for that purpose by the President's proclamation; nor shall any of the provisions of this act be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor shall the right of pre-emption contemplated by this act extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which may have been appropriated for any purpose whatever.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act shall be and remain and be in force for one year from and after its passage.

Approved May 29, 1830.

ANDREW JACKSON.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 28, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: The forms of journal and ledger, heretofore prescribed for the use of your respective offices, will be forthwith discontinued in the register's office, and from and after the 30th day of September next in the receiver's office, at which time a new form of "quarterly account books" will go into operation.

The records of sales and forms hereafter to be used in the register's office will, with the exception of journal and ledger, be as heretofore described, viz., forms of applications, certificate of purchase, register of certificates of purchase, tract book, township plats, and the monthly abstract of sales to be rendered to this office.

The forms to be used in the receiver's office, from and after the 30th September next, will be the form of receipt, the register of receipts, the monthly return of register of receipts, to be transmitted to this office; the form of monthly account current, duplicates of which are to be rendered, one to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the other to this office; and the "quarterly account book," which will commence on the 1st of October next. On the last days of March, June, September, and December, the columns in the quarterly account book are to be added up, and closed for the quarter; and transcripts therefrom are to be rendered to this office for examination and adjustment, on printed blank sheets, corresponding with the form of the book, and with which you will be furnished by this office.

Herewith is transmitted to the receiver a short illustration of the operation of the quarterly account book.

The vast amount of labor that will be saved to both your offices by dispensing with the journal and ledger, is such that no case can now be imagined where any apology for arrears will hereafter be sustained.

In order to ascertain the precise amount of moneys accounted for, on which the receiver is to charge his commission of one per cent, and which charge is always to constitute the concluding item in the debit of the account, he is to be governed by the following rule, taking the items of the illustrative sheet for an example, viz:

Add together the items on which the commission is allowable (except the receiver's own commission), viz: Moneys deposited in bank, $10,031.57; compensation for depositing the same, $18.47; military land scrip and forfeited land stock, $416; contingent expenses, $33; salaries, $250; register's commission, $24.43; forming an aggregate sum of..... $10.773 47
To which is to be added the receiver's commission, as ascertained by the subjoined rule 108 82

Forming the amount accounted for, on which commission is allowed..... $10,882 29

Rule.—Rate of Commission.

If 99 : 1 : : $10,773.47 : $108.82, the answer.

Regulations as to the preservation of township plats, marking the tracts sold, &c.

Where township tracts have become either mutilated, or so defaced by various marks of sales, relinquishments, forfeitures, resales, &c., as to render it difficult at once to decide with certainty what lands remain unsold, the register is required to attach to the plat a sheet or half sheet of paper, (as the circumstances may require,) stout, and of good quality, and of a size sufficient to admit of indicating all the tracts in such townships, by their appropriate numbers, which remain unsold on a certain fixed day, (viz., 1st day of October, 1834, or any other period after the receipt of this letter of instruction,) and which fact of such lands remaining unsold is to be certified by the register on the paper so attached. It may be that, to discriminate between the sold and unsold tracts in some townships where the plats are old, and the marks numerous and complicated, will be attended with some trouble, but it must be done; and when the examination is once thoroughly made, the exhibit in the mode here intended will save much greater trouble hereafter. The paper so attached to the township plat should be divided off into four columns, the first to contain the number of the section, and its legal subdivisions, remaining unsold; the second column the quantity of acres; the third is to admit of the insertion, hereafter, of the number of the certificate; and the fourth, of the name of the purchaser when the sale shall take place. The labor as well as expense saved to the register by dispensing with the journal and ledger entries, will abundantly compensate him for the trouble of placing the plats in the situation here intended, to afford future facilities to purchasers, and which is not in anywise intended to interfere with the tract book, which is to be most particularly and punctually kept up as heretofore required.

Instead of the indications of sales heretofore made on the plats by the letters A, P, or S, the register is hereby directed, in future, invariably to insert on the plat the figures denoting the number of the certificate of purchase, which, corresponding with the number of the application, and that of the receiver's receipt, will be the means of immediate reference to all the particulars of sale in the records. Such figuring, however, must be inserted with great accuracy and neatness, so as never to lead to misconception as to their nature, and be so judiciously arranged as never to admit of doubt as to the tract of land they are intended to cover, and at the same time should be so distinctly formed as to be immediately discriminated from the numbers inserted on the plat by the surveyor general.

In the marking of the plats a finely pointed pen should always be used. A pen made from the crow quill, (such as used by draughtsmen,) or a good steel pen, should always be employed for this purpose.

In marking the sale of subdivisions of fractional sections, which are indicated by red lines on the plats, no doubt can arise as to the tract the figures intend to indicate; but in marking minute subdivisions of entire sections, which are not subdivided on the plat, the greatest caution is necessary to prevent mistakes. In marking the sale of a quarter-quarter section, I would recommend that you first indicate the subdivision intended by red dotted lines, within which the figures are to be inserted: the same mode to be observed in marking the sale of a half-quarter section. In some cases it may be most judicious as well as convenient to make the figures lie from south to north, in others from west to east.

It is represented that in some offices the plats have been greatly impaired by improper handling, or in consequence of registers permitting copies to be taken by purchasers or others. Registers are hereby positively forbidden from permitting copies to be taken, either by purchasers or others, or from permitting plats to be ever handled by purchasers under any pretext whatever. The continual and unnecessary fingering of those important documents, by soiled hands, in a very short time tends to their inevitable obliteration; and, with a view to afford all the necessary facilities for inspecting plats, without the danger of further injury to them from the cause stated, each register is required to procure panes of clear white glass for the use of purchasers, one of which is to be always placed over the plat while it is undergoing inspection. The great difficulty as well as expense attending the renewal of a set of plats, when once destroyed, renders the adoption of this otherwise apparently trivial precaution for their preservation of great importance.

In order to afford every due facility in making references to the township plats, each register should provide his office (in case he has not already so done) with a plain pine table on which to display them, and which should be furnished with drawers to contain the plats, unless a case has already been provided under former instructions to answer the same purpose. If necessary, in the larger offices, two tables may be provided. In whatever receptacle the plats are deposited, they must be locked up, and the register must allow no person to have access either to them or the tract book, after the hours of business; and the register or his confidential agent must always be present while purchasers are inspecting them.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

The Register of the land office and Receiver of public moneys at

Circular to the registers and receivers of those land districts which include lands ceded to the United States by the Choctaw treaty of the 27th of September, 1830.

General Land Office, September 24, 1834.

Gentlemen: I have to state for your information and government, that, on the 17th instant, the Secretary of the Treasury decided that "it is the opinion of the department that the floating rights of entry granted by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and by the act of the 20th April, 1832, (respecting Jefferson college,) should be restricted to unimproved lands, unless otherwise directed by the terms of the grant; and that they cannot be exercised to the prejudice of settlers and occupants of the public lands, claiming a right of pre-emption under the provisions of the act of the 19th June last."

With great respect, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

Sent to the following individuals, in reply to their inquiries, 27th September, 1834:

Messrs. Cocke & Rose, Columbus, Mississippi; Edward Sims, Esquire, Columbus Mississippi; A. B. Dearing, Esquire, Cedar creek, Lowndes county, Mississippi; Talbot Adams, Esquire, Jamestown, Sumpter county, Alabama; Hon. Samuel W. Mardis, Montevallo, Alabama; Daniel Greene, Esquire, Havana, Greene county, Alabama; Robert W. Washington, Esquire, Jamestown, Sumpter county, Alabama; John C. Whitsitt, Esquire, Gainesville, Alabama.

To registers and receivers of the United States land offices.—Supplemental instructions under the pre-emption law of 19th June, 1834, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 23, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of representations made to the department respecting the operation of the third clause of the instructions contained in the circular letter of 22d July last, I have to inform you that the Secretary of the Treasury, unwilling to withhold the advantages of the late pre-emption law from applicants who may have meritorious and substantial claims to its benefits, and who, by reason of circumstances peculiar in their character, have no actual residence on the land claimed, has concluded so to modify the instruction complained of, as to admit, as exceptions from the general principle, such cases of the character referred to, as, in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion on your part, shall appear from facts, satisfactorily proven, to come within the meaning and intent of the act. The following are cited as examples of the cases expressly referred to:

Where the cultivation may have been made by an unmarried person, without family, boarding and lodging with another family resident on a tract adjoining, or in the immediate vicinity of his improvements; or by a married person living in a similar manner, where there has been actual and bona fide intention to reside on the land cultivated, but where the preparation was not complete, or the intention was frustrated by unavoidable accident; where the tract cultivated may have been a necessary and integral portion of a farm or plantation of an individual residing on an adjoining tract, and where, without the aid of the proceeds of such additional cultivation, he could not have maintained himself and family, and continued to reside where he did; or where, by reason of the unhealthy location of the lands cultivated, the individual may have fixed his residence on a neighboring tract; in all these cases, and others analogous in their circumstances and spirit, where the facts are distinctly proven, and where, in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion, you are satisfied that they come within the meaning and intent of the law, the third clause of the circular letter referred to, which regards the erection of a dwelling-house for the purpose of habitation as a requisite of "possession," is modified so as to admit the right of entry.

2d. No pre-emption right to section No. 16, reserved for schools, can be sustained under existing laws, nor will the act of 19th June, 1834, admit of a floating right of pre-emption elsewhere, in virtue of a settlement and improvement in the sixteenth section. Individual claimants considering themselves aggrieved, under such circumstances, will have to prefer their claims to Congress.

3d. Where an individual establishes a right of pre-emption to a fractional section containing less than one hundred and sixty acres, or to a half-quarter section, the other half of which was sold previous to the date of the act, or to a residuary quarter-quarter of a section, (which residuary quarter-quarter must have been made such by locations made under the act of 5th April, 1832, inasmuch as quarter-quarters of sections cannot originally be selected as such under the pre-emption law,) in all such cases, the fraction, the half-quarter, or the quarter-quarter, is to be regarded as a separate and distinct tract, beyond the quantity of which the party can claim no right to locate elsewhere, or on adjoining lands; but in cases where two or more individuals are settled on any one such tract, the two first actual settlers are entitled to enter in their joint names, and each of these two is entitled to receive a floating right to eighty acres elsewhere.

4th. Where A settled on and cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and prior to the 19th June, 1834, sold his right to B, who continued to improve and occupy the same on that day, B is regarded as entitled to the benefits of the act.

5th. Where A cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and had placed B thereon as tenant in possession, who continued to improve and cultivate the same on the 19th June, 1834, A is regarded as entitled to the right of pre-emption, on due proof of cultivation and occupancy, as required by the act. But in case A, prior to the year 1833, had placed a tenant on a tract of public land, who cultivated and possessed, agreeably to the tenor of the act, the right of pre-emption is to accrue to the tenant.

6th. The testimony heretofore required to be taken before a justice of the peace, may also be taken before a notary public, or any other officer duly qualified to administer oaths.

7th. Where there were more than two actual settlers on a tract, floating rights accrue to the two first actual settlers, and to none of the others.

8th. Quarter-quarters of sections are created only by the operation of the act of 5th April, 1832, entitled "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands."

The right to enter and make payment for quarter-quarters of sections, (lots of forty acres,) under the act of 19th June, 1834, can be claimed only in cases where residuary quarter-quarters are found to exist in a section, they having been created separate and distinct legal subdivisions by the peculiar operation of the act of 1832.

☞ While on this subject, I have to mention that, on inspecting the names of purchasers, it is apprehended that due caution is not observed by registers, in operating under the act of 1832, which provides that no one individual can enter more than eighty acres, in tracts of forty acres. Increased vigilance is strictly enjoined in this respect; and, in order to ensure a strict compliance with the law, the register is hereby required to keep an alphabetical list of the names of purchasers of quarter-quarters of sections, which list must always be referred to as a check, prior to the admission of entries of land in that mode, under the act aforesaid.

9th. In cases where individuals have settled on public lands since the passage of the act of 19th June, 1834, the form of affidavit prescribed in the 14th clause of the circular letter of 22d July last, may be varied to suit the peculiar circumstances of such case, by striking out the words "and that there was not, at that time, any person residing thereon, or cultivating the same;" and inserting, in lieu thereof, all the facts in the case as they are found to exist.

10th. Military land scrip cannot, under existing laws, be located on any public lands settled or occupied, "without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said lands at the time the same shall be entered or applied for." Such settlement or occupancy, therefore, although it may or may not have reference to any existing pre-emption privilege, is a bar to the location of the scrip, without the written consent of the settler or occupant. The form of the affidavit prescribed for such cases by the circular letter of 2d October, 1833, will substantially remain unaltered; but in cases where individuals are desirous of locating scrip, it is not deemed necessary to require from them two separate affidavits—one under the circular of 2d October, 1833, and another under the 14th clause of the circular of 22d July last; but the substance of both these forms may be incorporated into one affidavit.

11th. Payment is to be required in all cases arising under the late pre-emption law, at the time the right of entry is admitted. In cases arising under the third section, or in such as may be of doubtful character, and which you may deem it necessary to refer for the decision of the department, payment will not be required until a favorable decision is communicated. Meanwhile, the land claimed is to be withheld from sale.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Commissioner of the General Land Office.

P. S.—It has been the usual practice of this office to acknowledge the receipt of the monthly and quarterly returns. Henceforward, that practice, which consumes time, and creates unnecessary labor will be discontinued. If returns are not promptly rendered, the reason of the delay will be promptly demanded.

The register is requested to report to the surveyor general, lists of such township plats as require renewal, in consequence of mutilation or defacement, and also to forward to this office a copy of such report.

The "quarterly account book," described in the circular letter of 28th August last, for the use of receivers, and also a supply of printed blanks, for making quarterly returns to this office (in lieu of the form of quarterly accounts heretofore in use), have both been forwarded by mail some weeks since.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 15, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: You are requested to suspend from public sale, or private entry, or pre-emption rights alleged under the act of 19th June, 1834, such lands as are proposed to be selected by Indian chiefs, on floating rights arising under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, of 27th September, 1830, and report to this office the fact of your having so done, accompanied by all the testimony in reference to pre-emption rights alleged to such lands under the act aforesaid.

I am, &c., &c., ELIJAH HAYWARD.

To the REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at Chocchuma, Columbus, Mount Salus and Augusta, Mississippi, and Tuscaloosa, Demoplis, and St. Stephen's, Alabama.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 5, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: I herewith transmit, for your information and government, a copy of a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, dated 18th ultimo, on the subject of locating floating rights, secured to certain Indians by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek.

You are requested to apprise this office of all pre-emption claims, alleged to lands located under the floating rights of the description referred to, and transmit the testimony adduced in support thereof, as required by my letter of the 15th ultimo, accompanied by your opinion as to the merits of each case.

I am, &c., &c.,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

To the REGISTER and RECEIVER at Mount Salus, Augusta, Chocchuma, and Columbus, Mississippi, St. Stephen's, Tuscaloosa, and Demopolis, Alabama.

LIST OF BALANCES AGAINST RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS ON ACCOUNT OF THE SALES OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 13, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Comptroller's Office, January 13, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit, herewith, the following list of balances against receivers of public moneys on account of the sales of public lands which have remained due, or unsettled on the books of the Treasury, for more than three years prior to the 30th September, 1834.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

JOS. ANDERSON, Comptroller.

HON. JOHN BELL, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

List of balances due by receivers of public moneys, on account of sales of public lands, which have remained due or unsettled on the books of the Treasury for more than three years prior to September 30, 1834.

District.	Name of receiver.	Amount.	Remarks by the Solicitor of the Treasury.	Remarks by the Comptroller of the Treasury.
Steubenville, Ohio...	Peter Wilson.....	$9,909 26	Judgment against the principal at July term, 1827, for $9,909.26. His estate was sold under execution by the marshal, on the 15th May, 1830, for the sum of $2,423.11. Of this sum, property to the amount of $1,590 was purchased by the district attorney, as U. S. agent, &c. The suits against his sureties, Myers and Campbell, are still pending. Since the date of the judgment against the principal the sum of $2,059.28 has been deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States.

Judgment against the principal, at September term, 1828, for $26,112.12. The suit against the administrator of John Rice Jones, surety of Strother, is still pending. Balance increased to $27,051.64, including interest, up to May 15, 1834, the date of last settlement.
Jackson, Missouri....	Tunstal Quarles	1,060 95	Distress warrant issued in this case, August 20, 1833, against the principal and George F. Strother, his only surety, for the recovery of $1,060.95. Principal returned "Non est inventus." Surety not liable under the act of 15th May, 1820, the bond bearing date April 17, 1820.
Opelousas, Louisiana.	Wm. Garrard.....	27,230 57	Suit ordered in this case December 2, 1825, against principal and his sureties for $27,230.57. Cause continued and dismissed at August term, 1830, by order of the presiding judge, it appearing to the court that the process was irregular, &c. The district attorney was instructed, by letter, dated November 3, 1830, to renew the suit, which has been done. In the attorney's report for September, 1833, he states that no term of court has been held in his district since August term, 1830.
Opelousas, Louisiana.	Luke Lecassier.....	6,893 95	Suit ordered September 13, 1825, against the principal and his sureties for $12,893.95 A payment of $6,000 was made by the district attorney April 29, 1828, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, which reduced the balance to $6,893.95. For this last-mentioned balance the suit is still pending. Debt considered good. No court held in the western district of Louisiana since August term, 1830.
N. Orleans, Louisiana.	Nathaniel Cox	4,163 56	A distress warrant issued in this case, August 20, 1833, against the principal and John Fowles, his only surety, for the recovery of $4,163.56. EXPOSITION OF THE TREATY WITH SPAIN OF FEBRUARY 22, 1819, IN RELATION TO SPANISH GRANTS OF LAND IN LOUISIANA, BETWEEN THE PERDIDO AND MISSISSIPPI RIVERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 14, 1835.

No. 1.—Exposition of the Florida treaty, by Joseph M. White, Esq.

The treaty of the 22d of February, 1819, between his Catholic Majesty and the United States was intended, as declared in the preamble attached to it, "to consolidate, on a permanent basis, friendship and good correspondence; and to settle and terminate all their differences and pretensions, by a treaty which shall designate, with precision, the limits of their respective bordering territories in North America."

One of these "differences," thus proposed to be terminated, was of deep interest, long standing, and protracted negotiation, relating to the boundaries between Louisiana and West Florida. The conflicting "pretension" of each power was to the jurisdiction and dominion of the territory lying between the Mississippi and Perdido rivers; and the object of this treaty, as recited, was to designate and settle this question of limits.

The controversy grew out of the extent of the Louisiana cession in 1803, after that colony was ceded by his Catholic Majesty, in a secret treaty of San Ildefonso, dated the 1st of October, 1800, to the French republic; and after the delivery of the province, by the Spanish commissioners Don Manuel Salcedo and the Marquis of Casa Calvo to the French prefect Lausat, and by him, under the subsequent cession of 1803, with the same designated limits, to the United States, the latter set up a claim to all the territory east of the Mississippi, as far as the Perdido. This district of country was neither delivered by Spain to France, nor by France to the United States, as a part of the Louisiana cession. The colony of Louisiana was quietly considered and accepted by the authorities of all three governments, with the limits designated in the act of delivery, without exception, qualification, or protest. Spain remained in possession of West Florida, being all the country east of the Mississippi river, and the island of New Orleans, which was neither ceded nor delivered to France by the stipulations of the treaty of San Ildefonso, nor by the latter to the United States.

In 1804 the government of the United States set up a sort of equivocal title to the territory in question, in which they had so little confidence, that, upon the first protest of Spain, they so construed their law as to abandon the right to establish a custom house at Mobile.

In 1805 they created an extraordinary mission to Madrid, to negotiate on the subject, which negotiation resulted in an entire failure. France and Spain both maintained that this territory was no part of the colony of Louisiana. Our negotiators having failed at Aranjuez, in 1805, to satisfy either Don Pedro Cevallos or his government, or to convince Prince Talleyrand, or the First Consul, that there was any justice in their pretension, set on foot, in the year 1809, a secret negotiation with the local authorities, to induce them to surrender the province of their royal master. This also failed, and they then stimulated an insurrection in the province, and took possession of it, avowedly to put down the rebellion, and to hold the territory subject to future negotiations.

A proclamation was issued in 1810, stating in the preamble the confidence the government of the United States had in their title, and that they would take possession of the same, with the explicit declaration that "it will not cease to be a subject of fair and friendly negotiation and adjustment."

The Spanish authorities remained in possession of this territory from 1803 up to 1810, exercising all the rights of jurisdiction and dominion; and granted about one out of the ten millions of acres of land. The government, de facto, during the seven years, is a fact which will not and cannot be questioned.

Spain, at the time of this proclamation, was desolated by Napoleon's army, and his Catholic Majesty in duress. I say nothing of the time selected to seize upon this province. It was alleged to be held subject to negotiation, but very soon partitioned out.

In all the correspondence between the two governments, from 1810 to 1819, Spain solemnly protested against that construction of the Louisiana treaty, both at Madrid and at Washington. (See the correspondence annexed hereto.)

The treaty of 1819 terminated the controversy between the two governments, and definitively settled the question of jurisdiction and sovereignty.

The second article is in these words, upon the English side: "His Catholic Majesty cedes to the United States, in full property and sovereignty, all the territories which belong to him, situated to the eastward of the Mississippi, known by the name of East and West Florida." The Spanish side is more emphatic: "Todos los Territorios que le pertenecen situados al este del Mississippi, cornocidos bajo el nombre de Florida occidental y Florida oriental," known under the name of West Florida: thus designating a territory known under the name of West Florida and East Florida. It will be observed that this was the cession of territories not east of Perdido, but east of the Mississippi.

The confirmatory article is coëxtensive with the article of cession. It provides that all claims in "the ceded territories shall remain ratified and confirmed." The treaty, it has been said, terminated the political question between the two nations. The subordinate question arising between the individual grantees, under titles made by the legitimate authorities of the crown of Spain, between the years 1803 and 1810, whilst Spain remained in possession of this territory, is now presented for consideration and decision.

If the United States had recognized these titles, as it is believed was the understanding of the contracting parties, it would have prevented the development in these papers, which for many reasons should have been avoided. These claims have not been admitted as yet by the United States, and these claimants are obliged to present the question for the legislative and judicial departments of the government.

If the territory lying between the Mississippi and Perdido rivers was in fact ceded as a part of the colony of Louisiana, then Spain had no right to grant any portion of it subsequent to the date of that treaty in 1803. If, on the other hand, the United States did not acquire the territory until the Florida treaty, then Spain had a right to grant the lands between the years 1803 and 1810. The United States, prior to the conclusion of the treaty of 1819, had no other knowledge of the contents of the treaty of San Ildefonso than that part of it quoted in the Louisiana treaty. The whole of that treaty is hereto annexed, and marked A. Taken in conjunction with the other public papers, never before published in this country, marked B, it will explain the object of the contending parties. Prior to 1762, the respective rights of Great Britain, Spain, and France were but little understood, either in Europe or in this country. Each power set up the most exorbitant pretensions to territory, founded upon the uncertain and indefinite title of discovery.

It was the object of the treaties of 1762 and '3 to settle their pretensions to colonial aggrandizement. In the absence of these papers, which distinctly explain the understanding of all the parties as to the precise limits of Louisiana and West Florida, the United States have endeavored to establish some claim, founded upon this uncertain source of title, to be established by reference to vague maps and unauthenticated speculations of geographers.

It is not deemed necessary to go into these questions. It is enough to establish the fact, that in the year 1762 all the territory west of the Mississippi, including the island of New Orleans, was called the colony of Louisiana; and all the territory east of that river and the island was called West Florida. France ceded Louisiana to Spain, and West Florida to England. France, however, remained in possession of Louisiana until 1769. The formal delivery of Louisiana was made on the 21st of April, 1764, but Spain could not get possession or exercise jurisdiction until 1769.

The third article of the treaty of San Ildefonso provides that his Catholic Majesty engages to "recede the colony or province of Louisiana, with the same extent it now has in the lands of Spain, and had while in the possession of France." What was once Louisiana became two colonies in 1762, under different names, transferred to different powers. The two colonies, by conquest and treaty, again came under the dominion of Spain, but they preserved their separate names and separate governments.

Louisiana, as it "is now in the hands of Spain," i. e., in 1800, was not as France possessed it prior to 1762. The name and government of West Florida must have been extinguished, and the territory reannexed to the colony as it then was. France had possessed this colony from 1762 to 1764, before Spain signified her acceptance of it, and until 1769, before Spain got quiet possession of it. His Catholic Majesty receded the province of Louisiana. It is a perversion of terms to say a recession of a province will include another province never ceded by the grantor, but taken by conquest from another power. We have in these papers the clear, unsophisticated understanding of France and Spain. It is apparent that Spain did not intend, and did not in fact cede to France any portion of territory east of the Mississippi in the year 1800. It is shown that France did not receive or claim any portion of this territory under that treaty, but subsequent to its date proposed a distinct treaty to acquire it. France could only transfer what she had acquired, and no more.

The negotiation of the treaty on the part of France was confided to Monsieur Barte Marlois, who was instructed to consult Prince Talleyrand. The map of Monsieur Marlois shows the extent of the cession, as understood by himself and the ministers of the United States. There are numerous maps, histories, papers, and documents going to establish this view of the subject. It is unnecessary to refer to them. It is too clear for argument. The United States never had a legitimate claim to this territory until 1819. The question then arises as to the titles to be confirmed within the ceded territories. This requires an examination into the principles of international law applicable to the construction of this treaty. I have said that by the treaty of the 22d February, 1819, Spain ceded the Floridas to the United States.

The latter acquired these provinces and their appendages in full sovereignty, including all public grounds and edifices, and all vacant lands which were not private property.*

It was stipulated between the high contracting parties, that all grants made by his Catholic Majesty, or his lawful authorities, before the 24th of January, 1818, in the ceded territory, should remain confirmed and acknowledged in the same manner as they would have been if the province had continued under the dominion of his Catholic Majesty.† Further time was given to proprietors who had been prevented from fulfilling the conditions of their grants, by the recent circumstances of the Spanish monarchy, and the revolutions in Europe.

The inhabitants of the ceded territory were protected in all their rights, and became citizens of the United States.‡

Congress has, from time to time, adopted various legislative provisions for the purpose of preserving the national faith, separating private property from the public domain, and securing the individual titles intended to be protected by the treaty.

Commissioners were appointed to examine land claims, with authority to confirm grants not exceeding a certain size, and to report those above that limit to Congress. When these commissions were dissolved, similar powers were vested in the register and receiver in the land offices. In some instances, an option was given to the holders of certain grants to select a league square within their respective concessions, upon condition of surrendering the residue by deed to the United States. Through these and other means, the titles of the smaller proprietors have, for the most part, been definitively adjusted, and the larger claims alone remain for settlement. These, Congress, by act of 23d May, 1828, authorized the courts of the territory to hear and determine, with an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. Several cases have been adjudicated in the courts below. Decisions have been pronounced, not easily reconcilable, if not at total variance with each other; appeals have been taken, and the questions discussed are now before this court, whose judgment is deeply interesting, not merely to the parties on the record, but to the numerous other suitors whose rights, or supposed rights, depend on similar principles.

One or two considerations of a general nature may here, it is presumed, be not inappropriately introduced. Those who represent the interests of the United States in some of the cases before the court have thought proper to assume, as one ground of defence, that the confirmation or rejection of these titles is matter essentially of executive or legislative cognizance, and addresses itself exclusively to their discretion. The question they urge is a political, not a judicial one, and is equally unfit to be submitted to, and incapable of being decided by a court. Waiving all considerations of the hardship and mockery of referring claimants under a treaty to a tribunal incompetent to afford them redress, forbearing to touch on the indecorum of a construction which attributes to Congress an act of futile or deceptive legislation, it will be enough to say that this interpretation, it is believed, has been once considered and rejected.§

The argument, indeed, amounts to little more than this—we have bound ourselves to do what Spain would have done; what that is, we know not; and having referred the question to those who cannot decide it, we will therefore do nothing. Perfidy often wears the mask of subtlety, as well from shame as cowardice; but it is seldom that the counselors of bad faith, if they condescend to argue at all, are satisfied with a defence so feeble.

The act of Congress requires the court to examine and decide upon these claims in conformity with the law of nations, the treaty, and the laws of Spain.

It is proposed to consider the subject in reference to each of these several rules of decision.

First. The law of nations.

It is conceived that, according to the mitigated rights of war, as now well understood and settled by international law, the lands of individuals are safe even after conquest:‖ much less can a cession, of itself, destroy private rights. Absolute or perfect grants, it is believed, would be protected by the law of nations, independent of the treaty. Some legislative recognition of their validity might indeed be necessary to sustain a suit upon them in our courts, but the national obligation to respect them could hardly be denied. It is in behalf of concessions or inchoate grants that the stipulations of the treaty were most requisite and important. To the acts of the Spanish government in this respect, not merely the authority of res adjudicata, such as belongs to all foreign sentences and decrees, was given by the treaty; its effect was to make binding on us all that would have been valid against Spain, and to oblige us to complete whatever she, in good faith, had begun, but left unfinished.

A detailed examination of the maxims of customary international law, as they would bear upon the rights of proprietors of land in Florida, is not called for in the presence of an express treaty stipulation; and, in referring to the law of nations as a rule of decision for the courts, Congress, perhaps, had more expressly in view such part of it as relates to the interpretation of treaties. This will be more conveniently considered under another head.

Secondly. The treaty.

This instrument, it is contended, should be most liberally construed. Its interpretation is to be sought in the motives and policy of the parties; in their words and in their acts. The leading objects of the United States were, to procure a more convenient and secure frontier; to command the Gulf of Mexico, the outlet of a large portion of their commerce; to obtain indemnity for their merchants, and to secure themselves against the annoyance they must naturally expect from Florida, in the hands of an enemy or a false or feeble neutral. It is notorious that, for more than a century, this territory had been a constant source of injury, jealousy, and vexation to the adjoining colonies and States. The colony of Georgia was founded as a barrier against the encroachments of the Spaniards; and the refuge and encouragement afforded by the latter to absconding slaves, hostile Indians, and other incendiaries, was a continual cause of complaint, from the settlement of Carolina to the Seminole campaign. In examining the interests and duties of the United States in connection with this subject, it is not as landed proprietors alone that we must regard them. The rage for new settlements, indeed, makes this the chief point among the people, and greatly increases the prejudices against the large grants; but the court is far above the contagion of their example.

*Article 2d. †Article 8th. ‡Articles 5th and 6th. §Soulard's case, 4 Peters. ‖Vattel, b. III. c. 13, sec. 200.

To consider the cession of Florida merely as a land-jobbing transaction, would be doing great injustice to the liberal and enlightened policy which sought this valuable acquisition, with steady calmness, through so long a course of evasion and delay. Yet its value, even in that point of view, is not unworthy of notice. Thirty-five millions and a half of acres, of which, up the 30th of June, 1828, but little more than a million and a half had been granted or sold,* will surely, after making a most liberal allowance for the satisfaction of unsettled land claims, more than refund to us the five millions paid to our own merchants. Computing but thirty millions at the minimum price to which it is proposed to reduce the refuse lands, the United States will receive back their principal from the soil, and obtain the sovereignty for nothing.

It is admitted that, in the cession of a province, the disposition of the inhabitants and their effects is a question of policy between the parties. To divest them of their rights of property is, however, in modern times, an unheard of cruelty. Usually the option is allowed them of becoming subjects of the new government, or of selling their estates, and removing within a specified period. Such were the terms of cession of this very province from Spain to Britain in 1763, and from Britain to Spain twenty years afterwards. It will be borne in mind by the court that population rather than soil is the want of the United States; that their policy as to naturalization is as liberal as that which the wisest modern philosopher has praised in the greatest of the ancient republics; and that sovereignty, not soil, was the great motive for the acquisition.

Our government, it may safely be affirmed, neither contemplated the expulsion of the ancient inhabitants, or any injury to their property. The terms held out in the treaty ceding Louisiana, as well as that by which Florida was acquired, show that the United States never intended to grasp a barren sceptre, and wave it over a dispeopled territory. The inhabitants were made citizens. The province was to become a State. Can it be imagined that any rational government would act so unwisely as to receive into their society a large body of foreigners, endow them with civil rights and political power, and, after rendering them disaffected, by stripping them of their property, leave to these malcontents the protection of an extensive, important, and exposed frontier?

Many of the motives which must have operated on Spain are equally obvious. She naturally wished to extinguish demands, the justice of which had been admitted, while their satisfaction had been evaded until all the arts of procrastination were exhausted. She might desire to get rid of a useless and expensive appendage; and she must have foreseen that it would probably be wrested from her as an indemnity, if she trifled much longer with our patience. But, in yielding up the inhabitants with the territory, she would naturally stipulate most favorably for the people she was about to surrender. She did not intend to sacrifice them. Their fidelity to her in every vicissitude, the temptations by which they had been assailed, the invasions to which they had been exposed, their sufferings, their constancy, their very helplessness, all pleaded powerfully in their favor.

In the 8th article, two parties were stipulating for the security and advantage of a third, whom both had the strongest reasons to cherish and protect. It is submitted, therefore, with some degree of confidence, that, so far as the motives and policy of the parties afford a key to the meaning of their words, the construction most favorable to the claimants is permitted to, nay, is enjoined upon the court.

Before proceeding to examine the language of the treaty, a few observations on the rules of interpretation may, perhaps, be pardoned. Jurors generally admit that all grants, contracts, and stipulations, are to be taken most strongly against the grantor.† The words of the party promising are to be regarded rather than those of the party to whom the promise is made.‡ Other general rules are to be found in the works of the most esteemed publicists, and must be familiar to the court.§ Among the rest, that interpretation which is drawn from the reason of the act is strongly and safely recommended.‖ A special rule of construction has, moreover, been deduced from the character of the stipulation itself; hence, the distinction between things favorable and things odious—a distinction recognized by Grotius and Vattel.¶ The difference between the former, and mere acts of liberality prejudicial to the sovereign, is illustrated by the last-named author in such a manner as leaves no doubt to which class the provisions of the eighth article belong.

What, indeed, can be more clearly entitled to rank among things favorable, than engagements between nations securing the private property of faithful subjects, honestly acquired under a government which is on the eve of relinquishing their allegiance, and confided to the pledged protection of that country which is about to receive them as citizens?

This brings us to the words of the treaty. There is a difference between the English and the Spanish versions of the eighth article. Both are equally originals, but surely the justice and liberality of the United States will extend to the claimants the full benfit of either. The first difference is in rendering "concessiones de terrenos" as "grants of land." Concessiones, it is apprehended, is a term much broader than grants, and comprehends all which we, in the technical language of our land laws, might call entries or warrants of survey or location. The substitution of lawful, in the English, for legitimos, in the Spanish, will be commented on in another place. The residue of the clause, that those grants shall be ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of the lands, to the same extent that the same grants would be valid, &c., is by no means equivalent to the Spanish phrascology. The latter, fairly rendered, is to this effect: "All concessions of lands made by his Catholic Majesty, or by his legitimate authorities, before the 24th January, 1818, in the aforesaid territories, which his Majesty cedes to the United States, shall remain confirmed and acknowledged to the persons in possession of them, (i. e. the concessions,) in the same manner that they would have been if the dominion of his Catholic Majesty over these territories had continued."

The difference between declaring that these grants shall be ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of the lands, to the same extent that the same grants would have been valid, &c., and saying that all concessions of land shall remain confirmed and acknowledged to the persons in possession of them, (i. e. the title papers,) in the same manner that they would have been, &c., is sufficiently obvious and important. The sense is materially different. The English side of the treaty leaves the ratification of the grants executory—they shall be ratified; the Spanish, executed—they shall continue acknowledged and confirmed, queradan ratificados. Quedan signifies remain or continue, and in this sense is used in the last clause of the same article; quedan anuladas y de ningun valor, remain null, and of no effect. In the English, possession refers to the lands; in the Spanish, to the grants. The relative ellas agrees with the antecedent concessiones; if it be referred to terrenos, the relative word would have been ellos. No word equivalent to recent is to be found in the Spanish.

It has been supposed, with little reason, that the eighth article might be interpreted to confer a discretion, rather than impose an obligation on the American government. It is one of the admitted rules of construction, that interpretations which lead to an absurdity, or render an act null, are to be avoided.*

The King of Spain can annul a grant made by himself without any allegation of surprise or fraud, simply in virtue of his absolute will and sovereign power. It is too late for us to deny that position; we have recognized it by the treaty. The grants to Alagon, Vargas, and Puñon Rostro, were annulled. By the treaty we succeeded to all the rights of Spain; the concessions made by Spain are to continue valid to the same extent, &c.; but will it be asserted that, in succeeding to the rights of Spain, we succeed to the right of his Catholic Majesty to annul the grants of his subjects? Can it be pretended that the provisions of the eighth article were designed only to leave all grants, perfect and inchoate, as completely at the mercy of the American government as they had been at that of the Spanish monarch?

In attempting to ascertain the true meaning of the parties, it is humbly conceived we are not confined to the language of the treaty. We may look into the negotiations which preceded it. In this instance, there is a particular propriety in doing so. "As the instrument of ratification, an essential part of the whole treaty refers to the history of the negotiation; it lets in the whole of that history, as matter to be adverted to, according to all the strictness of legal argument, in reasoning on the construction of the claim in question. The matter is thus made capable of being argued as if the question were upon an act of parliament, or private deed, reciting the circumstances under which it was obtained. One might, therefore, rest, as elucidating the case, upon all the authorities which establish, with respect to private and diplomatic instruments, that, however general and comprehensive particular expressions may be, they ought in their effect to be confined to the particular objects the parties had in view. The reports of the court of chancery in England, contain a variety of instances as to the restriction of deeds, however widely expressed, to the particular object of the parties, founded on a review of the circumstances under which they were made. (Vide Chalmondly and Clinton.) It is also observed by Vattel, (268,) that we are to interpret a clause in the utmost latitude that the strict and appropriate meaning of the words will admit of, if it appears that the author had in view everything which that strict and appropriate meaning comprehends; but we must interpret it in a more liberal sense when it appears probable that the author did not mean it to extend to everything which the strict propriety of the terms might be made to include."†

A short sketch of the negotiations, with some brief extracts and references, will therefore be submitted. In January, 1818, the Government of the United States proposed to the Chevalier de Onis to terminate all differences on the following terms:

1. Spain to cede all territory eastward of the Mississippi.
2. The eastern boundary to be the Colorado.
3. Claims for indemnities to be referred to commissioners.
4. The lands in East Florida, and to the Perdido, to be held as security for the indemnities; but no grant subsequent to August 11, 1802, to be considered valid.
5. Spain to be released from the payment of the debts.‡

On the 24th October, 1818, Don Luis de Onis proposes to cede the Floridas: "the donations or sales of land made by the government of his Majesty, or by legal authorities, until this time, are nevertheless to be valid.§

The Secretary of State replies, October 31, 1818, "Neither can the United States recognize as valid all the grants of land until this time, and at the same time renounce all their claims for indemnity." He adverts to the notice given to the government of Spain, that all the grants lately made within those territories, (i. e. to Alagon, Vargas, &c.,) must be canceled, unless some other adequate fund should be provided to satisfy the claims of the United States and their citizens.‖

De Onis rejoins, 10th November, 1818, "My second proposal has been admitted by your government with this modification, that all grants and sales of land made by his Catholic Majesty, or by lawful Spanish authorities, in the Floridas, from the year 1802 to the present, shall be null and void. To this modification, in its absolute sense, I cannot consent, inasmuch as it is offensive to the dignity and imprescriptible rights of the crown of Spain, which, as the legitimate owner of both the Floridas, had a right to dispose of those lands as it pleased; and, further, as the said modification would be productive of incalculable injury to the bona fide possessors, who have acquired, settled, and improved those tracts of land."

"The extent of what I can agree to is, that the late grants made by his Catholic Majesty in the Floridas, since the 24th of January last, the date of my first note, announcing his Majesty's willingness to cede them to the United States, (the said grants having been made with a view to promote population, cultivation, and industry, and not with that of alienating them,) shall be declared null and void, in consideration of the grantees not having complied with the essential condition of the cession, as has been the fact."¶

On the 9th of February, 1819, the minister of Spain submitted his project of a treaty. The ninth article, answering the eighth of the present treaty, is as follows:

"All grants of land made by his Catholic Majesty, or his legitimate authorities, in the aforesaid territories of the two Floridas, and others, which his Majesty cedes to the United States, shall be confirmed and acknowledged as valid, excepting those grants which may have been made after the 24th of January last year, the date that the first proposals were made for the cession of those provinces, which shall be held null, in consideration of the grantees not having complied with the condition of the cession."*

On the 13th of February, 1819, the American Secretary offered his counter project, in which the eighth article proposed stands thus:

"All grants of land made by or in the name of his Catholic Majesty in the aforesaid territories, after the 24th of January, 1818, shall be held null, the conditions of the said grants not having been performed by the grantees. All grants made before that date by his Catholic Majesty, or by his legitimate authorities in the said territories, the conditions of which shall have been performed by the grantees according to the tenor of their respective grants, and none other, shall be confirmed, and acknowledged as valid."†

In the minute or protocol of conferences preserved by M. Hyde de Neuville, whose good offices were interposed on this occasion, the following entry will be found:

"Article eighth. The article cannot be varied from what is found in the Chevalier's project, as the object of the last clause therein is merely to save the honor and dignity of the sovereignty of his Catholic Majesty.

"Note of Mr. Adams thereon. Agreed, with the following explanation; that all grants of land which shall not be annulled by this convention, are valid to the same extent as they are binding on his Catholic Majesty.

"Remarks of M. de Neuville. The Secretary of State observed to me, that the federal government would, most assuredly, never entertain the idea of disturbing individuals who were vested with a bona fide title to their property; but, as a treaty ought not to cover fraudulent practices, so no more could be asked of the United States than could be offered by his Catholic Majesty; that, being in this case substituted for his Majesty, they would scrupulously fulfill their engagements, but that more could not be expected of them.

"The Secretary of State even proposes, if M. de Onis wishes it, that the article shall be inserted in the treaty as proposed by the minister of Spain, on condition that the above explanation shall be given in the form of a note. The federal government, unwilling to leave anything in a state of doubt or uncertainty, only wish to place on the most secure footing whatever is just and honorable, and is at the same time perfectly satisfied that his Catholic Majesty neither asks nor wishes more."‡

The eighth article was finally inserted as it at present stands, but doubts arising whether the recent large grants were effectually excluded by the words of the treaty, Mr. Adams writes to the Chevalier de Onis on the 10th March, 1818, that it was distinctly understood that the grants to Alagon, Vargas, and Puñon Rostro, were all annulled by the treaty, as much as if they had been specifically named, and that they will be so held by the United States.§

Mr. Adams, on the 14th July, 1819, submits to M. De Neuville the following observations on the eighth article: "M. De Neuville's particular attention is requested to the difference between the two projected articles, because it will recall particularly to his remembrance the point upon which the discussion concerning this article turned. By turning to the written memorandum, drawn up by M. De Neuville himself, of this discussion, he will perceive he has noted that M. De Onis insisted that this article could not be varied from what was contained in the Chevalier's project, as the object of the last clause therein was merely to save the honor and dignity of the sovereignty of his Catholic Majesty."

It was then observed by Mr. Adams, that the honor and dignity of his Catholic Majesty would be saved by recognizing the grants prior to the 24th of January, as "valid to the same extent as they were binding on his Catholic Majesty;" and he agreed to accept the article as drawn by M. De Onis, with this explanation. (See M. De Neuville's memorandum.) It was on this occasion that M. De Neuville observed, that, if the grants prior to January 24, 1818, were confirmed only to the same extent that they were binding on the King of Spain, there were many bona fide grantees of long standing, in actual possession of their grants, and having actually made partial settlements upon them, but who had been prevented by the extraordinary circumstances in which Spain had been situated, and the revolutions in Europe, from fulfilling all the conditions of their grants; that it would be very harsh to leave these persons liable to a forfeiture, which might, indeed, in rigor, be exacted from them, but which very certainly never would be if they had remained under the Spanish dominion. It will be remembered by M. De Neuville how earnestly he insisted upon this equitable suggestion, and how strongly he disclaimed for M. De Onis every wish or intention to cover, by a provision for such persons, any fraudulent grants. And it was then observed by M. De Neuville, that the date assumed, of 24th of January, 1818, was not sufficient for guarding against fraudulent grants, because they might be easily antedated. It was with reference to these suggestions of M. De Neuville, afterwards again strenuously urged by M. De Onis, that the article was finally modified as it now stands in the treaty, declaring all grants subsequent to 24th January, 1818, absolutely null, and those of prior date valid to the same extent only that they would have been binding on the King, but allowing to bona fide grantees in actual possession, and having commenced settlements, but who had been prevented by the late circumstances of the Spanish nation and the revolutions in Europe, from fulfilling all the conditions of their grants, time to complete them. It is needless to observe, that, as these incidents do not apply to either of the grants to Alagon, Puñon Rostro, or Vargas, neither of these grants is confirmed by the tenor of the article as it stands; and that it is perfectly immaterial, in that respect, whether they were dated before or after the 24th of January, 1818, it being admitted on all sides that these grants were not binding upon the King, conformably to the Spanish laws. The terms of the article accord precisely with the intentions of all the parties to the negotiation and the signature of the treaty. If the dates of the grants are subsequent to the 24th of January, 1818, they are annulled by the date; if prior to that date, they are null, because not included among the prior grants confirmed.‖

From all these documents the clear inference is, that the great subject of anxiety with our negotiator was the large grants to Alagon, Vargas, and Puñon Rostro. It was against them almost alone that the article was directed. The American Government, indeed, at one time, proposed to carry the date back to 1802, by which means they would have excluded the claims of Forbes, Arredondo, and others, with whose existence there is every reason to believe they were perfectly well acquainted. But this pretension was speedily abandoned. If there appeared a distinct declaration on the part of the American Government that the sole object of the eighth article was to exclude the grants to Alagon, Puñon Rostro, and Vargas, such declaration, it is apprehended, would be conclusive. It could no longer be deemed just or honorable to apply the question ordinary and extraordinary to other grants dated before the 24th January, 1818, with a view of extorting from them by legal subtlety something which should debar their proprietors the benefits of that very article which was framed solely to admit them, and to exclude others. Yet it is respectfully submitted that no express admission of the fact could be stronger than the implication arising from this correspondence. If, however, an explicit avowal on the part of our government will alone be received, we refer to the message of the President to Congress, in which he tells that body "it was the intention of the parties to annul these latter grants, and that clause was drawn for that express purpose, and none other."*

May we not ask whether this is the sole purpose to which it is now sought to be applied, and how far is it consistent with justice and good faith to extend the effect of the clause in question beyond what either of the parties contemplated at the time of its adoption?

The application of the common law principle, that a grant may be absolutely void where the officer issuing it had no authority, is insisted on; and it is asserted that the royal governors of the Spanish colonies had no power to make sales or donations of the public lands, except in very limited quantities, and under numerous restrictions. An inquiry into the truth of this assertion will be attempted, according to the limited means within our power; and the more readily because of the intimations thrown out by this court in the cases of Soulard and Smith.†

Every fair presumption is against these supposed limitations. Legal or constitutional restrictions upon the power of the King or his officers, according to our ideas of them, are inconsistent with the character of the Spanish monarchy. They are hardly comprehensible by a native of that country, and have been rejected, together with the constitutional monarchy, by the people of Spain. How is it possible to reconcile limitations of power with the fundamental maxim, "the will of the Prince has the force of a law?"

Portions of the royal authority, as arbitrary as that of the King himself, were entrusted to the several governors of provinces, each of whom, within the limits of his own government, was the image of his sovereign, and, in practice at least, and in popular opinion also, absolute. The only restraints upon his acts were his instructions and accountability to the King; but the royal instructions, and the residencia, or account of his transactions, which the governor was obliged to give, were not properly legal limitations upon his power, but rather directions for the exercise of his discretion, and securities for his good behavior.

Every nation has its own manner of securing the fidelity of its agents. Free governments are constructed upon the principle of entrusting as little power as possible, and providing against its abuse preventively, by all species of checks and limitations. Arbitrary ones proceed upon the principle of bestowing ample powers and extensive discretion, and guarding against their abuse by prompt and strict accountability and severe punishment. Both have been invented by mankind for purposes of mutual defence and common justice, but the pervading spirit of the one is preventive, of the other vindicatory.

How absurd would it be, then, to apply the maxims of the one government to the acts of the other. As well might we judge the life of Pythagoras by the law of the New Testament, or the philosophy of Zoroaster by that of Newton, as subject the administration of a Spanish governor to the test of magna charta, the bill of rights, the habeas corpus act, or the principles of American constitutional law.

Even the laws of the Indies, obscure, perplexed, and sometimes even unintelligible as they are, hardly reached across the ocean, and the decline of the Spanish, like that of the Roman empire, was marked by the obsoletism of the distant prefects.

Nor were the offices of captain general, intendant, or sub-delegate, sinecures. Entrusted with the command and defence of remote and exposed possessions—often reduced to the greatest extremities for the want of money and supplies—neglected by the feeble government of the mother country—they were yet expected to guard the colony, and execute the most rigorous system of monopoly, amid greedy neighbors and an impoverished people. They were frequently obliged to create their own resources; and some idea of their difficulties, and the devotion and address which surmounted them, may be formed by remembering how long the able but cruel Morilla protracted a desperate warfare, amid every species of distress and destitution.

Their first duty was to preserve his Catholic Majesty's province, committed to their care; and if they did it, and could only do it by some invasions of the fisc, or dilapidations of the royal domain, does it lie with us to complain of their fidelity to him, and vitiate those titles which were devised from a law above all other—necessity?‡

Extract from an opinion of Chief Justice Marshall, in Percheman's case.—7 Peters' Rep.

Florida was a colony of Spain, the acquisition of which, by the United States, was extremely desirable. It was ceded by a treaty concluded between the two powers at Washington, on the 22d day of February, 1819.

The 2d article contains the cession, and enumerates its objects. The 8th contains stipulations respecting the titles to lands in the ceded territory.

It may not be unworthy of remark, that it is very unusual, even in cases of conquest, for the conqueror to do more than to displace the sovereign, and assume dominion over the country. The modern usage of nations, which has become law, would be violated; that sense of justice and of right which is acknowledged and felt by the whole civilized world would be outraged, if private property should be generally confiscated, and private rights annulled. The people change their allegiance, their relation to their ancient sovereign is dissolved, but their relations to each other, and their rights of property remain undisturbed. If this be the modern rule even in cases of conquest, who can doubt its application to the case of an amicable cession of territory? Had Florida changed its sovereign by an act containing no stipulation respecting the property of individuals, the right of property in all those who became subjects or citizens of the new government would have been unaffected by the change. It would have remained the same as under the ancient sovereign. The language of the 2d article conforms to this general principle: "His Catholic Majesty cedes to the United States, in full property and sovereignty, all the territories which belong to him, situated to the eastward of the Mississippi, by the name of East and West Florida." A cession of territory is never understood to be a cession of the property belonging to its inhabitants. The King cedes that only which belonged to him. Lands he had previously granted were not his to cede. Neither party could so understand the cession. Neither party could consider itself as attempting a wrong to individuals condemned by the practice of the whole civilized world. The cession of a territory by its name, from one sovereign to another, conveying the compound idea of surrendering, at the same time, the lands and the people who inhabit them, would be necessarily understood to pass the sovereignty only, and not to interfere with private property. If this could be doubted, the doubt would be removed by the particular enumeration which follows: "The adjacent islands dependent on said provinces, all public lots and squares, vacant lands, public edifices, fortifications, barracks, and other buildings which are not private property, archives and documents which relate directly to the property and sovereignty of the said provinces, are included in this article."

This special enumeration could not have been made, had the first clause of the article been supposed to pass, not only the objects thus enumerated, but private property also. The grant of buildings could not have been limited by the words "which are not private property," had private property been included in the cession of the territory.

This state of things ought to be kept in view when we construe the 8th article of the treaty, and the acts which have been passed by Congress for the ascertainment and adjustment of titles acquired under the Spanish government. That article, in the English part of it, is in these words: "All the grants of land made before the 24th January, 1818, by his Catholic Majesty, or by his lawful authorities in the said territories, ceded by his Majesty to the United States, shall be ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of the lands, to the same extent that the same grants would be valid if the territories had remained under the dominion of his Catholic Majesty."

This article is apparently introduced on the part of Spain, and must be intended to stipulate expressly for that security to private property which the laws and usages of nations would, without express stipulation, have conferred. No construction which would impair that security further than its positive words require, would seem to be admissible. Without it, the titles of individuals would remain as valid under the new government as they were under the old, and those titles, so far at least as they were consummated, might be asserted in the courts of the United States, independently of this article.

The treaty was drawn up in the Spanish as well as in the English language. Both are originals, and were unquestionably intended by the parties to be identical. The Spanish has been translated, and we now understand that the article, as expressed in that language, is, that the grants "shall remain ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of them to the same extent," &c.; thus conforming exactly to the universally received doctrine of the law of nations. If the English and the Spanish parts can, without violence, be made to agree, that construction which establishes this conformity ought to prevail. If, as we think must be admitted, the security of private property was intended by the parties, if this security would have been complete without the article, the United States could have no motive for insisting on the interposition of government, in order to give validity to titles which, according to the usages of the civilized world, were already valid. No violence is done to the language of the treaty by a construction which conforms the English and Spanish to each other; although the words "shall be ratified and confirmed," are properly the words of contract stipulating for some future legislative act, they are not necessarily so. They may import that they "shall be ratified and confirmed" by force of the instrument itself. When we observe that in the counterpart of the same treaty, executed at the same time by the same parties, they are used in this sense, we think the construction proper, if not unavoidable.

In the case of Foster vs. Elam, 2 Pet., 253, this court considered these words as importing contracts. The Spanish part of the treaty was not then brought to our view, and we then supposed that there was no variance between them. We did not suppose that there was even a formal difference of expression in the same instrument, drawn up in the language of each party. Had this circumstance been known, we believe it would have produced the construction which we now give to the article.

This understanding of the article must enter into our construction of the acts of Congress on the subject.

The United States had acquired a territory containing near thirty millions of acres, of which about three millions had probably been granted to individuals. The demands of the Treasury, and the settlement of the territory, required that the vacant lands should be brought into the market, for which purpose the operations of the land office were to be extended into Florida. The necessity of distinguishing the vacant from the appropriated lands was obvious, and this could be effected only by adopting means to search out and ascertain pre-existing titles. This seems to have been the object of the first legislation of Congress.

On the eighth of May, 1822, an act was passed "for ascertaining claims and titles to land within the Territory of Florida."

The first section directs the appointment of commissioners, for the purpose of ascertaining the claims and titles to lands within the Territory of Florida, as acquired by the treaty of the 22d of February, 1819.

It would seem from the title of the act, and from this declaratory section, that the object for which these commissioners were appointed was the ascertainment of these claims and titles. That they constituted a board of inquiry, not a court exercising judicial power, and deciding finally on titles. By the act "for the establishment of a territorial government in Florida," previously passed at the same session, superior courts had been established in East and West Florida, whose jurisdiction extended to the trial of civil causes between individuals. These commissioners seem to have been appointed for the special purpose of procuring promptly, for Congress, that information which was required for the immediate operations of the land office. In pursuance of this idea, the 2d section directs that all the proceedings of the commissioners, the claims admitted, with those rejected, and the reason of their admission and rejection, be recorded in a well bound book, and forwarded the Secretary of the Treasury, to be submitted to Congress. To this desire for immediate information we must ascribe the short duration of the board. Their session for East Florida was to terminate on the last of June in the succeeding year; but any claim not filed previous to the 31st of May in that year, to be void, and of none effect.

These provisions show the solicitude of Congress to obtain, with the utmost celerity, that information which ought to be preliminary to the sale of the public lands. The provision that claims not filed with the commissioners previous to the 30th of June, 1823, should be void, can mean only that they should be held so by the commissioners, and not allowed by them. Their power should not extend to claims filed afterwards. It is impossible to suppose that Congress intended to forfeit real titles not exhibited to their commissioners within so short a period.

No. 2.—Extract from the opinion of the Supreme Court in the case of Arredondo.

"It became then all important to ascertain what was granted by what was excepted. The King of Spain was the grantor, the treaty was his deed; the exception was made by him, and its nature and effect depended on his intention, expressed by his words in reference to the thing granted, and the thing refused, and excepted in and by the grant. The Spanish version was in his words, and expressed his intention; and, though the American version showed the intention of this government to be different, we cannot adopt it as the rule by which to decide what was granted, what excepted, and what reserved; the rules of law are too clear to be mistaken, and too imperative to be disregarded by this court. We must be governed by the clearly expressed and manifest intention of the grantor, and not the grantee in private, a fortiori, in public grants. That we might not be mistaken in the intention or in the true meaning of Spanish words, two dictionaries were consulted, one of them printed in Madrid; and two translations were made of the 8th article, each by competent judges of Spanish, and both agreeing with each other, and the translation of each agreeing with the definition of the dictionaries. 'Quedaran,' in Spanish, correctly translated, means 'shall remain;' the verb, 'quedar,' in French, 'rester;' Latin, 'manere,' 'remanere;' and English 'remain,' in the present tense. In the English original the words are 'shall be,' words in the future. The difference is all important as to all Spanish grants. If the words of the treaty were, that all the grants of land 'shall remain confirmed,' then the United States, by accepting the cession, could assert no claim to these lands thus expressly accepted. The proprietors could bring suits to recover them without any action of Congress, and any question arising would be purely a judicial one. 'Shall be ratified,' makes it necessary that there should be a law ratifying them, or authorizing a suit to be brought; otherwise the question would be a political one, not cognizable by this court, as was decided in Foster and Elam vs. Nelson.

"But, aside from this consideration, we find the words used in the Spanish sense as to the grants made after the 24th January, 1818, which are, by the same article in English, 'hereby declared and decreed to be null and void.' The ratification is in Spanish and English. The Spanish words in the Spanish version are 'quedado' and 'quedan,' in reference to the annulled grants; the English are, 'have remained,' 'do remain.' The principles of justice, and the rules of both law and equity, are too obvious not to require that, in deciding on the effect and legal operation of this article of the treaty by the declared and manifested intention to the King, the meaning of Spanish words should be the same in confirming as in annulling grants. A regard to the honor and justice of a great republic alike forbid the imputation of a desire that its legislation should be so construed, and its laws so administered, that the same word should refer to the future as to confirming, and to the present in annulling grants, in the same article of the same treaty.

"For these reasons, and in this connection, we consider that the grants were confirmed and annulled, respectively, simultaneously with the ratification and confirmation of the treaty; and that, when the territory was ceded, the United States had no right in any of the lands embraced in the confirmed grants."

FOREIGN OFFICE, Department of Archives, Paris, October 11, 1833.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose to you the documents which Mr. Mignet had caused to be prepared for you before his departure; and I shall feel obliged by your acknowledging their receipt.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

CTE. DE HAUTERIVE.

To Hon. JOSEPH M. WHITE.

Information relative to the limits of Louisiana, on the borders of the Floridas, communicated to Mr. White, member of the House of Representatives of the United States.

At the peace of the 3d November, 1762, between France and England, France ceded by the 6th article of the preliminary treaty of the same day, ratified by the three powers, of the 12th, 13th, and 14th of the same month, part of Louisiana to England.

This article is expressed thus:

"In order to establish the peace on a solid and durable foundation, and to prevent any pretext of dispute respecting the limits of the French and British territories on the continent of America, it is agreed, that in future the boundary between the possessions of his Most Christian Majesty and those of his Britannic Majesty in this part of the world shall be irrevocably fixed, by a line drawn in the middle of the river Mississippi, from its source, unto the river Iberville, and thence by a line along the middle of that river, and of the lakes Maurepas and Ponchartrain, to the sea; and for this purpose his Most Christian Majesty cedes and guarantees the cession to his Britannic Majesty of the river and port of Mobile, as well as all which his said Christian Majesty does or may possess on the left of the river Mississippi, with the exception of the city of New Orleans, and of the island on which it is situated, which shall still appertain to France; and it is clearly understood and agreed, that the navigation of the river Mississippi shall be equally free to the subjects of his Britannic Majesty as to those of France, both as respects the total breadth and length of the said river, from its source to the sea, and especially that part which is between the island of New Orleans and the right bank of the river, as well as the entrance and exit by its mouth."

This article was confirmed by the 7th article of the definitive treaty of the 10th February, 1763, signed at Paris by the plenipotentiaries of the three powers, and to which Portugal acceded.

On the same day on which the preliminary treaty of the 3d November, 1762, was concluded, France ceded to Spain, by a secret act of cession, that part of Louisiana which she still possessed: as follows is the tenor of this act of cession:

"His Christian Majesty, being firmly resolved to strengthen and perpetuate the bonds of intimate friendship which unite him to the Catholic King, his cousin, intends to act conformably in all and every respect with his Catholic Majesty, in a perfect uniformity of principles, as to the renown of each of their houses, and the reciprocal interest of their monarchies.

"With this view, his Most Christian Majesty, truly sensible of the sacrifices which his Most Catholic Majesty has generously made to assist him in establishing peace, wishes, on this occasion, to give him proof of the lively interest which he takes in meeting his views and rendering service to his crown.

"And to this effect his Most Christian Majesty has authorized the Duke of Choiseul, his minister, to deliver in the most authentic form to the Marquis of Grimaldi, ambassador extraordinary of his Catholic Majesty, an act, by which his Most Christian Majesty yields and cedes all property, totally, simply, and without any exception, in all the country known by the name of Louisiana, as well as New Orleans, and the island in which it is situated, to his Catholic Majesty and his successors in perpetuity.

"But the Marquis of Grimaldi, not being sufficiently exactly informed of the intentions of his Catholic Majesty, does not feel himself authorized to accept the said cession otherwise than conditionally and sub spe rati, until the arrival of the orders of the King, his master, which, if they are conformable with the desires of his Most Christian Majesty, as he hopes they may be, will be immediately followed by the formal and authentic act of cession in question, in which will be mentioned the suitable mode and time for the evacuation of Louisiana and New Orleans by the subjects of his Most Christian Majesty, and for the occupation of the said country and city, by the subjects of his Most Catholic Majesty.

"In faith whereof, we, the respective ministers, have signed the present preliminary act, and affixed to it the seal of our arms.

"Given at Fontainbleau, November 3d, 1762.

"LE DUC DE CHOISEUL. [L. S.]
"LE MARQUIS OF GRIMALDI." [L. S.]

The King of Spain accepted this cession by an act of the 13th November, of the same year, but the delivery was delayed until the 21st April, 1764.

After that period, Louisiana, as possessed by France before 1762, became divided into two parts. The one which was ceded to England, and which extended to the east from the line of the Mississippi, of the river Iberville, and of the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain to Rio Perdido, formed Western Florida; that only which was ceded to Spain preserved the name of Louisiana.

In the war of 1779 Spain conquered Western Florida of England, which power ceded it to her by the 5th article of the treaty of Versailles of the 3d September, 1783, abandoning also to her East Florida.

At the close of this treaty, Spain possessed both parts of ancient Louisiana; the one to the west of the line of the Mississippi, of the river of Iberville, of the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain, from the cession of France, the other to the east of that line from the part of England; the first in virtue of the act of cession of the 3d November, 1762, the second in virtue of the treaty of September 3d, 1783.

Such was the state of things in Vendimaire, an. 9, (September, 1800,) at which time, when Spain ceded back Louisiana to France, the act of retrocession was preceded by protracted negotiations. From the year 4 (1796) the ambassador of the French republic at Madrid, citizen Perignon, was instructed to sound the Spanish government on this subject.

That government appeared to enter into the views of France by seeking an increase of territory in Italy for the Duke of Parma. The price of this aggrandizement was to be the cession of Louisiana and Western Florida. The minister of foreign affairs, Delacroix, considered the negotiation sufficiently advanced in the 14th Messidor, (5th year Fr. Indep.) to write to General Bonaparte, that the Directoriat had sent full powers to citizen Perignon to conclude a treaty with the Spanish government. "This treaty," he said, "ought to have as basis the cession of Louisiana and of West Florida to the republic, upon the supposition that events permit the French government to procure for the Duke of Parma an augmentation of territory, such as Romagna or any other part."

But this project did not succeed. Subsequently, in the year 8, General Berthier was constituted envoy extraordinary to Madrid, to resume the same negotiation.

In exchange for the aggrandizement of territory for the Infanta, Duke of Parma, he demanded, according to the express instructions of the Consular government, the cession of Louisiana and the two Floridas. But to these propositions he did not find the Spanish government disposed.

"The answer of the King [he said in his dispatches of the 25th Fructidor, an. 8,] to the minister of foreign affairs of France was, that he would perform the promise which he had given for the retrocession of Louisiana, as it had been ceded by the treaty of 1763; that he would never consent to cede the Floridas, and that he was surprised that, after having yielded that which was so long solicited, new demands should be made upon him." The endeavors of the French government to obtain the Floridas were fruitless, and it accepted the cession of Louisiana alone, as proposed by the Spanish government.

This was the basis of the treaty of the 9th Vendimaire, an. 9, (1st October, 1800.) Article 3 of this treaty, relative to Louisiana, was conceived in these terms: "His Most Catholic Majesty promises and engages, on his part, to retrocede to the French republic, six months after the full and entire execution of the conditions and stipulations before mentioned, relative to his Royal Highness the Duke of Parma, the colony or province of Louisiana, with the same extent which it had when France possessed it, and such as it ought to be, according to the treaties entered into subsequently between Spain and other States."

The retrocession of Louisiana having been made in time of war, and General Berthier having written to his government on the 25th Fructidor, an. 8, at the time of the negotiation, that the Spanish minister, Mr. Urquejo, had allowed him to understand that, at a general peace, the King might cede half of West Florida, situated between the left bank of the Mississippi and the river Mobile, General Beurnonville was commissioned to this new negotiation after the peace of Amiens. As follows were the instructions given to this effect in Vendimaire, an. 11: "The most important affair with which you will occupy yourself is to facilitate this last delivery, which ought to take place before the end of the season, by obtaining from the Spanish government, that it give to the governor of Louisiana, if not already done, specific orders to deliver it to the captain general which the Consul sends there. * * * The retrocession made by Spain only extends from the east to the Mississippi: but the Secretary of State, M. Urquejo, had given hopes to General Bertrand, chargé of this negotiation, and who insisted on the cession of one of the Floridas, that, at the general peace, he did not doubt that the King would consent to cede all that part of the Floridas which extends to Mobile, if the Premier Consul asked for it.

"The difficulties which Spain afterwards threw in the way of completing the cession of Louisiana caused the French government to think, hitherto, that the moment was not yet arrived to ask an extension of territory; but peace has placed France in such a favorable position, that it does not seem necessary to adjourn any longer the necessary steps to obtain the aggrandizement with which the minister of the King of Spain flattered the French chargé d'affaires. The part of Florida which you have to lay claim to, belonged to France before the peace of 1763. It is evident she wishes to reäcquire this former possession, where there are, doubtless, a great number of French families."

General Beurnonville received full powers to negotiate the exchange of the two Floridas in return for the duchy of Parma, which was to be ceded by France to his Catholic Majesty, and to be added to the kingdom of Etruria. He even took with him a plan of a treaty, composed the 26th Vendimaire by the Premier Consul, and of which the following were the dispositions relative to this exchange:

"Art. 1. The duchy of Parma, acquired by France by the treaty of Aranjuez of the 3d Ventose, an. 9, (21st March, 1801,) are ceded to his Catholic Majesty, to be reünited to the kingdom of Etruria.

"Art. 2. The middle of the Po, from the northeast extremity of the department of Marengo, to the confluence of the Lenza, and the middle of the latter river, from its source to its mouth, shall be the boundaries between the Italian republic and the territory ceded by the preceding article. Their western limit shall be rectified in the most suitable manner to protect the respective frontiers, and to ensure the efficacy of the custom houses.

"Art. 3. The duchy and dependencies of Parma shall unreservedly follow the fate of the kingdom of Etruria, of which they become an integral part. They cannot be separated from it to become settled on any branch of the reigning family; and Spain will exercise in the same manner and in the same circumstances, the rights of property and of eventual succession which are guaranteed to it in the kingdom of Etruria by the 7th article of the treaty of Aranjuez, heretofore mentioned.

"Art. 4. Spain, in compensation for the advantages guaranteed to her by the present treaty, retrocedes to France the river and port of Mobile, and the territory which belonged to it before 1763, to the west of that river only, from the most northern point of the thirty-first degree of north latitude, to the river of Iberville and the gulf of Mexico. Further, she cedes to France the other part of West Florida, and all East Florida, with the rivers, lakes, ports, bays, isles, and straits, dependent on each several territory, and extending to the north unto the line of demarcation traced in article 2 of the treaty of friendship, of limits, and of navigation, concluded the 27th October, 1795, between his Catholic Majesty and the United States of America."

Conformably to his instructions, General Beurnonville negotiated during several months for the exchange of the Floridas for the duchy of Parma; but this new negotiation did not produce any result. Spain kept the Floridas, and the impending rupture of the treaty of Amiens induced the French government to transfer Louisiana to the United States. This cession was effected by the treaty of the 30th April, 1803. By the 1st article of this treaty, France ceded to the United States the territory of Louisiana, as it was received of Spain in 1800. "As it is said in this article, that by the article 3 of the treaty concluded at St. Ildefonso the, 9 Vendimaire, an. 9, (1st October, 1800,) between the Premier Consul of the French republic and his Catholic Majesty, as follows, was agreed on:

"His Catholic Majesty promises and engages, on his part, to retrocede to the French republic, six months after the full and entire execution of the conditions and stipulations before mentioned, relative to his Royal Highness the Duke of Parma, the colony or province of Louisiana, with the same extent which it has at present under the Spanish dominion, and which it had when France possessed it, and as it ought to be, according to the treaties passed subsequently between Spain and other powers.

"And, as in consequence of said treaty, and especially of the said article 3, the French republic has an incontestible title to the domain and possession of the said territory, the Premier Consul of the French republic, wishing to give an especial mark of his friendship to the said United States, cedes to them, in the name of the French republic, for ever, the full sovereignty of the said territory, with all its rights and appurtenances, as in the same manner as they were acquired by the French republic, in virtue of the foregoing treaty, concluded with his Catholic Majesty." (Translated from the original English, by Martens, supplement, tome 3, page 466.)

The territory acquired by the United States, shall not exceed the left bank of the Mississippi, and does not comprehend Western Florida.

In fact, France having only acquired from Spain, by the treaty of retrocession of 1800, that part of ancient Louisiana which she ceded to her by the secret act of 1762, could only cede to the United States in 1803 that which she had received in 1800.

If Western Florida, or that part of ancient Louisiana which extends from the left bank of the Mississippi to the Rio Perdido, had also been ceded to France by Spain, in 1800, the treaty of St. Ildefonso would have mentioned it, because France did expressly claim it in the negotiations preceding this treaty.

The French government did not consider that it acquired more than the Spanish government considered that it ceded, because, two years after the cession of Louisiana, it negotiated for the exchange of the Floridas, for the duchy of Parma. It was therefore Louisiana, with the borders she had after 1762, which was ceded by France to Spain in 1800, and transferred by France to the United States in 1803.

The federal government itself considered this question in the same point of view. It did separate Western Florida from Louisiana, and it has recognized the rights of Spain to it; as follows are several proofs of this:

1st. In 1795, by article 2 of the treaty of the 27th October, between the United States and Spain the federal government acknowledged that the limits of Western Florida began at the Mississippi, and did not mix it up with Louisiana.

2d. The 4th Ventose, an. 11, more than two years after the retrocession of Louisiana to France, and some months before its acquisition by the United States, Mr. Livingston, their minister plenipotentiary at Paris, maintained in a note addressed to the Premier Consul, this distinction between West Florida and Louisiana, and appeared persuaded that Louisiana alone had been ceded to France. "If the officers," said he, "empowered to take possession, have not express orders to respect the rights of navigation and of entrepot, which the United States claim, I must particularly solicit a treaty, which, in acknowledging the rights of the United States, shall explain the conditions on which Spain has ceded Louisiana to France;" if to all this, citizen Consul, you would add voluntarily, and as a mark of your consideration, that in the case of the cession of the Floridas to France, the citizens of the United States shall enjoy the free passage of the rivers Mobile and Pensacola, with the right of entrepot at their mouths, this act, useful to the commerce of France, would be gratefully acknowledged by the Americans, and would much strengthen the bonds of friendship between the two allied nations.

3d. The 30th Floreal, an. 11, (19th May, 1803,) twenty days after the treaty of cession of Louisiana to the United States, Mr. Monroe, one of the plenipotentiaries of the federal government, and whose signature was affixed to the treaty, was so far from believing that ancient Louisiana, comprising actual Louisiana and West Florida, had been acquired by the United States, that he requested the good offices of the French government with the Spanish government, to negotiate the acquisition of the Floridas. "Citizen minister," [he addressed the minister of foreign affairs in France] "as some months will elapse before we can receive the decision and commands of our government, respecting the treaty and conventions which we had the honor to conclude with Mr. Marbois, under your ministry, I consider it my duty to pursue, in the interval, the remaining objects of my mission, which are now to be arranged with his Catholic Majesty the King of Spain; with that view I propose to set out, as soon as circumstances will permit, to Madrid, which I flatter myself will be practicable in the course of the next week. In the happy conclusion of our negotiation with your government, a sentiment which I am persuaded will be cherished by both nations of the result, Mr. Marbois promised, on the part of the First Consul, his friendly intercession and support of our negotiation with his Majesty for the Floridas. Permit me to invite your attention to that subject, and to request that you will be so obliging as to furnish me such aid, either by instructions to your ambassador at the court of Madrid, or in such other mode as may be deemed most suitable to the character of the powers interested, be best calculated to promote success in the object desired, and to manifest the very friendly disposition of the First Consul to the United States, of which I entertain the most perfect confidence. I beg you, citizen minister, to accept the assurance of my high consideration and esteem.

"JAMES MONROE."

4th. Lastly, the 22d February, 1829, the federal government acknowledged the rights of Spain to West Florida, by accepting the two Floridas from the Spanish government, by article 2 of the treaty signed at Washington, between the King of Spain and the United States. "His Catholic Majesty," says this article, "cedes to the United States, in full property and sovereignty, all the territories which belong to him, situated to the eastward of the Mississippi, known by the name of East and West Florida."

It is true that in the interval which elapsed between the two treaties of 1803 and 1819, the United States laid claim to West Florida in virtue of the treaty of 1803. But France, whose testimony was often appealed to by the federal government and the Spanish government, on this question, acknowledged always the rights of Spain, and condemned the claims of the United States. As follows were the expressions of the minister of foreign affairs of the imperial government respecting the interpretation of the treaty of 1803, in the instructions given the 1st Germinal an. 13 (1st April, 1805,) to Mr. Desfoyes, commissioner of commercial relations, at New Orleans: "Louisiana was ceded to the Americans as France received it from Spain; the rights of the new possessor are the same as those we acquired, and his Imperial Majesty, in declaring, conformably to the treaty, what was its extent and the bounds of his pretensions, thereby declares the extent of the pretensions the Americans have a right to elevate. The United States claim to have acquired with Louisiana a part of the Floridas, but this claim is not expressed in any treaty, and is contrary to all those which have been concluded. France, who ceded to Spain in 1763, only the territory situated to the west of the Mississippi and of the river Iberville, has only obtained from Spain in Vendemaire, an. 9, a retrocession, the extent of which is necessarily measured or bounded by the cession which she made. She did not cede in an. 11 any other territory to the United States: she did not acknowledge of the claims which they laid to the possession of part of the Floridas in virtue of the same treaty. His Imperial Majesty having authorized me to make this formal declaration to the ministers plenipotentiaries of the federal government, it is in this sense that I have continually expressed myself to them, whether verbally or in my official notes. The court of Madrid has received the same declarations from his Imperial Majesty. You may, therefore, sir, express yourself in the same sense on any occasion on which you may be consulted in the discussions of the United States and Spain, relative to the eastern limits of Louisiana."

The French government expressed, continually, the same opinion, during the discussions between the United States and Spain, relative to the possession of Florida.

The aforementioned documents prove as follows: "That in 1762, Louisiana was divided into two parts; the one situated on the east of the Mississippi was ceded to England, and became Western Florida; the other, situated on the west of the Mississippi, was ceded to Spain, and alone preserved the name of Louisiana.

That in 1800 Spain, in retroceding Louisiana to France, only gave up new Louisiana, limited by the left bank of the Mississippi, and not ancient Louisiana, extending to Rio Perdido, because she would not alienate to her West Florida, which comprehended that part of ancient Louisiana.

That in 1802 France, after having exchanged with Spain the kingdom of Etruria for Louisiana, proposed to exchange the duchy of Parma for Eastern and Western Floridas; but this negotiation proved fruitless.

That in 1803 France transferred to the United States that which she had received of Spain, that is, Louisiana only.

That in 1803 the government of the United States did not consider that it acquired West Florida by acquiring Louisiana; for, immediately after the treaty of the 10 Floreal, an. 11, she desired to enter into a negotiation with Spain respecting the Floridas.

That in 1819 it recognized the rights of the Spanish government to West Florida, by receiving it of her by treaty.

That, therefore, whether according to the terms of treaties, or according to the uniform interpretation which has been given them, the limits of Louisiana, which extended before 1762 to Rio Perdido, have never extended, since that period, beyond the left bank of the Mississippi, and have been constantly formed by the line of this river, of the river of Iberville, of the lakes of Maurepas and Pontchartrain, on the side of the Floridas.

[Seal of the French Foreign Office.] Given at Paris, the 20th August, 1833, according to the original documents preserved in the archives of foreign affairs of France; and the foregoing extracts are hereby certified to be accurate.

For and by the authorization of the minister, the counselor of state, director of the archives and chancelerey.

No. 4.—Preliminary and secret treaty between the French republic and his Catholic Majesty the King of Spain, relating to the aggrandizement of his Royal Highness the Infant Duke of Parma, in Italy, and to the recession of Louisiana.

His Catholic Majesty having always manifested the most anxious desire to procure for his Royal Highness the Duke of Parma, an aggrandizement which might place him on a footing corresponding with his dignity; and the French republic having long since given to his Catholic Majesty the King of Spain to understand the desire which they feel to recover possession of the colony of Louisiana, both governments having interchanged their views upon these two subjects of common interest, and circumstances permitting them to enter into engagements in this particular which, as far as it depends on them, may assure reciprocal satisfaction, have authorized for this purpose, that is to say, the French republic, the citizen Alexander Berthier, general-in-chief; and his Catholic Majesty, Don Mariano Luis de Urquijo, chevalier of the Order of Charles III. and of St. John of Jerusalem, counselor of state, his envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary, near the Batavian republic, and his provisional first secretary of state; who, after having exchanged their powers, have agreed, saving the ratification, upon the following articles:

Article 1. The French republic engages to procure for his Royal Highness the Infant Duke of Parma an augmentation of territory, which shall raise the population of his estates to one million of inhabitants, with the title of King, and all the rights annexed to the royal dignity; and to this effect the French republic engages to obtain the consent of his Majesty the Emperor and King, and of the other States interested, so that his Royal Highness the Infant Duke of Parma may, without opposition, enter into possession of said territories at the time of the confirmation of the peace between the French republic and his Imperial Majesty.

Article 2. The augmentation to be given to his Royal Highness the Duke of Parma may consist of Tuscany, in case the present negotiations of the French government with his Imperial Majesty shall permit them to dispose of that country, or of the three Roman ecclesiastical provinces, or any other continental provinces of Italy, that may form a rounded estate.

Article 3. His Catholic Majesty promises and engages on his part to recede to the French republic, six months after the full and entire execution of the conditions and stipulations herein expressed, relative to his Royal Highness the Duke of Parma, the colony or province of Louisiana, with the same extent that it now has in the lands of Spain, and had while in the possession of France, and such as it ought to be in conformity with the treaties subsequently concluded between Spain and other States.

Article 4. His Catholic Majesty will give the necessary orders for the occupation of Louisiana by France the moment the estates designed for his aggrandizement shall be placed in the hands of his Royal Highness the Duke of Parma. The French may, according to its convenience, defer the taking possession; and when this is to be done, the States directly or indirectly interested shall agree upon the ulterior conditions which their common interests, and that of their inhabitants, may demand.

Article 5. His Catholic Majesty engages to deliver to the French republic, in the ports of Spain, in Europe, one month after the execution of the stipulation with regard to the Duke of Parma, six ships of war, in good condition, of seventy-four guns, armed and equipped, and in a state to receive the French crews and supplies.

Article 6. The stipulations of the present treaty having no prejudicial object, but on the contrary preserving untouched the rights of every one, it is not to be presumed they can excite the suspicions of any power. But if the contrary should happen, and the result of their execution should be that the two estates are attacked or threatened, both powers engage to make common cause, as well to repel aggression, as also to take those conciliatory measures proper to maintain peace with all their neighbors.

Article 7. The obligations contained in the present treaty in nothing annul those which are expressed in the treaty of alliance signed at St. Ildefonso, on the 2d Fructidor, year 4 (18th August, 1796); on the contrary, they unite with new ties the interests of the two powers, and confirm the stipulations of the treaty of alliance in all the cases to which they can be applied.

Article 8. The ratifications of the present preliminary articles shall be completed and exchanged in the period of one month, or sooner if possible, counting from the date of the signing of the present treaty.

In faith of which, we, the undersigned ministers plenipotentiary of the French republic and of his Catholic Majesty, by virtue of our respective powers, have signed the present preliminary articles, and have affixed our seals.

Done at St. Ildefonso, the 9th Vendimaire, 9th year of the French republic, (1st October, 1800.)

No. 5.—Mr. Talleyrand to Mr. Monroe: dated

PARIS, December 21, 1804.

SIR: I had the honor in Brumaire last, to inform Mr. Livingston that I would submit to the inspection of his Imperial Majesty the letters which he addressed to me, relative to the motives of Mr. Monroe's journey to Spain, and some discussions between the court of Madrid and the United States.

Among the observations made on this subject by Messrs. Livingston and Monroe, his Imperial Majesty has been obliged to give particular attention to those bearing on the discussions of which the object is peculiarly interesting to the French government. He has perceived that he could not be a stranger to the examination of these discussions, since they grew out of the treaty by which France has ceded Louisiana to the United States; and his Majesty has thought that an explanation, made with that fidelity which characterizes him, on the eastern boundaries of the ceded territory, would put an end to the differences to which the cession has given rise.

France, in giving up Louisiana to the United States, transferred to them all the right over that colony which she had acquired from Spain. She could not, nor did she wish to cede any other; and that no room might be left for doubt in this respect, she repeated, in her treaty of 30th April, 1803, the literal expressions of the treaty of St. Ildefonso, by which she had acquired that colony two years before.

Now, it was stipulated in her treaty of the year 1801, that the acquisition of Louisiana by France was a retrocession; that is to say, that Spain restored to France what she had received from her in 1762. At that period, she had received the territory bounded on the east by the Mississippi, the river Iberville, the lakes Maurapas and Pontchartrain, the same day France ceded to England, by the preliminaries of peace, all the territory to the eastward. Of this Spain had received no part, and could therefore give back none to France.

All the territory lying to the eastward of the Mississippi and the river Iberville, and south of the thirty-second degree of north latitude, bears the name of Florida. It has been constantly designated in that way during the time that Spain held it; it bears the same name in the treaty of limits between Spain and the United States, and, in different notes of Mr. Livingston, of a later date than the treaty of retrocession, in which the name of Louisiana is given to the territory on the west side of the Mississippi, of Florida to that on the east side of it. According to this designation, thus consecrated by time, and even prior to the period when Spain began to possess the whole territory between the thirty-first degree, the Mississippi, and the sea, this country ought, in good faith and justice, to be distinguished from Louisiana.

Your excellency knows, that before the preliminaries of 1762, confirmed by the treaty of 1763, the French possessions situated near the Mississippi extended as far from the east of this river, towards the Ohio and the Illinois, as in the quarters of the Mobile; and you must think it as unnatural, after all the changes of sovereignty which that part of America has undergone, to give the name of Louisiana to the district of Mobile as to the territory more to the north, on the same bank of the river which formerly belonged to France.

These observations surely will be sufficient to dispel every kind of doubt with regard to the retrocession made by Spain to France in the month of Vendimaire, year 9. It was under this impression that the French and the Spanish plenipotentiaries negotiated; and it was under this impression that I have since had occasion to give the necessary explanations when a project was formed to take possession of it. I have laid before his Imperial Majesty the negotiations of Madrid, which preceded the treaty of 1801; and his Majesty is convinced that, during the whole course of these negotiations, the Spanish government has constantly refused to cede any part of the Floridas, even from the Mississippi to the Mobile.

His Imperial Majesty has moreover authorized me to declare to you, that at the beginning of the year 11, General Beurnonville was charged to open a new negotiation with Spain for the acquisition of the Floridas. This project, which has not been followed by any treaty, is an evident proof that France had not acquired by the treaty retroceding Louisiana the country east of the Mississippi.

The candor of these observations proves to you, sir, how much value his Majesty attaches to the maintenance of a good understanding between two powers, to whom France is united by connections so intimate and so numerous. His Majesty, called upon to give explanations on a question which interested France, directly persuades himself that they will leave no ground of misunderstanding between the United States and Spain; and that these two powers, animated as they ought to be by the sentiments of friendship, which their vicinity and their position renders so necessary, will be able to agree with the same facility on the other subjects of their discussion.

This result his Imperial Majesty will learn with real interest. He saw with pain the United States commence their differences with Spain in an unusual manner, and conduct themselves towards the Floridas by acts of violence; which, not being founded in right, could have no other effect but to injure its lawful owners. Such an aggression gave the more surprise to his Majesty, because the United States seemed in this measure to avail themselves of their treaty with France as an authority for their proceeding; and because he could scarcely reconcile with the just opinion which he entertains of the wisdom and fidelity of the federal government, a course of proceedings which nothing can authorize towards a power which has long occupied, and still occupies, one of the first ranks in Europe.

But the federal government having entered the path of negotiation, and the question which divided the two powers being cleared up, there is reason to hope that they will easily agree on the other points; and this his Majesty, from the sincere interest which he feels for the equal prosperity of the two nations, ardently desires.

Accept, sir, &c., CH. MAN. TALLEYRAND.

No. 6.—Extract from the royal order of the King of Spain for the delivery of the province of Louisana to the French republic, dated Barcelona, October 15, 1802.

Don Carlos, by the grace of God King of Castile, Leon, Aragon, of the Two Sicilies, of Jerusalem, Navarre, Grenada, Toledo, Valencia, Gallicia, Majorca, Minorca, Seville, Sardinia, Cordova, Corsica, Murcia, Jean, of the Algarves, Algesiras, Gibraltar, of the Canary Islands, of the East and West Indies, of the Islands and Continent of the Ocean, Archduke of Austria, Duke of Burgundy, of Brabant and Milan, Count of Apsburg, Flanders, Tyrol and Barcelona; Lord of Biscay, Molina, &c.

Whereas, I have judged it proper to retrocede to the French republic the colony and province of Louisiana, I command you, as soon as these presents are exhibited to you by General Victor, or any other officer duly authorized by said republic to receive the same, to put him in possession of the colony of Louisiana and its dependencies, together with the city and island of New Orleans, with the same limits it has at present, which it had while it belonged to France, and at the time she ceded it to my royal crown, and such as it ought to be found after the treaties successfully concluded between my States and those of other powers, in order that henceforth the same may belong to said republic, and that she may cause it to be administered and governed by her own officers and governors, as her own possession, without any exception whatever.

No. 7.—Act of delivery of the province of Louisiana by Spain to France.

The undersigned, citizen Pierre Clement Laussat, colonial prefect, commissioner on the part of the French government, to receive possession in the name of the French republic, of the colony or province of Louisiana, from the hands of the officers and other agents of his Catholic Majesty, agreeably to the full powers which he has received, in the name of the French people from citizen Bonaparte, First Consul, under date of the 17th Prairial, year 11, (6th June, 1803,) countersigned by Hugues Maret, secretary of state, and by his excellency Decres, minister of marine and of the colonies, and recently delivered in person to the commissioners of his said Catholic Majesty, together with the royal order from Barcelona, 15th October, 1802.

And the said commissioners of his Catholic Majesty, Don Manuel de Salcedo, brigadier in the King's armies, military and political governor of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, inspector of the veteran troops and militia of said provinces, royal vice patron, sub-delegate, judge of the superintendent of the post office department, &c., and Don Sebastian Calvo de la Puerta, y O'Farrell, Marquis of Casa Calvo, knight of the Order of St James, brigadier in the King's armies, and colonel of the infantry regiment of the Havana, appointed commissioners of his Catholic Majesty, for the delivery of this province to the French republic, according to the royal order of the 18th February, 1803:

Certify by these presents that, on this eighth day of Frimaire, in the twelfth year of the French republic, and 30th November, 1803, having assembled in the hall of the hotel of the city of New Orleans, accompanied on either part by the chiefs and officers of the armies of land and sea, the secular and ecclesiastical cabildo, the administration of finances of the King of Spain, the civil administration, and by other distinguished persons of their respective nations, said citizen Laussat delivered to the said commissioners of his Catholic Majesty the above-mentionod full powers from citizen Bonaparte, First Consul of the French republic; and immediately after the said Manuel de Salcedo and the Marquis of Casa Calvo declared that, by virtue of and in conformity to the terms of the order of the King of Spain, dated from Barcelona, the 15th October, 1802, and countersigned by Don Pedro Cevallos, first secretary and counsellor of state, they, from that moment, did put the said French commissioner, citizen Laussat in possession of the colony of Louisiana and its dependencies, as also of the city and island of New Orleans, with the same extent which they have on this day, and which they had while in the hands of France, when she ceded the same to the royal crown of Spain, and such as they ought to have been since the treaties successively concluded between the States of his Catholic Majesty and other powers, in order that the same may henceforth belong to the Fench republic, and be governed and administered by its officers and governers in such manner as will best suit its interests; and they have accordingly solemnly delivered to him the keys of this place, declaring that they absolve from the oath of fidelity to his said Majesty all such inhabitants as may choose to continue in the service or dependence of the French republic.

And to the end that the same may forever hereafter appear by this solemn act, the undersigned have signed these presents in the French and Spanish languages, have hereto affixed their seals, and caused the same to be countersigned by the secretaries of the respective commissions, the day, month, and year above written.

No. 8.—Proclamation of Spanish commissioners.

Don Manuel Salcedo, brigadier in the royal armies, military and political governor of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, inspector of the veteran troops and militia of the same, royal vice patron, substitute judge of the general superintendence of post offices, &c.; and Don Sebastian Calvo de la Puerta y O'Farrell, Marquis of Casa Calvo, knight of the Order of Santiago, brigadier in the royal armies, and colonel of the infantry regiment stationed at Havana; commissioners on the part of his Majesty for delivering this province to the French republic.

We make it known to all the vassals of the King, our master, of all classes and conditions whatsoever, that his Majesty has resolved to make a retrocession of the province of Louisiana, for the mutual satisfaction of both powers; and continuing to give the same proofs of protection and affection which the inhabitants of this province have always received, he has thought fit to settle, among other things, certain points which we deem it our duty publicly to make known for the particular government and disposition of all whom it may concern:

1. His Majesty, in consideration of the obligations imposed by the treaties, and wishing to avoid the differences which might arise, has been pleased to resolve that the delivery of the colony and island of New Orleans, which is to be made to General Victor, or other officer lawfully authorized by the government of the French republic, shall be made in the same manner that it was ceded by France to his Majesty, by virtue of which the limits of both shores of the river St. Louis or Mississippi shall remain as irrevocably fixed by the seventh article of the definitive treaty of peace, concluded at Paris on the 10th February, 1763; and consequently the settlements from the river Manshack or Iberville to the line which divides the American territory from the dominions of the King shall remain in the possession of Spain, and annexed to West Florida.

No. 9.—Extract of a letter from Don José Pizarro to Mr. Irving, minister in Spain, dated Palace, August 17, 1817.

"Besides this, posterior to the year 1805, the extraordinary event has occurred of his Majesty's having been unexpectedly deprived, in the year 1810, during his captivity, of the pacific possession, in which he was, of that part of West Florida which is between the river Iberville, the lakes Maurepas, Pontchartrain, and Bourne, on the one side, and the river Perdido on the other. When the indisputable property of his Majesty in the said territory was demonstrated, it was proved that Spain did not acquire it of France in 1763; that she received it of England in 1783 by a solemn treaty; that it was not and could not be comprehended in the 'retrocession of Louisiana,' made to France in the year 1800; that the government of France 'has declared so officially,' and in the most solemn manner, as well to Spain as the United States; that the fifth article of the treaty of 1778, between France and the United States, opposes itself expressly to the acquisition of France (though she had attempted it) of said territory from Spain in 1800; that the royal celuda of his Majesty, issued in Barcelona on the 15th of October, 1802, for the delivery of Louisiana, (which royal celuda was in the hands of the French government before the United States thought of acquiring the colony,) did not contemplate the delivery of territory east of the Mississippi than that of 'the island of New Orleans.'

To these grounds, which have established, and so establish in the clearest manner, the property of his Majesty in the said territory, may be added those of his pacific possession without interruption. The delivery of Louisiana took place without the least idea having occurred to the French commissioners who received it of his Majesty, for the purpose of delivering it to the United States, of aspiring to the possession of the territory between the Iberville and the Perdido. Spain continued, in the years following the delivery, exercising over it all her authority, and the United States respected this possession; a certain custom house regulation of the United States in the year 1804, which seemed to contain some expressions susceptible of an equivocal meaning as to the rights of his Majesty in the territory of Mobile, were reclaimed against on the part of the King, and the United States agreed to give a satisfactory and honorable explanation as to the said expressions. Whatever might be then, in that state of things, the pretension of right which might be formed against it, it did not appear to conform to the principle universally acknowledged to enforce that pretension* by means of acts, and in truth it was a painful duty for the faithful ministers of his Majesty, on his return from his captivity, to explain to him by what means and circumstances he had been deprived of the peaceful possession of the greater part of West Florida, without war, or any stipulation which could authorize having preceded it.

The King, attributing this extraordinary event to the circumstances, also extraordinary, of the epoch which had intervened, flattered himself that the United States would not defer placing things in the state which they were in at the time he left his dominions, and the invasion of the peninsula by Bonaparte. The glory, and even the interests of the United States might equally incline them to this restitution; for a recent and costly experience has made the world see that there are no acquisitions of territory, however extensive, which can compensate the advantages to result from the reputation which those governments acquire who regulate their operations by principles conservatory of order and justice.

With these ideas, the King directed his minister at Washington that, before he entered into the discussions which had remained pending, he should solicit the restoration of affairs in the state in which they were at the time of his absenting himself. This preliminary step appeared correspondent to the decorum of his Majesty, and the United States could not fail to acknowledge it to be so; it being very certain that the delicate honor of the American government would not consent, in a similar case, to enter into other negotiations, finding itself inquieted in the pacific possession of even one mile of its territory, without first soliciting and obtaining the due restoration.

Notwithstanding this, and the answer of the Secretary of State of 19th January, 1816, is far from containing the satisfaction and restoration which Spain had reason to expect, his Majesty, to give unequivocal proofs of his moderation, and his friendly dispositions towards the United States, without renouncing, as he does in no way renounce, nor will renounce, except in the case of some compromise, the right of property and possession which he has in the said territory, has judged fit not to insist on his demand for the present, in the hope that this point, though in its nature it ought to be preliminary, may enter into the general arrangement with the others; but your penetration will acknowledge readily, that on this essential point, as in others, the state of the question is not what it was in the year 1805, new occurrences of such importance having taken place since that period.

In the treaty proposed by Don Jose Pizarro, in 1817, with the United States, the following articles are to be inserted as the basis, viz:

"6th. His Catholic Majesty, master of Florida, East or West, in all the extension in which he received them from England by the treaty of 1783, and which they had in possession of Great Britain before said treaty, will be willing, for his part, to cede them, with the same extension, to the United States of America, in full property and perpetual sovereignty, provided that the United States are equally disposed on their part to cede, in the same form to his Catholic Majesty, that part of Louisiana which is situated to the west of the Mississippi, and is the territory which lies between the said river and the well known limit which now separates, and has separated Louisiana when France possessed it before the year 1764, and even before the death of the King of Spain, Charles II., from the Spanish province called Texas; so that, after these reciprocal cessions are verified, the course of the river Mississippi, from its source to where it discharges into the sea, will be the only limit of the dominions of his Catholic Majesty, and those of the United States; and though the King could wish that in the most southern part of said river, where it opens different branches or channels before discharging itself into the sea, the separating line might be continued through the principal channel which passes by New Orleans; yet His Majesty, desiring, in all that depends upon him, to facilitate the arrangement, it may be agreed and stipulated, that the dividing line, in the part where the Mississippi separates itself and flows into different channels, shall be established towards the western part, placing it in the middle of the arm or channel called La Fourche, to where it discharges itself into the sea, all the delta, or ground alluvion, situated on the east of said channel La Fourche, remaining in the power of the United States.

"7th. As by the 8th article of the treaty of Utrecht it is declared that for the future all cessions, sales, or alienations of the Spanish territory in America, shall be null and no value, Spain herself remaining without powers to make them, and England obliging herself to aid the Spaniards, that the limits of their dominions in America should be established and maintained as they were before the decease of King Charles II.; and as the part of the Floridas situated on the east of the river Perdido was a Spanish possession at the time of the decease of the said King Charles II., and, therefore, is comprehended in the said 8th article of the treaty of Utrecht, it is not in the power of his Catholic Majesty to effectuate, by himself, the cession mentioned in the preceding article, without the previous consent and agreement of the power or powers interested in the fulfillment of the said treaty of Utrecht, for which reason it will be indispensable, in case that the United States shall accede to the proposed arrangement, to solicit and obtain the said consent of the power or powers interested, and the derogation, and for this sole purpose of the said article of the treaty of Utrecht, which, in all other respects, shall hereafter remain in full force."

No. 10.—Note of General Armstrong, in a pamphlet entitled a "Review of Adams's Eulogium upon James Monroe."

"Mr. Adams asserts that much ability was shown in this abortive negotiation by Mr. Monroe and his colleague Mr. P. Does he forget, or has he overlooked the admission to be found in Mr. Monroe's preliminary letter to Talleyrand, "that we had bought from France only what France had bought from Spain?" By this admission, the question became one, not of construction, but of fact. It was no longer what the terms of the treaty of St. Ildefonso would warrant us in demanding, but how those terms were understood by the parties to that instrument. Spain denied that she had ceded West Florida to France, and France denied that she had either sold, or intended to sell to us, more than she had bought from Spain. Such was the Pons Asinorum which stopped the progress of Mr. Monroe and his colleague at Madrid. By the way, the construction given to the treaty of St. Ildefonso, on which the United States so long and pertinaciously relied, and which Mr. Madison's ingenuity made so plausible, was a suggestion of Mr. Livingston's, submitted by him to his government, and adopted by it, but to which Mr. M. for some time refused his assent. See Mr. L.'s official correspondence with Mr. Madison in the spring of 1803."

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 15, 1835.

Mr. AMOS DAVIS, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Martin Nedan, reported:

The petitioner prays Congress to grant him title to a certain tract of land which he states he purchased of the Ottoway tribe of Indians in the year 1795, lying on the south side of the Miami river, of lake Erie; and for a more particular description refers to a paper of that date purporting to be a deed from the chiefs of said nation to him for the land. He also refers for evidence, to proofs exhibited by him before commissioners, published in the report of the committee on public lands in 1828, entitled "Land Claims in Michigan, page 344." In the documents exhibited and referred to, the committee can find no proof whatever that the land described in the petition belonged to the Ottoway Indians at the date of the deed referred to, or that the same was in the limits of their territory. In the absence of which evidence it does not appear that this land lies in that boundary ceded to the United States by the late treaty with the Ottoway tribe of Indians. Such being the situation of the case as presented, it is not necessary to take any farther view of the subject.

The committee therefore recommend the rejection of the prayer of the petitioner.

LAND CLAIMS IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 15, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 14, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 12th instant, requesting the Secretary of the Treasury "to return to the House the report, referred to him at the last session, of the commissioners appointed to examine and adjust private land claims in Missouri, with such remarks as he may think proper to make thereon," I have the honor to inform the House, that, on the 4th of September last, this department transmitted a copy of the report of the commissioners to the Attorney General of the United States, and another to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and at the same time requested the opinion of those officers on the validity of the several claims acted and reported on by the commissioners.

On the 23d of October last, another communication was made to the Attorney General, requesting his opinion upon the principles of law assumed by the commissioners in their adjudication upon the claims reported, to enable the Commissioner of the General Land Office to make a satisfactory examination, and report to the department; and, also, as essential to my own guidance, in replying to the resolution of the 30th of June last. To this communication a reply was received from the Attorney General yesterday, and is hereto annexed (A.)

As the call of the House of the 12th instant seems to contemplate an immediate answer, and therefore precludes the possibility of further investigation by this department of those claims, since receiving the opinion of the Attorney General yesterday, and of obtaining the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, which awaited the result of that opinion, I have deemed it proper to return herewith to the House the report of the commissioners, without the delay which would be necessary (since receiving that opinion) to procure the views of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and without the still further delay which would be necessary should this department make additional inquiries and remarks on the opinions and views finally presented by those officers.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JOHN BELL, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE, January 12, 1835.

SIR: In your letter of the 22d of October, 1834, you requested my opinion upon the legal principles assumed by the recorder and commissioners for the adjustment of land titles in Missouri, under the acts of the 9th of July, 1832, and the 3d of March, 1833, as stated in the report made by them to the House of Representatives, and by that body referred to you. By your letter, and by the papers which accompanied it, I was informed that the report had been referred by you to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with directions to examine and report upon the validity of the claims therein enumerated; and that you had been induced to call for my opinion in consequence of a suggestion made to you by that officer, that the principles and resolutions assumed by the board involved not only questions of international law, but others respecting the powers, duties, and responsibilities of the various classes of officers making the grants, as well as the existence of any regulations by which they were to be governed in the performance of their duties, with which he was not familiar, and upon which the opinion of the Attorney General was necessary to the making of a satisfactory examination and report. As a further reason for the adoption of this course, the Commissioner of the General Land Office remarked that "the subject of individual claims to lands, under the different kinds of title emanating from foreign powers, having been brought before the Supreme Court of the United States for several of their last terms, in cases in which the United States were parties, and where the whole subject has been argued by the Attorney General of the United States, with the assistance of other counsel, and some of the principles involved in these cases having been decided by the court, those points were, therefore, much more accurately understood by the Attorney General, than they could possibly be by his office." Although strongly inclined to think that the circumstances referred to were not sufficient to obviate the objections made to you in my letter of the 17th of October, I was yet so well satisfied of the reasonableness of the suggestions made by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and of the great burden imposed upon you by this reference, as to be sincerely desirous to relieve both him and yourself by any aid I might be enabled to afford. But as none of the cases referred to by the Commissioner had been argued or examined by me, and as I had not the slightest acquaintance with the subject of these peculiar titles, I thought it proper to defer the examination of the subject until I could obtain the advice and assistance of General Call, of Florida, who has been, for several years, the counsel of the government in analogous cases, and has taken part in the argument of several before the Supreme Court, and whose attendance here, with a view to the preparation of a very important cause, involving many of the questions on which you desire to be advised, I had reason to expect on the 1st instant.

Owing to some cause, not yet known to me, that gentleman has not arrived; and as I cannot, with propriety, retain the papers any longer, I herewith return them to you. I regret that I do not feel myself sufficiently familiar with the subject to express an opinion on any of the principles assumed by the commissioners, except those stated in their first and second resolutions. The former of these is undoubtedly correct in point of fact; and the other is founded on, and accords with, the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Arredondo, which has since been followed in several subsequent cases.

The papers are herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. F. BUTLER.

The honorable LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 21, 1835.

Mr. LINN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Sebastian Butcher and Peter Bloom, of the county of St. Genevieve, in the State of Missouri, for themselves and the heirs and legal representatives of Bartholomew Butcher and Michael Butcher, deceased, reported:

That in 1797 the petitioners and the said Bartholomew and Michael Butcher emigrated to Upper Louisiana, and have resided from that time until the present in what is now the State of Missouri. That, on the 11th June, 1802, the petitioners and the said Bartholomew and Michael Butcher petitioned the intendant at New Orleans for a grant of 1,600 arpens of land, to be taken at a place therein mentioned, or if vacant land could not be there found, then to take the quantity lacking in the King's domain; and that Don Pierre Delassus de Luziere, commandant of the post of New Bourbon, recommended to the intendant of Louisiana to confirm the said grant to the petitioners, a copy of which grant is annexed. They also state that the original petition and recommendation were filed before the board of commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims in Missouri, and a certified copy of the testimony laid before said commissioners is also annexed. The depositions of John B. Valle and John R. Lalumandiere, hereunto annexed, show that Mary Ann Laplante, a material witness, has died since the testimony was laid before the board of commissioners. The petitioners further state, that being unlearned and illiterate men, they had supposed and always took it for granted, that the claim exhibited by them was a concession; and they aver that such grants were always considered as concessions, and passed from hand to hand as such, during the Spanish government, as will appear from the depositions of Messrs. Valle and Lalumandiere, and other testimony taken before the board of commissioners. The petitioners further state, that the board of commissioners have decided that their claim is not considered by them a concession, and therefore they do not consider themselves as authorized to adjudicate upon it. But the petitioners also state that, from the time of the grant to the present, they have enjoyed the possession of the land as other persons holding under concessions, and had no doubts but their claim rested on the same basis as other good concessions.

Joseph Pratte, being under oath, deposed that he has seen the recommendation of the said Luziere, late commandant of the post of New Bourbon, annexed to the petition of the said claimants, for a grant or concession of 1,600 arpens of land; that he is well acquainted with the handwriting of the said Luziere, and that the recommendation, dated 15th June, 1802, and the signature affixed thereto, are in the handwriting of the said Luziere. Also that he is well acquainted with the handwring of Ant. Soulard, late surveyor general of Upper Louisiana, and that his signature to the plat of survey is, as the deponent verily believes, genuine, and in his handwriting. The deponent further saith that he is fifty-seven years of age, and has resided in St. Genevieve and vicinity, in what was formerly Upper Louisiana, all his life; that he is well acquainted with the nature of Spanish concessions, and requests and recommendations of commandants of posts, of which latter class the claim here shown appears to be one. That after year 1799 or 1800, (as near as he can recollect,) the commandants did not give concessions, but recommendations to the intendant general at New Orleans, (as in this case,) and that said recommendations were uniformly considered of equal validity with concessions, and were passed and transferred from hand to hand as such, and that is was the uniform custom of the intendant general at New Orleans to grant and confirm all such claims. He has no doubt but what the claim would have been confirmed by the intendant; that he has known the petitioners to have come in this country in 1797; that it was the custom of the government to grant lands to persons of their description when applied for; and the deponent has never heard that they have received any other lands than those mentioned in the present claim.

John Baptiste Valle also deposes that the recommendation and signature are in the handwriting of Luziere; also that the signature of Ant. Soulard is genuine. That he is now seventy-two years of age, and has resided in St. Genevieve all his life, and is well acquainted with the manner of granting concessions by the Spanish government in Louisiana, and that he always considered incipient titles of the kind here shown as much entitled to confirmation as any other; and that frequently lands granted by the said Spanish government were not surveyed until several years after they were granted and confirmed.

Mary Ann Laplante deposes that she is fifty-eight years of age; that she came from France to Upper Louisiana in the family of the before-mentioned M. Luziere, and has resided in New Bourbon and St. Genevieve ever since; that sometime before the change of government (she thinks in 1802) she was in the office of the said Luziere, (he being then commandant of the post of New Bourbon,) and saw Luziere writing a paper, which he told her was a concession or grant of land to Bartholomew Butcher, Sebastien (or Bastien) Butcher, Michael Butcher and Peter Bloom, which grant or concession said Luziere informed her was for four hundred arpens for each of said persons, for that, as those persons were such good stone masons, it was a great object to the people and the government to retain such good workmen and peaceable subjects in the country. The deponent being blind, could not, of course, swear whether the concession now shown to the commissioner is the same she saw Luziere write.

Pierre Menard, in a letter dated 17th June, 1834, states that Michael, Bartholomew, and Sebastian Butcher, and Peter Bloom, came to St. Genevieve, Missouri, as early as 1796, and obtained what was understood to be a concession for 1,600 arpens of land, to be divided between them. They immediately settled the lands and improved and cultivated them ever since; Michael Butcher having died about three years back.

It further appears from the papers before the committee, that the commissioners appointed under the act of Congress of July 9th, 1832, for the final settlement of private land claims in Missouri, came to the conclusion, from the provisions of the law under which they acted, that the claim was anomalous, and did not come within their jurisdiction, not being a grant by a commandant, sub-delegate, lieutenant governor, or governor general, but a mere recommendation from a commandant to the governor general at New Orleans, for a grant. The board carefully examined the claim, and urged, from its merit, the favorable consideration of Congress; but independent of this, the parties under acts of Congress would have been entitled to a larger amount of land than now claimed, under the different laws making donations to those who had settled and cultivated on or before the 20th December, 1803, or within eight months after.

RELATIVE TO THE PREPARATION OF THE MAPS OF CERTAIN STATES AND TERRITORIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 22, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 22, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the Senate of the 6th instant, requesting the Secretary of the Treasury "to report to the Senate the progress which has been made in his department under the resolution of the Senate of the 28th February, 1823," &c., I have the honor herewith to transmit to the Senate a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, which gives the information required by the resolution.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Honorable M. VAN BUREN, Vice-President of the United States and President of the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 21, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the Senate of the 6th instant, referred by you to this office, by which the Secretary of the Treasury is "requested to report to the Senate the progress which has been made in his department under the resolution of the Senate of the 28th of February, 1823, directing to be prepared and laid before the Senate maps of the several States of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Alabama, and Louisiana, and of the Territories of Michigan, Arkansas, and Florida; whether the said maps, or any number of them, have been completed according to the direction of the said resolution; what is the state of advancement upon such of the said maps as have not been completed; whether the means are in the possession of the department to complete the said maps; and whether any of the said maps heretofore completed and laid before the Senate have since been posted up so as to conform to the existing condition of the public lands, and to what date each map has been so posted up; and also to report the names of the several persons who have been employed by the department as draftsmen upon the said maps, the dates from which to which each person has been so employed, and the rates of wages and the amounts paid to each respectively for such service,"—I have the honor to report:

That, under the resolution of the Senate of the 28th of February, 1823, maps of the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, and Alabama, and of the Territory of Michigan, were prepared at this office and have been sent to the Senate, exhibiting the information required by that resolution up to the 1st of January, 1826, so far as relates to the State of Alabama, and to the 30th of June, 1825, in respect to the other States and the Territory of Michigan. The protraction of the maps of the surveys in Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, and Arkansas, was commenced some years ago; but they have not been completed, and are now in this office.

The information necessary to complete all those maps up to the 30th of November last is in this office; and I beg leave to refer to the annexed paper, marked A, as showing the work required to be performed on each map.

In answer to that part of the resolution which requires the names of the persons employed, the time of employment, the rates of wages, and the amounts paid to them respectively, I have to state, that, upon the passage of the resolution of 1823, the regular draftsman of the office, (Mr. Robert King,) whose salary was $1,150 per annum, commenced the protraction of the maps; and, with the exception of the work heretofore done upon the Arkansas map, that gentleman performed almost all the mapping that has been done under that resolution.

By an act passed on the 24th of March, 1824, the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to employ an assistant draftsman and two colorers in this office, for twelve months, to complete the maps required by the Senate's resolution of 28th February, 1823; and by the act of the 2d April, 1824, the sum of three thousand dollars was appropriated for their compensation. Under those acts, John F. Hamptramck was appointed assistant draftsman, at a salary of $1,150 per annum; and Philip Tilyard and Joseph Wood as colorers, at $925 per annum each.

Mr. Hamptramck was employed from the 7th of April, 1824, to the 6th of April, 1825, under those acts, and from the 1st of May to the 1st of August, 1825, with the sanction of the Secretary of the Treasury; and for his services during those periods, received the sum of $1,437.10.

Mr. Tilyard was employed from the 7th of April, 1824, to the 6th of April, 1825, and received $925.

Mr. Wood was employed from the 11th of April, 1824, to the 10th April, 1825, and received $925.

The maps not being completed when the appropriation made by the act of 1824 was expended, Mr. Charles Gordon, who had acted for some time as a colorer, in behalf of Mr. Wood, who was unable to perform his duties, was continued in the office as a colorer; and in the estimates of this office for the years 1826, '27, '28, '29, '30, and '31, the item of contingencies was stated in each of those years to be inclusive of "the compensation of the person employed to color the maps required by the resolution of the Senate of the 28th of February, 1823;" and from the appropriations founded on those estimates, Mr. Gordon was of course paid out of the contingent fund of this office until the 1st of December, 1831, when he ceased to be employed.

From the 10th of April, 1825, to the 10th of April, 1827, he was compensated at the rate of $925 per annum; and from the last-mentioned date to the 1st of December, 1831, at the rate of $1,000 per annum; and the total amount so paid to him was $6,488.88.

It is proper to state, that during the period for which Mr. Gordon was thus paid, his time was not exclusively devoted to the preparation of those maps; and it is impracticable to estimate the time which the regular draftsman of the office, Mr. King, devoted to the same object, and the true amount of the expenditures incurred in consequence thereof.

In consequence of its having been provided, in the general appropiation law of 1833, "that no part of the appropriations herein made, for the General Land Office, shall be applied or expended for and on account of a resolution of the Senate passed the 28th day of February, 1823, requiring maps to be prepared, designating thereon by discriminating colors, the lands sold, the lands granted to States for internal improvements, donations to individuals, military grants, and private claims, confirmed by the government," no expenditures have since that time been incurred by this office in completing those maps. All which is respectfully submitted.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

The Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

A.

Statement in relation to the present condition of the maps ordered by the Senate's resolution of the 28th February, 1823, with an estimate of the nature and amount of labor required to complete them to the 30th November, 1834.

STATE OF OHIO.

The map, now in possession of the Senate, exhibits all the surveys that have been made in that State; but, in order to comply with the requirements of the resolution of 1823, so as to complete the map to the 30th November last, it will be necessary to color all the operations under the land system since the 30th June, 1825, consisting of 33,190 tracts sold, the selections for canals, roads, schools, Indians, and for other purposes, as well as the closing operations under the credit system; which may be estimated to require the labor of one person for six hundred and fifteen days.

STATE OF INDIANA.

To complete the map of this State, heretofore sent to the Senate, it will be necessary to protract one hundred and fifty townships and fractional townships, to color 51,234 tracts sold from the 30th June, 1825, to the 30th November, 1834, the closing operations under the credit system, and the tracts selected for canals, roads, Indians, schools, and other purposes; estimated to require seven hundred and twenty days.

STATE OF ILLINOIS.

The map of this State, furnished to the Senate, exhibits all the surveys that have been received; but to color 27,733 tracts sold from the 30th June, 1825, to 30th November, 1834, the tracts selected for canals, schools, &c., and the closing proceedings under the credit system, is estimated to require four hundred and seven days.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, EAST AND WEST OF LAKE MICHIGAN.

To complete the map heretofore sent to the Senate, will require the protraction of four hundred and nineteen townships and fractional townships, the coloring of 21,421 tracts sold between the 30th June, 1825, and 30th November last, the closing operations under the credit system, the lands selected for schools, &c., which would require about three hundred and thirty-three days.

STATE OF MISSOURI.

To complete the map of the State, heretofore furnished to the Senate, to the 30th November last, will require the protraction of thirty-two townships and fractional townships, the coloring of the closing operations under the credit system, of 23,255 tracts sold for cash since the 30th June, 1825, the selections for schools, &c., estimated at three hundred and four days.

STATE OF LOUISIANA.

A map of the surveys in this State has been commenced, and is in this office; to complete it will require the protraction of three hundred and twenty-five townships and fractional townships, the coloring of the lands sold under the credit system, of 2,791 tracts sold under the cash system, the lands granted for schools, and those confirmed and granted to individuals, estimated to require one hundred and sixty-eight days.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI.

To complete the map of this State, which has been commenced, will require the protraction of five hundred and fifty-six townships and fractional townships, the coloring of all the lands sold under the credit system, and of 28,848 tracts sold for cash, the lands confirmed or granted to individuals, the selections for schools, Indian reservations, &c., estimated to require at least five hundred and seventy-three days.

STATE OF ALABAMA.

To complete to the 30th November last, the map of this State, which has been furnished to the Senate, will require the protraction of four hundred and eleven townships and fractional townships, the coloring of the closing operations under the credit system, the tracts selected for canals, schools, Indian reservations, &c., and of 38,860 tracts sold from the first January, 1826, estimated at seven hundred and twelve days.

TERRITORY OF FLORIDA.

To complete the map which has been commenced of this Territory, will require the protraction of two hundred and one townships, the coloring of the lands granted or confirmed to individuals, the selections for schools, &c., and of about four thousand cash sales, which may be estimated at one hundred and seven days.

TERRITORY OF ARKANSAS.

A map of this Territory was commenced by Mr. Hamtramck, but in consequence of its present appearance, it is thought that it would be advisable to commence another map; and it is estimated that to furnish as complete a map as the documents in the office will permit, will require the protraction of 650 townships and fractional townships, the coloring of 2,433 sold tracts, of 6,084 tracts granted as military bounties, the lands confirmed and granted to individuals, and those selected for schools and other purposes, would require about 216 days.

The whole of which may be considered as being equal to the labor of one competent person for nearly fourteen years; and is a low estimate, without making any allowance for sickness or unavoidable absence during that period.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 22, 1835.

Mr. LINN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Philipson, for confirmation of his title to a tract of land in the State of Missouri, reported:

The petitioner sets forth, that the tract of land, containing two arpens in front by forty arpens in depth, situated among the second line of concessions or grants, adjacent or appertaining to the village of St. Louis, at a place near that village called the Cul de Sac, bounded on the front by the end or west line of the forty arpens lots, and adjoining at its western boundary and depth to the royal domain, on the north adjoining to the land of Madam Camp, and on the south to that of M. Yosti, to which he prays confirmation of title, was, in 1795, and for many years previous thereto, held and possessed by one Joseph Sorin, commonly called Larochelle; that on the 1st June, 1795, the said Sorin or Larochelle did, by a deed of that date, (a certified copy of which accompanies the petition,) sell, convey, and relinquish unto one Gabriel Lachance, for the sum of one hundred francs or livres, the said tract of land; that the said tract of land, as above described, was held and occupied by the said Lachance, without challenge from any source, from the said 1st June, 1795, until the 9th September, 1816, on which day he, the said Lachance, did, by a conveyance in due form of law, (a copy of which is also furnished,) for the sum of one hundred dollars, current money, sell, convey, and relinquish unto the petitioner, and one Silvester Labbadie, and their heirs forever, said tract of land hereinbefore described; that said Silvester Labbadie, and his wife, afterwards, by deed, bearing date the 9th June, 1817, conveyed and released all their interest and estate in the said tract, to the petitioner and his heirs, forever; by virtue of which several conveyances, the whole interest, estate, and claim of, in, and to the said tract, became vested in the petitioner; and that the petitioner has remained in the continual and undisturbed possession thereof ever since.

The grounds upon which the petitioner claims confirmation of his title to said tract are, that said tract was held in undisturbed possession by the afore-mentioned Sorin, or Larochelle; that, although no record can be found in any of the offices, of the right of said Sorin, or Larochelle, to said tract, nevertheless, that said Sorin, or Larochelle, did actually possess and occupy, unchallenged, said tract, is abundantly and satisfactorily proved by the testimony of Pierre Chouteau, (a certified copy of which also accompanies the petition,) in which he says that the said Sorin, or Larochelle, "was universally acknowledged by the inhabitants of said town of St. Louis and district to be the owner and exclusive proprietor of said two by forty arpens, and that as such owner, the said Sorin, or Larochelle, by himself, or his servants or assigns, cultivated said tract of land."

There being no evidence even to assert that the right to said tract was held by any other person or persons, and the fact of its having been settled and cultivated many years, by both the original and subsequent possessors thereof, being clearly proved, your committee have no hesitation in recommending that the claim of said Philipson, to said tract of land, be confirmed, and therefore report a bill for this purpose.

LAWS, OR REGULATIONS UNDER WHICH OATHS ARE TAKEN BY PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 28, 1835.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January, 26, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 30th, ultimo, "that the Commissioner of the General Land Office be directed to lay before the Senate a copy of any oath or oaths prescribed by the Department of the Treasury, to be administered to all persons who may become the purchasers of the public lands subject to entry at private sale, and that the said Commissioner report to the Senate under what act of Congress the said oath or oaths were authorized so to be prescribed and administered," I have the honor to report, that, as no particular oath or oaths have been designated in the resolution, nor any indication therein by which this office could be directed in its examination and report, other than that which relates to the sales of public lands subject to entry at private sale; and as it embraces a range of official operations under several acts of Congress, and instructions prescribed and directed by the Secretary of the Treasury, I have deemed it my duty to append to this document a copy of all the laws and circulars of instructions connected therewith, that the Senate may be fully advised of every matter in connection with the subject, so far as this office possesses the means of information.

The paper hereunto annexed, marked A, is a copy of "An act for the establishment of a General Land Office in the Department of the Treasary;" approved 25th April, 1812.

By that act the Commissioner is required "under the direction of the head of the department, to superintend, execute and perform all such acts and things touching and respecting the public lands of the United States, and other lands patented or granted by the United States," as were previously directed to be done and performed by law in the respective offices of the Secretary of State, the Secretary and Register of the Treasury, and of the Secretary of War, or which thereafter should by law be assigned to the said office.

Under this general authority, I learn it has been the practice of the Commissioner, with the assent of the Secretary of the Treasury, as occasions rendered necessary, and to facilitate the execution of the laws of Congress in connection with the subject, to make and issue such rules and regulations, and transmit such instructions to the several land offices, as from time to time were deemed necessary to carry into effect the manifest intentions of Congress. As this practice has been continued ever since the organization of the office, without any impeachment or censure thereof by the legislative body, and as I am convinced from a full review of the subject that it was introduced from inevitable necessity, and not from any motive or desire to encroach upon the prerogatives of Congress, I have not felt myself justified in departing therefrom since it became my duty to administer and execute the appropriate laws assigned to this bureau.

I have annexed to this document the copy of "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved May, 29, 1830, marked B.

By this act, privileges of purchase were granted to a certain class of individual settlers on and cultivators of the public domain, at any time within one year, whether on lands subject to sale at private entry, or on lands surveyed but not then brought into market, by an offer at public sale. To carry into effect this act, without prejudice to the private interests intended to be created, and at the same time secure to others the right of private entry, it became necessary, as the act required proof, in the case of pre-emptioners, and that the ordinary sales should not be discontinued for one year, to prescribe rules and require oaths, in every instance of an entry made at private sale. These were prescribed and adopted, as will be found in the papers hereunto appended, marked C and D.

The reasons for these rules and regulations, and for requiring an oath in cases of private entry, are fully set forth and explained in the following extracts from the circular of my predecessor in office, dated September 14, 1830, marked D:

"As the law grants to any actual settler on the public lands, who was in possession thereof at the date of the act, and cultivated the same in 1829, a right of pre-emption to lands which having been offered at public sale, were subject to private entry at the same date, and has provided the term of one year for its operation, the question arises whether the ordinary private entries of such lands are to be suspended until the 29th May, 1831, when the occupant claims shall have been proved and filed, or whether the ordinary private entries can proceed at the hazard of interfering with the occupant within the year. This being a difficulty against which the law has omitted to provide, and it not being believed to be the intention of its framers that the ordinary private entries should be suspended for the term of one year, we must therefore so act as to make the law available to the occupant, to its full extent as to time, and also permit the ordinary private entries to proceed. It is therefore to be expressly understood that every purchase of a tract of land at ordinary private sale, to which a pre-emption claim shall be proved and filed according to law, at any time prior to the 30th May, 1831, is to be either null and void, (the purchase money thereof being refundable under instructions hereafter to be given,) or subject to any future legislative provisions."

"Therefore, prior to your permitting any entries of land, you will have to exercise every possible precaution to prevent such interference. The only precaution that can be pointed out to you, is to require the oath of the applicant, that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, no claim exists to the same land, as a pre-emption under the act of 29th May, 1830."

The oath alluded to in the above-named instructions was not required by any express words of the act, and therefore no special form was prescribed; but the precaution appears to have been advisedly adopted (and, as I understood, after much consideration and hesitation), as absolutely indispensable to the due execution of the act of the 29th May, 1830, and other acts of Congress of equal dignity and validity.

The office was in a dilemma, and greatly embarrassed in the execution of laws, which, in their provisions, conflicted with each other, and required the utmost vigilance of the department to prevent the sacrifice of individual rights, and at the same time preserve the paramount interests of the government. It was not foreseen, on the passage of the law, if I am truly advised, that rights irrevocably vested under it were to interfere with the ordinary sales of the public lands at private entry.

I deem it proper here to state, that during the session of 1830–1831, when complaints were made to this office from Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and also named in Congress, that these instructions created much personal inconvenience; I submitted the whole subject to the honorable Samuel D. Ingham, then Secretary of the Treasury, for his review and consideration; and that, in a personal conference with him on the subject, it was his opinion that no alteration or change should be made therein, without the further legislation of Congress. No further legislation was had at that session in connection with this complicated subject, and no change was adopted in the execution of the laws. To Mr. Ingham I owe the declaration, that in his official conduct, as the head of the Treasury Department, so far as the same came within my knowledge and observation, to my judgment, he exhibited the wisdom and discernment of the statesman, and the vigilance and industry of the patriot; and particularly in every matter connected with the General Land Office. Having his sanction for a practice previously adopted, so far as the said oaths were required, it was not competent for me to make any change therein without the assent of the head of the department; and being of opinion they were required, as essential to the administration of right and justice, my own sense of official duty dictated to me a continuance of the same. The principles of right and the verity of facts cannot be departed from without a dereliction of public duty, nor become the subject of discussion in contradistinction with the plain and unequivocal sense of the legislature. The Executive department of the government had no option. It was required to execute all the laws, and in its efforts so to do, has endeavored to conform to the intentions of Congress as far as practicable. The same principles have been applied, and the same practice continued, though with some modification, in the execution of the act of June 19, 1834, as will appear by the papers herewith annexed, marked E and F. The same difficulties were found to exist, and the same embarrassments to meet, as in the act of June 29, 1830. The reasons for adopting the same rule of conduct for the several land officers are set forth in these documents, to wit, the circulars of instructions, dated July 22, 1834, and October 23, 1834.

The annexed documents, marked G and H, are copies of the acts of the 5th April, 1832, and the 2d March, 1833, and the instructions issued under the same. Those acts required, in express terms, an affidavit of the applicant to purchase at private sale, in certain cases, and has been complied with as far as practicable.

Documents marked I, J, K, and L, hereunto annexed, are copies of all the laws and instructions, in connection with the several acts of Congress for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and navy, and of the Continental army, during the revolutionary war; from which it will appear that it was indispensable to prescribe the oaths required, to prevent the greatest embarrassments in the disposition of the public lands at private sale.

The act of the 30th May, 1830, as per document I, provides "that no scrip issued under the provisions of this act shall entitle the holder to enter or purchase any settled or occupied lands, without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said lands at the time the same shall be entered or applied for."

Although the law did not in express words require an affidavit, yet in its execution, and to conform to its manifest intent and object, which was to protect the actual settler and occupant against the interference of the scrip locator, the only effectual means suggested, and which I am happy to say has been attended with great success, was the oath prescribed.

All which is respectfully submitted. ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. MARTIN VAN BUREN, Vice-President of the United States and President of the Senate.

A.

AN ACT for the establishment of a General Land Office in the department of the Treasury.

SEC. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be established in the department of the Treasury an office, to be denominated the General Land Office; the chief officer of which shall be called the Commissioner of the General Land Office, whose duty it shall be, under the direction of the head of the department, to superintend, execute, and perform all such acts and things touching or respecting the public lands of the United States, and other lands patented or granted by the United States, as have heretofore been directed by law to be done or performed in the office of the Secretary of State, of the Secretary and Register of the Treasury, and of the Secretary of War, or which shall hereafter by law be assigned to the said office.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there shall be in the said office an inferior officer, to be appointed by the said principal officer, to be employed therein as he shall deem proper, and to be called the chief clerk of the General Land Office, who, in all cases when the said principal office shall become vacant, during such vacancy shall have the charge and custody of the seal, and of all records, books, and papers belonging to the said office.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said principal officer, and every other person to be appointed and employed in the said office, shall, before he enters on the duties of his office or appointment, take an oath or affirmation, truly and faithfully to execute the trust committed to him.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said Commissioner shall cause a seal of office to be made and provided for the said office, with such device as the President of the United States shall approve; and copies of any records, books, or papers belonging to the said office, under the signature of the said Commissioner, or, when the office shall be vacant, under the signature of the chief clerk; and the said seal shall be competent evidence in all cases in which the original records, books, or papers could be evidence.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the said Commissioner shall, forthwith, after his appointment, be entitled to the custody, and shall take charge of the said seal, and also of all records, books, and papers remaining in the offices of the Secretary of State, of the Secretary and Register of the Treasury, and of the Secretary of War, touching or concerning the public lands of the United States; and the said records, books, and papers shall become, and be deemed the records, books, and papers of the said office.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the said Commissioner shall, when required by the President of the United States, or either House of Congress, make a plat of any land surveyed under the authority of the United States, and give such information respecting the public lands, and concerning the business of his office, as shall be directed.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That, in all cases in which land has heretofore, or shall hereafter, be given by the United States for military services, warrants shall be granted to the parties entitled to such land by the Secretary of War; and such warrants shall be recorded in the said Land Office, in books to be kept for the purpose, and shall be located as is or may be provided by law; and patents shall afterwards be issued accordingly.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That all patents issuing from the said office shall be issued in the name of the United States, and under the seal of the said office, and be signed by the President of the United States, and countersigned by the Commissioner of the said office, and shall be recorded in the said office, in books to be kept for the purpose.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That all returns relative to the public lands, heretofore directed to be made to the Secretary of the Treasury, shall hereafter be made to the said Commissioner, who shall have power to audit and settle all public accounts relative to the public lands: Provided, that it shall be the duty of the said Commissioner, upon the settlement of any such account, to certify the balance and transmit the account, with the vouchers and certificates, to the Comptroller of the Treasury, for his examination and decision thereon.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That no person appointed to an office instituted by this act, or employed in any such office shall, directly or indirectly, be concerned in the purchase of any right, title, or interest, in any public land, either in his own right, or in trust of any other person, or in the name or right of any other person in trust for himself, nor shall take or receive any fee or emolument for negotiating or transacting the business of the office. And any person offending in the premises against the prohibition of this act, shall forfeit and pay one hundred dollars; and, upon conviction, shall be removed from office.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of the said Land Office shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and shall receive an annual salary equal to the salary of the Auditor of the Treasury, payable quarterly; and the sum of two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars is hereby appropriated for the said compensation, during the year one thousand eight hundred and twelve, to be paid out of moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. And the said Commissioner shall have the same privilege with the Comptroller of the Treasury, of sending and receiving letters and packages, and also final certificates and patents for land, free of postage.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of the Land Office shall be authorized to employ a sufficient number of clerks: Provided, that their annual compensation shall not exceed, in the whole, seven thousand dollars; and the said compensation shall be paid in the following manner during the year one thousand eight hundred and twelve, that is to say: three thousand eight hundred dollars shall be paid out of the moneys appropriated for the compensation of clerks, during said year, in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury; one thousand four hundred dollars shall be paid out of the moneys appropriated for the compensation of clerks, during said year, in the office of the Secretary of State; and three hundred dollars shall be paid out of the moneys appropriated for the compensation of clerks, during said year, in the office of the Secretary of War.

B.

AN ACT to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled: That every settler or occupant of the public lands prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine, shall be, and he is hereby authorized to enter with the register of the land office for the district in which such lands may lie, by legal subdivisions, any number of acres not more than one hundred and sixty, or a quarter section, to include his improvement, upon paying to the United States the then minimum price of said land: Provided, however, that no entry or sale of any lands shall be made under the provisions of this act which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States, or either of the several States in which any of the public lands may be situated.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if two or more persons be settled upon the same quarter section, the same may be divided between the two first actual settlers, if by a north and south or east and west line the settlement or improvement of each can be included in a half quarter section; and in such case the said settlers shall be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That, prior to any entries being made under the privileges given by this act, proof of settlement or improvement shall be made to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the land district in which such lands may lie, agreeably to the rules to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for that purpose; which register and receiver shall each be entitled to receive fifty cents for his services therein. And that all assignments and transfers of the right of pre-emption given by this act, prior to the issuance of patents, shall be null and void.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not delay the sale of any of the public lands of the United States beyond the time which has been or may be appointed for that purpose by the President's proclamation; nor shall any of the provisions of this act be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor shall the right of pre-emption contemplated by this act extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act shall be and remain in force for one year from and after its passage.

Approved May 29, 1830. ANDREW JACKSON.

(Circular.)

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 10, 1830.

GENTLEMEN: Annexed you have a copy of the act of Congress approved on the 29th ultimo, entitled "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands."

This act grants to any person who actually cultivated a tract of the public lands in the year 1829, and who, continuing thereon, was in the actual possession of that tract at the date of the passage of the act, a pre-emption right to the lands, at $1.25 per acre.

The fact of the cultivation in 1829, and that of the possession of the land applied for on the 29th of May, 1830, must be established by the affidavit of the occupant, supported by such corroborative testimony as may be entirely satisfactory to you both. The evidence must be taken by a justice of the peace, in the presence of the register and receiver, and be in answer to such interrogatories, propounded by them, as may be best calculated to elicit the truth. The whole of the evidence must be carefully filed in the office of the register.

All lands not otherwise appropriated, of which the township plats are or may be on file in the register's office, prior to the expiration of the law, are subject to entry under the act.

Where the whole of the improvement is embraced in the limits of a quarter section, the occupant must be confined to the entry of that particular "quarter section;" but where the improvement is situated in different quarter sections, then the applicant is entitled to enter the two adjacent legal subdivisions or half quarters in which the improvement may lie, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres in the whole.

In making your usual returns to this office, you will, in all cases of purchase under this act, designate them by marking on the returns and the certificate of purchase, "Pre-emption act of 1830."

With great respect, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner.

The REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ——.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 14, 1830.

GENTLEMEN: Numerous interrogatories having been propounded in relation to the act of 29th May last, entitled "An act granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," I subjoin the following replies for your information and government, embracing, it is believed, all the prominent points which have yet arisen; and have to add, that if any case shall occur at your office, which, after a careful perusal, appears to you not provided for in the present or former circular letter in relation to that law, you will make it a subject of a joint communication.

1st. In cases where more than two persons were settled on the same quarter section, the two first actual settlers only are entitled to the right of pre-emption under the 2d section of the act, and none others are provided for.

2d. As the law grants to any settler on the public lands who was in possession thereof at the date of the act, and cultivated the same in 1829, a right of pre-emption to lands which, having been offered at public sale, were subject to private entry at the same date, and has provided the term of one year for its operation, the question arises whether the ordinary private entries of such lands are to be suspended until the 29th May, 1831, when the occupant claims shall have been proved and filed, or whether the ordinary private entries can proceed at the hazard of interfering with the occupant within the year. This being a difficulty against which the law has omitted to provide, and it not being believed to be the intention of its framers that the ordinary private entries should be suspended for the term of one year; we must therefore so act as to make the law available to the occupant, to its full extent as to time, and also permit the ordinary private entries to proceed. It is therefore to be expressly understood, that every purchase of a tract of land at ordinary private sale to which a pre-emption claim shall be proved and filed according to law, at any time prior to the 30th May, 1831, is to be either null and void, (the purchase money thereof being refundable under instructions hereafter to be given,) or subject to any future legislative provisions.

Therefore, prior to your permitting any entries of land, you will have to exercise every possible precaution to prevent such interference. The only precaution that can be pointed out to you, is to require the oath, of the applicant, that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, no claim exists to the same land, as a pre-emption under the act of 29th May, 1830.

The right to enter pre-emptions within any tract of country offered at public sale, subsequent to the date of the act, ceases at the time of the commencement of such public sale. Therefore, all tracts remaining unsold after such public sale are of course liable to private entry in the same manner as if the pre-emption law had not been passed.

You are requested to make a report to this office on the 1st of November next, of all private sales which shall, up to that period, be found to conflict with pre-emption rights, and monthly reports of the same character are requested thereafter.

3d. The settler has the right to select any one of several tracts which he may have actually occupied at the date of the act, and cultivated in 1829.

4th. It is the intention and object of the law, that where two persons are settled on a quarter section, each of them should obtain his own improvements as near as practicable; and if this can be done by dividing the quarter section by an east and west or a north and south line, the register and receiver will proceed to make the division; but if such division would deprive either party of a material portion of his improvement, then the parties may be permitted to take the whole quarter section jointly, and make such division among themselves as they may prefer for their mutual interest. The entries in your books, the receiver's receipt, and the register's certificate, in such case are to be in the joint names of the parties, and the patent will be issued to them as tenants in common.

5th. When two or more persons have settled on a quarter section, and have relinquished their claims to one person, prior to the date of the act, those who have relinquished have no claim to a pre-emption.

6th. The act of 31st March, 1830, entitled "An act for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, and for the suppression of fraudulent practices at the public sales of the lands of the United States," has provided the special privilege of pre-emption to the purchasers, their heirs or assignees, of all lands relinquished under any of the laws passed for the relief of purchasers of the public lands, and of such lands further credited under the relief laws passed in the years 1821, 1822, or 1823, as have since reverted to the United States by reason of nonpayment, which right extends to the 4th day of July, 1831. The privilege of entering any such lands under the general pre-emption law of 29th May, 1830, does not exist. The right of pre-emption under the act of 29th May, 1830, may, however, be claimed on that description of lands remaining unsold which were not further credited under any of the relief laws above mentioned, and which have reverted to the United States for nonpayment under the act of 10th May, 1800.

7th. It being the intention of the law to confine the privilege of pre-emption to the tract occupied and cultivated; to a maximum quantity of one quarter section, it results that where such tract is a fraction, containing less than the quantity of a quarter section, the right of pre-emption does not extend beyond the quantity of such fraction. In cases, however, where the fraction exceeds the maximum quantity, the entry is to be made conformably to the legal subdivisions, in such manner as to obtain the quantity as nearly as circumstances will admit, and to include the improvements of the occupant.

8th. Although a quarter section may be found to contain rather more than the ordinary quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, the right of pre-emption is to extend to the full quantity of such quarter section. If, however, such quarter section (situate on the north or west sides of the township in which the excesses of quantity are thrown agreeably to law) should contain so large an excess as to have rendered it necessary for the surveyor general to subdivide the same into three or more lots of eighty acres each, the party in such case is to take two adjoining lots, including his improvements.

9th. The law contemplates that payment be made for the lands claimed by the pre-emption right at the period when the proof shall be filed.

10th. Possession at the date of the act, and cultivation in 1829, are both essentially necessary to the conferring of the pre-emption privilege; the absence of either of these requisites will vitiate the claim. The building of a mill is a "possession," but without actual cultivation it does not confer the pre-emption privilege under the law. The extent and nature of the cultivation are points concerning which the law is silent. The ordinary culture of the soil, with the view to the raising of a crop for farming purposes, either of Indian corn, small grains, clover, cotton, tobacco, or esculent roots, is all that is to be looked to as regards the requisite "cultivation."

11th. An individual who mediately or immediately has acquired a title to a tract of public land which he occupies and cultivates, and who, either by accident or design, has so constructed his fence as to include part of any adjoining tract of public land, does not thereby acquire a right of pre-emption, under the law, to such adjoining tract.

12th. When the occupant is unable to pay for a full quarter section, he may be permitted to enter the half quarter which shall include his improvements, to be either the east or west half of such quarter, the divisional line running north and south, in the ordinary mode prescribed by the act of 24th April, 1820.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed) J. M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

The REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ——.

P. S. to the Receiver.—You are requested hereafter to render your quarterly accounts in a book form, of the foolscap size, the sheets of paper to be securely stitched together; and all receipts for incidental expenses, and for register's salary and commission, to be written on one or more of the last pages of the account.

E.

Circular to registers and receivers of the United States land offices, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 22, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: Annexed is a copy of an act of Congress, approved 19th June, 1834, entitled, "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and thirty;" together with a copy of the former act.

1st. The recent act provides "that every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession and cultivated any part thereof in the year 1833, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May 29th, 1830; and the said act is hereby revived, and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer;" to wit, to the 19th June, 1836.

2d. The fact of cultivation in eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and that of possession of the land applied for on the nineteenth June, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, must be established by the affidavit of the claimant, supported by such corroborative testimony of disinterested witnesses, as shall be satisfactory to you both. The evidence must be taken by a justice of the peace, in the presence of the register and receiver, wherever convenient, and be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by them, as may be best calculated to elicit the truth; and when not convenient for the witnesses to attend before the register and receiver, the evidence is to be taken by a justice of the peace, and to be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by him, as shall be best calculated to elicit the truth.

The credibility of the testimony is to be certified by the justice of the peace, and by such other persons of the neighborhood as can certify the same.

3d. Possession on the 19th June, 1834, and cultivation in 1833, are both essentially necessary to the conferring of the pre-emption privilege, the absence of either of which requisites will vitiate the claim. The building of a mill is a "possession," but without actual cultivation it does not confer the privilege under the law. The extent and nature of the cultivation are points concerning which the law is silent. The cultivation of a crop of grain, esculent roots, or other vegetables, of ordinary culture in the peculiar section of the country, is to be regarded as sufficient as respects the requisite of "cultivation," together with the ordinary fence or other suitable enclosure; or, when no crop or product has been taken from the land, and it shall appear to your satisfaction that the claimant has, in good faith, made the usual preparations for a crop; as, when he shall have cleared ground and enclosed the field, and ploughed the soil preparatory to the ensuing seed-time, and with intent to sow or plant, such shall be regarded and taken as a sufficient cultivation to entitle him to the benefit of the act.

The erection of a dwelling-house for the purposes of habitation, will be regarded as a requisite of "possession."

4th. The provisions of the act are not available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required, before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor can the right of pre-emption extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which by law may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever.

5th. Should any tract of land, subject to private entry at the date of the act, be entered at ordinary private sale, and a pre-emption claim be duly established thereto within the term of two years from the date of the act, the former entry is null and void. And the register and receiver are hereby required to make monthly reports of all such interfering sales, designating the tract, date of sale, name of purchaser, quantity of acres, and purchase money; also, name of pre-emptor, and date when satisfactory proof of pre-emption was admitted. On such reports orders for repayment will be issued.

6th. Where a person inhabits one quarter section, and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other, at his discretion, provided such occupant shall designate within six months from the passage of this act, (viz: from 19th June, 1834,) the quarter section of which he claims the pre-emption, and file in the office of the register a relinquishment of the right of entry to the other; but in all cases where those six months will expire before the date of the public sale of the township including such claim, the designation and relinquishment must be made prior to the day of such sale.

7th. Where an improvement is situate in different quarter sections, the claimant is entitled to enter such two adjacent legal subdivisions, viz: the east and west half quarters as will include his improvement.

8th. Where an improvement is situate on a fraction containing less than the quantity of a quarter section, such fraction must be taken in lieu of an entire quarter section. Should the fraction contain more than the quantity of a quarter section, the claimant will be permitted to take according to the legal subdivisions of such fraction, so as to include his improvements, and obtain the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, as nearly as practicable, without any further subdivision.

9th. In cases where two or more persons are settled on the same quarter section, the two first actual settlers who cultivated in 1833, and had possession on 19th June, 1834, are entitled to the right of pre-emption. If an equal division of such quarter by a north and south or east and west line will not secure to each party his improvements, they must become joint purchasers and patentees of the entire quarter section; if otherwise, it will be divided so as to secure to the parties respectively their improvements; in either case, the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere, in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

10th. You are requested to make monthly reports of those cases where two persons obtain a pre-emption on the same quarter section.

11th. Transfers of pre-emption rights, prior to the issuing of patents, will not be recognized.

12th. The act of 29th May, 1830, applied only to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished at that date; hence the right of pre-emption to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished subsequent to that date can be claimed only in virtue of cultivation in 1833, and possession on 19th June, 1834.

13th. In making your usual returns to this office, you will in all cases of purchases under this act designate them, by marking on the returns the certificate of purchase and receipt thus: "Pre-emption act of 1834." Separate returns and a distinct series of numbers for pre-emption "receipts" and "certificates" are not admissible.

14th. Inasmuch as the ordinary private entry of lands, subject thereto at the date of the act, must be permitted to proceed at the hazard of interfering with the pre-emption claims which may be established within the two years allowed by the act, it is indispensably necessary, by way of precaution, to require each applicant at private sale to file with his written "application," an affidavit to the following effect, to wit:

"I do solemnly swear, (or affirm,) that since the 1st day of January, 1834, viz: on or about the —— day ——, I personally inspected the tract of land designated in the next application, viz: the —— quarter of section No. ——, in township No. ——, of range No. ——, in the district of lands subject to sale at ——, and that there was not, at that time, any person residing thereon, or cultivating the same; and I do not believe that any pre-emption right exists thereto, either under the act of 29th May, 1830, or that of 19th June, 1834."

In case the party applying to purchase did not personally inspect the tract, he may be permitted to file, in the above form, the oath or affirmation of any person who alleges to have made such personal inspection; and in all cases you must be satisfied of the credibility of such testimony.

15th. Where the occupant alleges that he is unable or unwilling to pay for a full quarter section, he may be permitted to enter the half quarter which shall include his improvements; to be either the east or west half of such quarter; the divisional line running north and south, in the mode prescribed by the act of 24th April, 1820; but in such case he will be required to file a relinquishment of his further right of pre-emption of the quantity authorized by the act.

16th. You are each entitled by law to receive from the party interested a fee of fifty cents on each case of pre-emption admitted under the act.

17th. The evidence adduced in support of pre-emption rights admitted under this act, and also the oaths required of purchasers at ordinary private sale, are to be carefully enclosed in the appropriate certificates of purchase, and transmitted therewith to this office, accompanied by your joint certificate as to the credibility of the witnesses.

The evidences adduced in support of cases not admitted are to be carefully filed in the register's office, with suitable endorsements thereon.

18th. By the 3d section of the act of 19th June, 1834, persons residing on the public lands and cultivating the same prior to the year 1829, but who were deprived of the advantage of the act of 29th May, 1830, by reason of the construction given to the same by the Secretary of the Treasury, are authorized to enter, at the minimum price, one quarter section of the public lands within said land district. This provision can be available only to those whose right to a pre-emption in virtue of cultivation and possession prior to 1829 shall be established by satisfactory proof; and who, from any cause originating in the restrictions and limitations imposed by the Secretary of the Treasury, which have not had a remedy by the act of 14th July, 1832, or that of 2d March, 1833, have been deprived of the advantages of the act of 1830. When such cases shall be presented you will specially report them, with all the testimony, for the decision of the department.

19th. Where floating rights to eighty acres are granted under this act, they must be located and paid for at the time of entry of the tracts on which such floating rights accrue.

In the execution of the act, the utmost vigilance and diligence on your part are requisite to detect fraud, and determine the character and credibility of the testimony. A faithful and impartial discharge of your duty are alike essential to protect the government from imposition, and the honest claimant in his right.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

P. S.—It will be proper to give publicity to the law and to these instructions, by distributing copies of this circular throughout your land district; for which purpose a number of copies will be furnished. It is also desirable that the newspapers published in your district should gratuitously publish the same for the information of the community.

The forms of journal and ledger now used by the register and receiver will be discontinued from and after the 1st of October next. A form of ledger to be substituted by the receiver will be furnished as soon as practicable.

AN ACT to revive the act entitled "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved May twenty-nine one thousand eight hundred and thirty.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved May twenty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and thirty; and the said act is hereby revived, and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That where a person inhabits one quarter section and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other at his discretion: Provided, such occupant shall designate, within six months from the passage of this act, the quarter section of which he claims the pre-emption under the same.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all persons residing on the public lands and cultivating the same prior to the year eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, and who were deprived of the advantages of the law passed on the twenty-ninth May, eighteen hundred and thirty, by the constructions placed on said law by the Secretary of the Treasury, be, and they are hereby, authorized to enter, at the minimum price of the government, one quarter section of the public lands within said land district.

Approved June 19th, 1834.

ANDREW JACKSON.

NOTE.—The act approved 29th May, 1830, was appended to this circular; for which see document B herewith.

F.

To registers and receivers of United States land offices.—Supplemental instructions under the pre-emption law of 19th June, 1834. By order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 23, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of representations made to the department respecting the operation of the third clause of the instructions contained in the circular letter of the 22d July last, I have to inform you that the Secretary of the Treasury, unwilling to withhold the advantages of the late pre-emption law from applicants who may have meritorious and substantial claims to its benefits, and who, by reason of circumstances peculiar in their character, have no actual residence on the land claimed, has concluded so to modify the instruction complained of as to admit as exceptions from the general principles, such cases of the character referred to as, in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion on your part, shall appear from facts, satisfactorily proved, to come within the meaning and intent of the act. The following are cited as examples of the cases expressly referred to:

1st. Where the cultivation may have been made by an unmarried person, without family, boarding and lodging with another family resident on a tract adjoining, or in the immediate vicinity of his improvements; or by a married person living in a similar manner; where there has been actual and bona fide intention to reside on the land cultivated, but where the preparation was not complete, or the intention was frustrated by unavoidable accident; where the tract cultivated may have been a necessary and integral portion of a farm or plantation of an individual residing on an adjoining tract, and where, without the aid of the proceeds of such additional cultivation, he could not have maintained himself and family, and continued to reside where he did; or where, by reason of the unhealthy location of the lands cultivated, the individual may have fixed his residence on a neighboring tract. In all these cases, and others analogous in their circumstances and spirit, where the facts are distinctly proved, and where, in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion, you are satisfied that they come within the meaning and intent of the law, the third clause of the circular letter referred to, which regards the erection of a dwelling-house for the purposes of habitation as a requisite of "possession," is modified so as to admit the right of entry.

2d. No pre-emption right to section No. 16, reserved for schools, can be sustained under existing laws, nor will the act of 19th June, 1834, admit of a floating right of pre-emption elsewhere, in virtue of a settlement and improvement in the sixteenth section. Individual claimants considering themselves aggrieved under such circumstances, will have to prefer their claims to Congress.

3d. Where an individual establishes a right of pre-emption to a fractional section containing less than one hundred and sixty acres, or to a half quarter section, the other half of which was sold previous to the date of the act, or to a residuary quarter quarter of a section, (which residuary quarter quarter must have been made such by locations made under the act of 5th April 1832, inasmuch as quarter quarters of sections cannot originally be selected, as such, under the pre-emption law,) in all such cases the fraction, the half quarter, or the quarter quarter is to be regarded as a separate and distinct tract, beyond the quantity of which the party can claim no right to locate elsewhere, or on adjoining lands; but in cases where two or more individuals are settled on any one such tract, the two first actual settlers are entitled to enter in their joint names, and each of these two is entitled to receive a floating right to eighty acres elsewhere.

4th. Where A settled on and cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and prior to the 19th of June, 1834, sold his right to B, who continued to improve and occupy the same on that day, B is regarded as entitled to the benefits of the act.

5th. Where A cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and had placed B thereon, as a tenant in possession, who continued to improve and cultivate the same on the 19th June, 1834, A is regarded as entitled to the right of pre-emption, on due proof of cultivation and occupancy as required by the act. But in case A, prior to the year 1833, had placed a tenant on a tract of public land, who cultivated and possessed agreeably to the tenor of the act, the right of pre-emption is to accrue to the tenant.

6th. The testimony heretofore required to be taken before a justice of the peace may also be taken before a notary public, or any other officer duly qualified to administer oaths.

7th. Where there were more than two actual settlers on a tract, floating rights accrue to the two first actual settlers, and to none of the others.

8th. Quarter quarters of sections are created only by the operation of the act of 5th April, 1832, entitled "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands."

The right to enter and make payment for quarter quarters of sections (lots of forty acres) under the act of 19th June, 1384, can be claimed only in cases where residuary quarter quarters are found to exist in a section, they having been created separate and distinct legal subdivisions by the peculiar operation of the act of 1832.

☞ While on this subject I have to mention that, on inspecting the names of purchasers, it is apprehended that due caution is not observed by registers in operating under the act of 1832, which provides that no one individual can enter more than eighty acres in tracts of forty acres. Increased vigilance is strictly enjoined in this respect, and in order to insure a strict compliance with the law, the register is hereby required to keep an alphabetical list of the names of purchasers of quarter quarters of sections, which list must always be referred to, as a check, prior to the admission of entries of land in that mode under the act aforesaid.

9th. In cases where individuals have settled on public lands since the passage of the act of 19th June, 1834, the form of affidavit prescribed in the 14th clause of the circular letter of 22d July last may be varied to suit the peculiar circumstances of such case, by striking out the words "and that there was not, at that time, any person residing thereon, or cultivating the same," and inserting, in lieu thereof, all the facts in the case as they are found to exist.

10th. Military land scrip cannot, under existing laws, be located on any public lands settled or occupied "without the written consent of such settlers or occupants" as may be actually residing "on said lands at the time the same shall be entered or applied for." Such settlement or occupancy, therefore, although it may or may not have reference to any existing pre-emption privilege, is a bar to the location of the scrip, without the written consent of the settler or occupant. The form of the affidavit prescribed for such cases by the circular letter of 2d October, 1833, will substantially remain unaltered; but in cases where individuals are desirous of locating scrip, it is not deemed necessary to require from them two separate affidavits; one under the circular of the 2d October, 1833, and another under the 14th clause of the circular of 22d July last; but the substance of both those forms may be incorporated into one affidavit.

11th. Payment is to be required in all cases arising under the late pre-emption law at the time the right of entry is admitted. In cases arising under the third section, or in such as may be of doubtful character, and which you may deem it necessary to refer for the decision of the department, payment will not be required until a favorable decision is communicated; meanwhile the land claimed is to be withheld from sale.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD,
Commissioner of the General Land Office.

P. S.—It has been the usual practice of this office to acknowledge the receipt of the monthly and quarterly returns. Henceforward that practice, which consumes time and creates unnecessary labor, will be discontinued. If returns are not promptly rendered, the reason of the delay will be promptly demanded.

The register is requested to report to the surveyor general lists of such township plats as require renewal in consequence of mutilation or defacement, and also to forward to this office a copy of such report.

The "quarterly account book" described in the circular letter of 28th August last, for the use of receivers, and also a supply of printed blanks for making quarterly returns to this office, (in lieu of the form of quarterly accounts heretofore in use,) have both been forwarded by mail some weeks since.

G.

Circular to the registers and receivers of the United States land offices.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 8, 1832.

GENTLEMEN: The following is a copy of the act of Congress, approved on the 5th of April, 1832, entitled "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the first day of May next, all the public lands of the United States, when offered at private sale, may be purchased, at the option of the purchaser, either in entire sections, half sections, quarter sections, half quarter sections, or quarter quarter sections; and, in every case of a division of a half quarter section, the line for the division thereof shall run east and west; and the corners and contents of quarter quarter sections which may thereafter be sold shall be ascertained, as nearly as may be, in the manner and on the principles directed and prescribed by the second section of an act entitled "An act concerning the mode of surveying the public lands of the United States," passed on the 11th day of February, 1805; and fractional sections, containing fewer or more than one hundred and sixty acres shall in like manner, as nearly as may be practicable, be subdivided into quarter quarter sections, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, that this act shall not be construed to alter any special provision made by law for the sale of land in town lots: And provided, also, that no person shall be permitted to enter more than one half quarter section of land under this act, in quarter quarter sections, in his own name, or in the name of any other person, and in no case unless he intends it for cultivation, or for the use of his improvement; and the person making application to make an entry under this act shall file his or her affidavit under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, that he or she makes the entry in his or her own name, for his or her own benefit, and not in trust for another: Provided further, that all actual settlers, being housekeepers, upon the public lands shall have the right of pre-emption to enter within six months after the passage of this act, not exceeding the quantity of one half quarter section, under the provisions of this act, to include his or their improvements, under such regulations as have been, or may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and in cases where two persons shall live upon the same quarter section, subject to be entered under the provisions of this act, each shall have the right to enter that quarter quarter section which includes his improvements.

Under the provisions of this act, no person is permitted to enter more than one half quarter section in quarter quarter sections in his own name, or in the name of any other person; and in no case, unless he intends it for cultivation, or for the use of his improvement.

The following is the form of the affidavit (prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, in pursuance of the requirements of the act) which is to be attached to and filed with the application for the entry of the one or two quarter quarter sections, as may be desired, under the privileges conferred by the act.

I (or we) do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the land above described is intended to be entered for my (or our) personal benefit, and not in trust for another; and that the same is intended for the purposes of cultivation, or (as the case may be) for the use of my (or our) improvement, situate on the , of section No. , township No. , range No. .

This affidavit is to be made before a justice of the peace, or other officer legally authorized to administer oaths.

Pre-emption privilege in favor of housekeepers on the public lands.

The act further provides that "all actual settlers, being housekeepers, upon the public lands, shall have the right of pre-emption to enter within six months after the passage of this act, not exceeding the quantity of one half quarter section, under the provisions of this act, to include his or their improvements, under such regulations as have been or may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and in cases where two persons shall live upon the same quarter section, subject to be entered under the provisions of this act, each shall have the right to enter that quarter quarter section which includes his improvement."

The proof to be adduced to you that the party applying for the benefit of the act is rightfully entitled thereto, is his or her own affidavit before a magistrate, or other officer duly authorized by law to administer oaths, setting forth the fact that he or she is an actual settler and housekeeper on public lands, (not on lands already purchased from the government,) and that the half quarter section applied for includes his or her improvement, which affidavit is to be sustained by the affidavits of one or more disinterested persons, substantiating the fact to your entire satisfaction.

Form of the affidavit.

I do solemnly swear that I am an actual settler and a housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz: the quarter of section No. , in township No. , of range No. , and hereby apply to enter the quarter of the said section, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved on the 5th of April, 1832, entitled "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands," which will include my improvement.

The operation of this pre-emption privilege in favor of housekeepers will exist until the fifth day of October next, and I have it in charge from the Secretary of the Treasury to inform you that this privilege must not have the effect to stay or interfere with either public sales or private entries of lands during the same period.

Where the right of pre-emption exists to lands not at this date subject to private entry, and that will be offered at public sale prior to the 5th October next, the evidence of claim under the act must be filed with you, and the purchase money paid prior to the day of the public sale, otherwise the pre-emption will not be recognized.

In order to prevent collision between the ordinary private entries and the pre-emption rights intended to be secured to housekeepers by the act, the Secretary of the Treasury directs that in all cases of applications to make private entries within the term of six months, ending on fifth October next, the applicant (not being the pre-emptor) be required to make affidavit in the following mode and form, viz:

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the tract of land intended to be applied for, viz: the ——— quarter of section No. ———, township No. ———, range No. ———, in the district of lands subject to sale ———, is not, to the best of my knowledge and belief, subject to any claim by pre-emption right under the provisions of the act of Congress passed on the 5th April, 1832, entitled "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands."

"In cases where two persons shall live on the same quarter section, subject to be entered under the provisions of this act, each shall have the right to enter that quarter quarter section which includes his improvements;" and should any cases exist where the improvements of both parties fall within the same quarter quarter section, they must apply jointly for the purchase of the land which they are respectively entitled to enter under the law. The receiver's receipt and register's certificate will issue in their joint names, and they will become co-patentees, and thereby be enabled to make such division of the tract as may be mutually satisfactory to them.

Of the subdivisions into quarter quarter sections.

The act of the 24th April, 1820, entitled "An act making further provision for the sale of the public lands," authorizes the subdivision of quarter sections into half quarter sections, by a line supposed to be run north and south, from points to be ascertained on the principles laid down by the act of 11th February, 1805, entitled "An act concerning the mode of surveying the public lands of the United States." Such points are intermediate between the established corners on the lines running east and west.

Under the provisions of the act of 5th April, 1832, the corners and contents of quarter quarter sections must be ascertained on the principles of the act of 11th February, 1805, by lines running east and west. Such east and west lines must therefore be supposed to run through the section from intermediate points between the established corners on the sectional lines which form the eastern and western boundaries of the section, so as to divide each half quarter section into two equal parts. Therefore the contents of a quarter quarter section are to be assumed as the one-half of the contents of a half quarter section.

In cases where the sectional lines diverge from the cardinal points, the divisional line to constitute the quarter quarter sections will be considered as running parallel to the line forming the northern or southern boundary of the section: for instance, the line constituting quarter quarter sections in the two southern quarter sections is to be considered as running parallel to the southern boundary of the section; and the line constituting quarter quarter sections in the two northern quarter sections is to be considered as running parallel to the northern boundary of the section; starting in each case from points intermediate between the established corners in the eastern boundary of the section, and running west to join the corresponding intermediate points between the established corners in the line forming the western boundary of the section.

The act of 5th April, 1832, prescribes that "fractional sections containing fewer or more than one hundred and sixty acres shall, in like manner, as nearly as may be practicable, be subdivided into quarter quarter sections, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury." The Secretary directs that the subdivision of fractional sections shall be made by the surveyors general into lots containing the quantity of a quarter quarter section, as nearly as practicable; by which subdivisions you will be governed.

Of the practical operations on the books and maps.

The tract books, as now opened, admit of the entry of sections by half quarters. Where it is practicable to interline the entries of the quarter quarter sections in a suitable manner, (which can be the case only where the handwriting is small and neat,) an interlineation will answer the purpose. In those cases where the entry in the tract book has been for a quarter or half section, such of the spaces opened for the entry of the same quantity in eighths as remain vacant may be occupied by the entry of the quarter quarter sections.

Where it is from any cause inexpedient to interline the entries of quarter quarter sections in the regular tract book, they will have to be entered into a "miscellaneous tract book" as they occur in the order of their dates: and a reference must be made in the place where such entry ought to appear in the regular tract book to the number of the receiver's receipt issued on payment for the quarter quarter section, which proceeding will always furnish the means of tracing up the entry.

The map is to be marked in such case with the number of the receiver's receipt, corresponding in number with the register's certificate of purchase for the same tract.

The quarter quarter sections are to be described as the northeast, northwest, southeast, and southwest quarters of the northeast, northwest, southeast, or southwest quarters, as the case may require; and the subdivision of fractional sections into quarter quarter sections, as nearly as practicable, are to be designated in the mode to be indicated by the surveyor general in the plat of subdivision which he is required to furnish you.

The register is requested to furnish the surveyor general, as soon as practicable, with a schedule of the fractional sections and parts of fractional sections remaining unsold, and which are liable to be subdivided under the provisions of the act of 5th April, 1832.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Circular to registers and receivers of the United States land offices.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 17, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: Subjoined is the copy of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d March last, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' approved the 5th April, 1832."

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in all cases in which persons were settlers or occupants of the public lands, prior to the 1st day of May, 1832, and were authorized to enter under the provisions of the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' approved April 5th, 1832, and were prevented from making their entries in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned, or where the land was not attached to any land district, or where the same has been reserved from sale in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory, the said occupants shall be permitted to enter the said lands on the same conditions, in every respect, as were prescribed in said act, within one year after the surveys are made, or the land attached to a land district, or the boundary line established; and if the land shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of one year, as aforesaid, then the said settlers or occupants shall be permitted to enter before the sale thereof."

The provisions of the above act give the right of pre-emption to two quarter quarter sections, to such persons as were entitled to the benefits of a pre-emption entry of two quarter quarter sections of land, under the act of the 5th April, 1832, but who were prevented from making an entry from the operation of the causes stated, viz:

1st. Where the public surveys were not made and returned prior to the 5th October, 1332; or

2d. Where the land was not attached to any land district; or

3d. Where the land has been reserved from sale, in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory.

The proof to be adduced to you, that the party applying for the benefit of the act is rightfully entitled thereto, is his or her affidavit, before a magistrate or other officer duly authorized by law to administer oaths, setting forth the fact that he or she is an actual settler and housekeeper on public lands, (not on lands already purchased from the government,) and that the half quarter section applied for includes his or her improvement; which affidavit is to be sustained by the affidavit of one or mere disinterested persons substantiating the facts to your entire satisfaction.

Form of the affidavit.

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I am an actual settler and housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz: the quarter of section No. , in township No , of range No. , and hereby apply to enter the quarter of said section, under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,'" which will include my improvement. And I do further swear (or affirm) that I have not entered under this act, or under the act of the 5th April, 1832, to which it is supplemental, at this or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter sections, in my own name, or in the name of any other person.

In order the further to guard against the violation of the act of the 5th April, 1332, by persons entering more than two quarter quarter sections, the Secretary of the Treasury has directed that the following affidavit be made before a justice of the peace, or any other officer legally authorized to administer oaths, prior to all entries to be made under that act.

Form of affidavit.

I (or we) do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the land above described, is intended to be entered for my (or our) personal benefit, and not in trust for another; and that the same is intended for the purposes of cultivation (or as the case may be) for the use of my (or our) improvement, situated on the of section No. , of township No. , of range No. , and that I (or we) have not entered under the act of 5th April, 1832, or under the act of the 2d March, 1833, at this or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter sections, in my (or our) name, or in the name of any other person.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant, ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Notice to the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and navy, and of the Continental army of the revolutionary war.

AN ACT for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and navy, and of the Continental army during the revolutionary war.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the officers and soldiers, sailors and marines, who were in the service of Virginia, on her own State establishment during the revolutionary war, and who were entitled to military land bounties by the laws and resolutions of that State, their heirs and assigns, shall be and they are hereby authorized to surrender to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, such of their warrants for said land bounties as shall remain unsatisfied, in whole or in part, and to receive certificates or scrip for the same, at any time before the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five; which certificates or scrip shall be issued by the said Secretary, and signed by him, and countersigned by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in the following manner, that is to say: There shall be a separate certificate or scrip for such sum as shall, at the time of issuing the same, be equal to the then minimum price of each quantity of eighty acres of land due by such warrant, and remaining unsatisfied at the time of such surrender; and a like certificate or scrip for such sum as at the time shall be equal to the minimum price of the quantity that shall so remain unsatisfied, of any such warrant after such subdivision of the amount into quantities of eighty acres. And where any such warrant shall have been lost or mislaid by time and accident, it shall and may be lawful for the party desiring to surrender the same, to surrender an official copy thereof, certified under the seal of the land office of Virginia, with the affidavit of the party endorsed upon or accompanying the same, stating that such warrant has been lost or mislaid, and that the original hath not been sold or transferred, to the knowledge or belief of the party so surrendering, or his or her guardian.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to request the executive of Virginia to furnish him with a statement of all such warrants, within the purview of this act, as have already issued, showing the number and date of each warrant, and the quantity of acres granted by each, and also a monthly statement of the same description, showing the number, date and quantity of such warrants as shall hereafter be granted. And no warrant shall be taken to be within the provisions of this act which shall hereafter be granted, unless the executive of Virginia shall cause a certificate to be endorsed thereon, signed by some proper officer, stating that the party to whom such warrant shall be so granted, his, her, or their ancestor or devisor was entitled thereto by some law or resolution of the said State, in force at the time of the deed of cession by the State of Virginia to the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That before the Secretary of the Treasury shall issue the scrip required by the provisions of this bill, the applicants shall produce to him the certificate of the register of the land office in Kentucky, and the certificate of the surveyor of the military lands of the Virginia line, that the warrant (when the original is presented; or the copy, when the original has been lost or destroyed,) has not been located, surveyed or patented in Kentucky, attested by the seal of his office.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the certificates or scrip to be issued by virtue of this act shall be receivable in payment for any lands hereafter to be purchased at private sale, after the same shall have been offered at public sale, and shall remain unsold at any of the land offices of the United States, established or to be established in the States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. And all such certificates or scrip as shall be issued by virtue of this act shall be assignable, by endorsements thereon, attested by two witnesses: Provided, that all certificates or scrip to be issued in virtue of any warrant hereafter to be granted, shall be issued to the party originally entitled thereto, or his heir or heirs, devisee or devisees, as the case may be.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act shall be deemed and taken to extend to all such officers, soldiers, sailors, marines, chaplains, musicians, surgeons and surgeons' mates, in the land or sea service of the State of Virginia during the revolutionary war, and generally to every person to whom the State has engaged to pay a land bounty for services in that war, of any description, by any law or resolution passed before, and in force at the date of the said deed of cession; except only such persons as are mentioned in, and provided for, by the reservation contained in the said deed of cession in favor of the officers and soldiers of the said State on Continental establishment: Provided, that no scrip issued under the provisions of this act shall entitle the holder to enter or purchase any settled or occupied lands, without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said lands at the time the same shall be entered or applied for: And provided, also, that the amount of land thus located shall not exceed two hundred and sixty thousand acres.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the first and fourth sections of this act shall extend to and embrace owners of military land warrants issued by the United States in satisfaction of claims for bounty land for services during the revolutionary war; and that the laws heretofore enacted, providing for the issuing said warrants, are hereby revived and continued in force for two years.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, that the provisions of this act shall also be deemed and taken to extend to all the unsatisfied warrants of the Virginia army on Continental establishment: Provided, that the quantity thereof shall not exceed fifty thousand acres, in addition to the two hundred and sixty thousand acres heretofore authorized to be located by their State line.

Circular to land officers in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, November 16, 1830.

GENTLEMEN: Under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 30th day of May last, entitled "An act for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and navy and of the Continental army during the revolutionary war," there will be issued from this department, certificates or scrip for such sum ($100) as is equal to the minimum price of the public lands for each quantity of eighty acres remaining unsatisfied of each land warrant, and a certificate for such fractional quantity as may remain after the subdivision of each warrant into portions of eighty acres.

The 4th section of the act referred to provides that the certificates of scrip to be issued under said act "shall be receivable in payment of any lands hereafter to be purchased at private sale, after the same shall have been offered at public sale, and shall remain unsold at any of the land offices of the United States, established or to be established in the States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois; and all such certificates or scrip as shall be issued by virtue of this act shall be assignable by endorsement thereon, attested by two witnesses."

The 5th section of the act provides, in the following words, "that no scrip issued under the provisions of this act shall entitle the holder to enter or purchase any settled or occupied lands without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said lands at the time the same shall be entered or applied for."

In order to govern your conduct in the receiving of this scrip, I have to call your attention to the following general rules:

First—As to location.

The law forbids the application of scrip to the entering of lands occupied by persons actually residing thereon, without the written consent of such settler or occupant.

As you can have no means of ascertaining whether the lands are occupied or not, it becomes indispensably necessary to require from the party intending to locate an affidavit as to the occupancy or vacancy of the land required to be entered.

If the party intending to appropriate land by the application of this scrip should produce the "written consent" of the individual purporting to be the occupant thereof, he must also file his own affidavit, setting forth that the person so purporting to be the occupant is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the bona fide and sole occupant of the tract of land so intended to be entered.

If, on the contrary, the party intending to appropriate land by the application of this scrip should assert that there is no occupant or person residing thereon, he must be required to file an affidavit, substantially in the form following, viz:

I, , being desirous of locating the half of quarter of section No. , in township No. , in range No. , in the district of lands subject to sale at , by applying in payment thereof a certain certificate (or certificates) of military land scrip, do hereby solemnly swear (or affirm) that, from my own knowledge of the fact, after actual inspection of the said tract of land, on or about the day of , there was not, at that time, any person or persons residing thereon; and that I do verily believe there is no person residing thereon at this present time, or having claim of pre-emption thereto, under the act of 29th May, 1830, entitled "An act granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands, in virtue of having cultivated the soil in 1829, and having had possession thereof on the 29th of May, 1830."

Second—As to the surrendering of the scrip.

The scrip is assignable by endorsement thereon, attested by two witnesses.

When the parties in whose favor the scrip is issued shall employ an agent to locate the same, they can accomplish that object by power of attorney, authorizing such agent to make the location and to endorse the scrip.

The power of attorney is to be duly executed before a notary public, or justice of the peace, whose authority as such is to be certified by the clerk of the proper court, under his official seal.

In case the parties in whose favor the scrip is issued wish to employ an agent to make the location without the formality of a letter of attorney, they may adopt the simple method of assigning the scrip to the agent, in the words following, or equivalent thereto, viz:

I (or we) do hereby assign all my (or our) right, title, and interest of, in, and to the within certificate, to .

(Signed) A. B.
Witnesses, C. D.
E. F.

Or, I (or we) do hereby assign all my (or our) right, title, and interest of, in, and to the within certificate, to , for the only purpose of relinquishing the same to the United States, in payment of such lands as he may enter in my (or our) name.

(Signed) A. B.

Witnesses, C. D.
E. F.

In all cases when scrip is surrendered at the land office, whether by the parties entitled thereto or by their agents, the following form of relinquishment, or one equivalent thereto, is to be endorsed on the certificate, viz.:

I (or we) do hereby relinquish to the United States the within certificate, in payment (or in part payment, as the case may be) of the half of the quarter of section No. , in township No. , of range No. , located in the name of , at the land office at , this day of , 183 .

(Signed) A. B.

Witnesses, C. D.
E. F.

Where there are several parties named in a certificate, and the endorsement of the whole of them cannot be made at one and the same time in the presence of the same two witnesses, the witnesses are to indicate the names of the parties signing at the time of the attestation, thus:

Witnesses, A. B.
C. D.,

As to the signatures of E. F., J. K., L. M, or

As to the signature of each of the parties named in the within certificate, in cases where all the parties are present. These remarks should be in the handwriting of one of the witnesses.

The powers of attorney are to be duly endorsed, numbered, and filed away in the receiver's office, and he is to make an endorsement on each certificate or scrip located under power of attorney, as follows:

A power of attorney in this case, duly executed as required, has been filed in this office, and numbered.

(Signed) A. B., Receiver

Third—As to the forms of office in operating on the scrip.

The receipts given by the receiver are to indicate, by endorsements thereon, the fact of the payment being made, either wholly or in part, by military land scrip. In like manner, when occasion requires it, the receipts are to indicate the payment made in forfeited land stock, issued under the acts of 1828 and 1830. The cash and stock accounts of each of your offices will exhibit, in one column of stock, the amount of military land scrip and forfeited land stock embraced by each payment, without discrimination of the different denominations. The receiver is, however, required to keep a register of stock and scrip, which will make the necessary discrimination between the different classes in separate columns.

A transcript from this register is to be transmitted to this office by the receiver at the end of every month, and will form a component part of his regular monthly returns.

Blanks for these monthly returns will be speedily forwarded, and a portion of them will be bound into a book, to form the register alluded to.

The quarterly cash and stock accounts of the receiver, and the regular monthly returns of sales rendered by both your offices, are to indicate at the footing thereof the amount of military land scrip, and also the amount of the forfeited land stock of the acts of 1828 and 1830, respectively, received during each month and quarter.

The receiver's monthly account current, rendered to the Secretary of the Treasury and to this office, will also indicate the respective aggregate amount of scrip and stocks received during the month.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

AN ACT to extend the time of issuing military land warrants to officers and soldiers of the revolutionary army.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the time allowed for issuing military land warrants to the officers and soldiers of the revolutionary army shall be extended to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and thirty-five.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the further quantity of three hundred thousand acres of land be, and the same is hereby, appropriated in addition to the quantity heretofore appropriated by the act entitled "An act for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and navy, and of the Continental army during the revolutionary war," approved the thirtieth of May, eighteen hundred and thirty; which said appropriation shall be applied in the manner provided by the said act, to the unsatisfied warrants which have been or may be issued as therein directed, to the officers, and soldiers, and others, as described in the first, fifth, and seventh sections of said act.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the last paragraph of the first section of the said act, which authorizes the issuing of warrants upon an affidavit that the original was lost, and upon the production of an official copy thereof, shall be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

Approved July 13, 1832.

AN ACT granting an additional quantity of land for the location of revolutionary bounty land warrants.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the further quantity of two hundred thousand acres of land be, and the same is hereby, appropriated in addition to the quantity heretofore appropriated by the act entitled "An act for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and navy, and of the Continental army, during the revolutionary war," approved the thirtieth May, one thousand eight hundred and thirty; and the act entitled "An act to extend the time of issuing military land warrants to officers and soldiers of the revolutionary war," approved the thirteenth July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty two; which said appropriation shall be applied in the manner provided by the said acts to the unsatisfied warrants, whether original or duplicate, which have been or may be issued, as therein directed, to the officers, and soldiers, and others, as described in said acts: Provided, that the said certificates of scrip shall be receivable in payment of any of the public lands liable to sale at private entry.

Circular to registers and receivers of United States land offices.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 2, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: Under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d March, 1833, entitled "An act granting an additional quantity of land for the location of revolutionary bounty land warrants," there will be issued from the Treasury Department certificates or scrip for such sum ($100) as is equal to the minimum price of the public lands, for each quantity of eighty acres remaining unsatisfied of each land warrant granted by the State of Virginia, for military services rendered in her State and Continental lines and navy; and also a certificate for such fractional quantity as may remain after the subdivision of each warrant into portions of eighty acres.

The following are the words of the law, viz:

SECTION 1. "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the further quantity of two hundred thousand acres of land be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, in addition to the quantity heretofore appropriated by the act entitled 'An act for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and navy, and of the Continental army, during the revolutionary war,' approved the thirtieth May, one thousand eight hundred and thirty; and the act entitled 'An act to extend the time of issuing military land warrants to officers and soldiers of the revolutionary war,' approved the thirteenth July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty two; which said appropriations shall be applied in the manner provided by the said acts to the unsatisfied warrants, whether original or duplicate, which have been or may be issued, as therein directed, to the officers and soldiers, and others, as described in said acts: Provided, that the said certificates of scrip shall be receivable in payment of any of the public lands liable to sale at private entry."

The act of 30th May, 1830, above referred to, (sec. 4th,) provides that the certificates or scrip to be issued under the said act "shall be receivable in payment of any lands hereafter to be purchased at private sale, after the same shall have been offered at public sale, and shall remain unsold at any of the land offices of the United States established or to be established in the States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois; and all such certificates or scrip as shall be issued by virtue of this act shall be assignable by endorsement thereon, attested by two witnesses."

The fifth section of the act of 30th May, 1830, provides in the following words: "That no scrip issued under the provisions of this act shall entitle the holder to enter or purchase any settled or occupied lands without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said lands at the time the same shall be entered or applied for."

The foregoing provisions of the act of 30th May, 1830, are all regarded as continued in force by the act of 2d of March, 1833, with the exception of the restriction as to the States wherein the scrip issued under the latter act is receivable, it being made available in payment for public lands subject to private entry at all the United States land offices in the several States and Territories.

First—As to location.

The law forbids the application of scrip to the entering of lands occupied by persons actually residing thereon without the written consent of such settler or occupant.

As you can have no means of ascertaining whether the lands are occupied or not, it becomes indispensably necessary to require, from the party intending to locate, an affidavit as to the occupancy or vacancy of the land required to be entered.

If the party intending to appropriate land, by the application of this scrip, should produce the "written consent" of the individual purporting to be the occupant thereof, he must also file his own affidavit, setting forth that the person so purporting to be the occupant is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the bona fide and sole occupant of the tract of land so intended to be entered.

If, on the contrary, the party intending to appropriate land by the application of this scrip should assert that there is no occupant or person residing thereon, he must be required to file an affidavit, substantially in the form following, viz:

I, , being desirous of locating the half of quarter of section No. , in township No. , of range No. , in the district of lands subject to sale at , by applying in payment thereof a certain certificate (or certificates) of military land scrip, do hereby solemnly swear (or affirm) that, from my own knowledge of the fact, after actual inspection of the said tract of land, on or about the day of , there was not, at that time, any person or persons residing thereon, and that I do verily believe there is no person residing thereon at the present time, or occuyping the same.

Second—As to the surrendering of the scrip.

The scrip is assignable by endorsement thereon, attested by two witnesses.

When the parties in whose favor the scrip is issued shall employ an agent to locate the same, they can accomplish that object by a power of attorney, authorizing such agent to make the locations and to endorse the scrip.

The power of attorney is to be duly executed before a notary public or justice of the peace, whose authority as such is to be certified by the clerk of the proper court, under his official seal.

In case the parties in whose favor the scrip is issued wish to employ an agent to make the location, without the formality of a letter of attorney, they may adopt the simple method of assigning the scrip to the agent in the words following, or equivalent thereto, viz:

I (or we) do hereby assign all my (or our) right, title, and interest of, in, and to the within certificate, to .

(Signed) A. B.

Witnesses, C. D.
E. F.

Or,

I (or we) do hereby assign all my (or our) right, title, and interest of, in, and to the within certificate, to , for the only purpose of relinquishing the same to the United States, in payment of such lands as he may enter in my (or our) name.

(Signed) A. B.

Witnesses, C. D.
E. F.

In all cases where scrip is surrendered at the land office, whether by the parties entitled thereto or their agents, the following form of relinquishment, or one equivalent thereto, is to be endorsed on the certificate, viz:

I (or we) do hereby relinquish to the United States the within certificate, in payment (or in part payment, as the case may be) of the half of the quarter of section No. , in township No. , of range No. , located in the name of at the land office at , this day of , 183 .

(Signed) A. B.

Witnesses, C. D.
E. F.

Where there are several parties named in a certificate, and the endorsement of the whole of them cannot be made at one and the same time in the presence of the same two witnesses, the witnesses are to indicate the names of the parties signing at the time of attestation, thus:

Witnesses, A. B.
C. D., or

As to the signatures of E. F., J. K., L. M., or as to the signature of each of the parties named in the within certificate, in cases where all of the parties are present. These remarks should be in the handwriting of one of the witnesses.

The powers of attorney are to be duly endorsed, numbered, and filed away in the receiver's office, and he is to make an endorsement on each certificate or scrip located under power of attorney, as follows:

A power of attorney in this case, duly executed as required, has been filed in this office, and numbered .

(Signed) A. B., Receiver.

Third—As to the forms of office in operating on the scrip.

The receipts given by the receiver are to indicate, by endorsements thereon, the fact of the payment being made, either wholly or in part, by military land scrip.

In like manner, when occasion requires it, the receipts are to indicate the payment made in forfeited land stock issued under the acts of 1828 and 1832.

The cash and stock accounts of each of your offices will exhibit, in one column of stock, the amount of military land scrip and forfeited land stock embraced by each payment, without discrimination of the different denominations. The receiver is, however, required to keep a register of stock and scrip, which will make the necessary discrimination between the different classes in separate columns.

A transcript from this register is to be transmitted to this office by the receiver at the end of every month, and will form a component part of his regular monthly returns. A quarterly transcript, of the same form, is also required to accompany the receiver's quarterly accounts.

Blanks for these monthly returns will be speedily forwarded, and you will cause a portion of them to be stitched together, to form the "register" alluded to.

The quarterly cash and stock account of the receiver, and the regular monthly return of sales rendered by both your offices, are to indicate at the footing thereof the amount of military land scrip, and also the amount of the forfeited land stock of the acts of 1828 and 1832, respectively, received during each month and quarter.

The receiver's monthly account current, rendered to the Secretary of the Treasury, and to this office, will also indicate the respective aggregate amounts of scrip and stock received during the month.

Prior to transmitting the scrip to this office, as vouchers, the receiver is requested to cancel the same by cutting across the signatures of the secretary and commissioner.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA, TO CHANGE THE SIXTEENTH SECTIONS, WHERE THEY ARE COVERED BY INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 28, 1835.

(Copy.)

JOINT MEMORIAL to the Congress of the United States in relation to the sixteenth sections, in that portion of Alabama commonly called the Creek territory.

The general assembly of the State of Alabama would respectfully represent to the Congress of the United States, that according to the act admitting the State of Alabama into the Union, it is provided, "That the section numbered sixteen in every township, and where each section has been sold, granted, or disposed of, other lands equivalent thereto, and most contiguous to the same, shall be granted to the inhabitants of each township for the use of schools." And, whereas, most of the sixteenth sections, and all the lands lying contiguous, have been taken by Indian reservations, in some of the counties the said sections in many instances being valuable, your memorialists therefore respectfully suggest, that the said sixteenth sections be re-valued, and that the several amounts be placed to the credit of the inhabitants of the same, or other lands of equal value be set apart for their use. Your memorialists respectfully submit the foregoing suggestions to the justice and liberality of the representatives of the United States, hoping that some means may be devised whereby the just claims of the inhabitants of the afore-mentioned counties may be placed upon the same footing with others of this State.

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Alabama, in general assembly convened, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their endeavors to procure the passage of a law embracing the objects of the foregoing memorial.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing memorial and resolutions to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR A ROAD FROM MAUMEE BAY TO THE ILLINOIS RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 28, 1835.

A MEMORIAL AND JOINT RESOLUTION of the general assembly of the State of Indiana, soliciting aid to improve the great northern chain of communication from the Maumee bay in Ohio, to the rapids of the Illinois river.

To the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

Whereas, in accordance with the prayer of a respectable number of the citizens of the State of Indiana, to grant them some legislative enactment to assist in the construction of a railroad from the Maumee bay on lake Erie, to the rapids of Illinois river: and influenced by proper considerations in relation to the general welfare, the social and commercial facilities required by our constituents in connection with our brethren of States contiguous, and the wants, wishes, and prosperity of a growing population; and whereas, this road, if improved, will be calculated to accommodate, not only the inhabitants for conveying their produce to market, but, also, the multitudes of emigrants from the eastern States, who are directing their course to that immense region of fertile and yet uninhabited country on the river Des Moines, west of the Mississippi. This contemplated route, when improved, must be the most important northern mail route from east to west in the United States. A great portion of the land through which this road must eventually pass, is the property of the United States, all of which would be valuable to the agriculturalist, and would sell for an advanced price if the government would afford any facilities of transportation which would make the appropriation rather a gain than a loss to the government.

Therefore, The general assembly of the State of Indiana solicits a donation of land of the United States, of five sections for every mile of said road from Maumee bay in Ohio, to the rapids of Illinois river, in the State of Illinois, to aid in the construction of said road.

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested to use their exertions to obtain the passage of a law in accordance with the foregoing memorial, and that they apply to the proper department for an officer of the United States corps of engineers to survey, locate, and make estimates of the cost of constructing a railroad on the aforesaid route.

Resolved, That his excellency, the governor, be requested to forward copies of the foregoing memorial and resolutions to each of our senators and representatives in Congress; also, copies of the same to each of the governors of the State of Ohio and Illinois, with a request that they lay them before their respective legislatures, and solicit their co-operation with Indiana on this subject.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 31, 1835.

Mr. LINCOLN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the petition of Benjamin Roach, reported:

The petitioner represents, that on the 30th day of June, 1831, he purchased, by private entry, at Mount Salus land office, in the State of Mississippi, several tracts of the public land, which are particularly described in the petition, and paid for the same one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre; that, being unacquainted with the situation of the country, and desirous of the lands for the contiguous settlement of several families, he examined, before making his purchase, the description of the lands in the field books of the surveyor returned to the register's office, and also made personal application to the surveyor for information of the quality and value of the lands; that the field notes gave a favorable representation of the lands for settlement, and the surveyor declared that they were "high, and entirely free from inundation." The petitioner further states that he has subsequently ascertained that the lands are entirely worthless, and of no value for settlement, being, in a great part, subject to inundation seven months in the year by the overflowing of the Yazoo and Mississippi rivers. He prays, therefore, that the entries made by him of said lands may be vacated, and that he may, in lieu thereof, be permitted to select other unappropriated lands in Mississippi, which have been, or may be hereafter offered for sale, or that Congress would grant him other relief in the premises.

The petition is accompanied by an affidavit of the petitioner, and of one Robert L. Mathews, who appears to have been interested in the purchase; which affidavit, in reference to the description of the lands in the field notes of the surveyor, only alleges that they "described and laid down said lands in such manner as to induce the deponents to believe the said lands were not subject to overflow," and is entirely silent in relation to any representation personally made to them by the surveyor of the quality of the lands. No transcript from the field notes is furnished by the petitioner, from which the committee might judge of the ground they gave for the belief "that the lands were not subject to overflow," nor is any evidence offered from the surveyor, or other disinterested person, of the circumstances of the purchase, or the true situation and value of the lands.

The committee, without deciding how far it might be proper, under the circumstances stated in the petition, if well made out, to interpose for the relief of the petitioner, thus opening a door to a successful application by every purchaser who, in reliance upon the general description in a field book, or the loose and irresponsible declaration of a surveyor, without taking further measures to acquire correct information, might find himself disappointed in the expected value of his purchase, are nevertheless satisfied that there is no such proof of deception or imposition in the present case, as entitles the party to the favorable consideration of Congress. They are, therefore, of opinion that the prayer of the petitioner ought to be rejected.

JOINT MEMORIAL to the Congress of the United States asking the privilege of entry agreeable to the provisions of the pre-emption act of 1833.

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Alabama, respectfully represents to your honorable body that persons living in the fractional townships of the Creek purchase are denied the right of entry of the lands on which they reside, agreeable to the provisions of the pre-emption act of 1833.

Your memorialists therefore humbly hope that the facts embodied in this memorial will receive the attentive consideration of your honorable body, and that if found true and just, that our citizens may receive the benefits designated from the act above referred to. They therefore request that your honorable bodies will be pleased to bestow on this subject the attention it may be esteemed to deserve, and as in duty bound your memorialists will ever pray.

Resolved, That our senators be instructed and our representatives requested to use their best exertions to procure the relief requested by the foregoing memorial. And be it further resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit one copy of the foregoing memorial to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR THE EXPENDITURE OF THE TWO PER CENT FUND, FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF A RAILROAD FROM THE TENNESSEE VALLEY TO MOBILE BAY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 2, 1835.

(Copy.)

JOINT MEMORIALS to the Congress of the United States, on the subject of the two per cent fund, and for other purposes.

Your memorialists would respectfully represent, that by the act of Congress, passed the 2d March, 1819, to enable the people of Alabama to form a State government, two per cent of the net proceeds of the sales of the public lands lying within the State of Alabama, are reserved and set apart to make a road or roads, leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress.

Your memorialists believe that there are no road or roads leading to said State, or that are necessary to be made to facilitate the intercourse of the people of this State, with the adjoining States, upon which this fund would be expended by Congress; and that unless the conditions of the donation are altered, this portion of the five per cent, reserved for the benefit of the people of Alabama, will be entirely useless.

Your memorialists, therefore, pray that Congress would pass a law, placing this fund under the control of the State, for the purpose of constructing a railway from the Tennessee valley to the waters of the Mobile bay. They believe that this work would be such a one as would effectuate the intentions of Congress, in making the reservation of the two per cent fund, to be expended under their direction. This railway will not only connect the two great divisions of the State, but will enable the people of east Tennessee, to carry their breadstuffs and other articles to south Alabama, where they will find a good market, and will open a cheap and expeditious access to the seaport towns of Alabama, for all the country watered by the Tennessee river, and its tributaries, as well as for many of the rich counties of middle Tennessee.

Your memorialists believe this work important in a national point of view, and have no doubt if the contemplated railroad should be completed, the people of Tennessee would find it to be their interest to extend it into that State.

Your memorialists would further represent, that the contemplated railway will pass through a portion of the State containing a large quantity of public lands, that have been long in the market; but owing to their sterility, will not sell at the minimum price of the government lands; they therefore, ask Congress to pass a law, authorizing the condemnation of a section of land on each side of said railroad, wherever the said land may belong to the United States. This land, although valueless for other purposes, will afford a good supply of timber and other materials, for the construction of a railroad.

Resolved, That the governor of this State, be requested to furnish a copy of this memorial to each of our senators and representatives in Congress, with instructions to lay the same before that body.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA TO LOCATE OTHER LAND WHERE THE SIXTEENTH SECTIONS OF LAND HAVE BEEN DISPOSED OF.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 2, 1835.

(Copy.)

JOINT MEMORIALS to the Congress of the United States, in relation to the sixteenth sections in that portion of Alabama commonly called the Creek territory.

The general assembly of the State of Alabama would respectfully represent to the Congress of the United States, that, according to the act admitting the State of Alabama into the Union, it is provided, "that the section numbered sixteen in every township, and where each section has been sold, granted or disposed of, other lands equivalent thereto and most contiguous to the same shall be granted to the inhabitants of each township for the use of schools;" and whereas most of the sixteenth sections, and all the lands lying contiguous, have been taken by Indian reservations in some of the counties, the said sections in many instances being valuable, your memorialists therefore respectfully suggest that the said sixteenth sections be revalued, and that the several amounts be placed to the credit of the inhabitants of the same, or other lands of equal value be set apart for their use. Your memorialists respectfully submit the foregoing suggestions to the justice and liberality of the representatives of the United States, hoping that some means may be devised whereby the just claims of the inhabitants of the afore-mentioned counties may be placed upon the same footing with others of this State.

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Alabama in general assembly convened, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their endeavors to procure the passage of a law embracing the objects of the foregoing memorial.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing memorial and resolutions to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR A ROAD FROM VINCENNES TO CHICAGO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 2, 1835.

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Illinois, That, in the opinion of this general assembly, a good road from Vincennes to Chicago, on lake Michigan, is an improvement calculated to produce innumerable and lasting benefits to the interests of the United States and of this State; that such a road, passing as it would for many miles exclusively over the public lands, would increase their value, and hasten their settlement and sales, while it would secure to a very large and valuable portion of the citizens of Illinois the advantages of commerce and intercourse with their fellow-citizens on the lakes and the Atlantic States.

Resolved, That this general assembly recommend the passage of a bill reported by the Committee on Public Lands, in the House of Representatives at the last session, and which is now before Congress; which bill provides for appropriating a quantity of land for constructing said road.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this general assembly, the report accompanying said bill, which was made by the Committee on Public Lands, contains a just, clear and proper view of the subject, and meets our entire approbation.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to furnish each of our senators and representatives in Congress with a copy of these resolutions.

CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 3, 1835.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The petition and remonstrance of Ashley Parker, Henry Gill, and Henry Baldwin, of the county of Montgomery, in the State of Alabama,

RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH:

That your petitioners, Ashley Parker and Henry Gill, settled on the northeast and southeast fractional quarters of fractional section number twenty-four, township number eighteen, range number eighteen east; and that your petitioner, Henry Baldwin, settled on the northwest quarter of section number thirty, township number eighteen, range number nineteen east, and cultivated and improved the same; all of which tracts of land, at the time of the settlement of your petitioners, were public lands, belonging to the United States, and are parts of a larger tract of land, known here by the name of the "Tallassee Fixico reserve."

Your petitioners further show, that after the passage and approval of the act of Congress of the 19th of June, 1834, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers," &c., your petitioners presented the evidence of their settlement and improvements to the register and receiver of the land office at Cahaba, which, in the judgment of said register and receiver, entitled your petitioners to the benefit of the provisions of said act. Upon the presentation of the evidence accompanying your petitioners' application to the register and receiver, these gentlemen, doubting whether the lands occupied by your petitioners were, in truth and in fact, public lands, forwarded the evidence presented by your petitioners to them, to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, who, after an examination of the same, decided that the premises occupied by your petitioners were public lands. Your petitioners, accordingly, under the provisions of the said act, and with the approbation of said register and receiver, purchased of the United States the above-mentioned tracts of land, paid to the said register and receiver the amount of the purchase moneys, and received from said register and receiver certificates of said purchase; all of which will more fully appear to your honorable bodies by a reference to the receipts of the said register and receiver, copies of which are herewith transmitted and marked A.

Your petitioners had well hoped that, having submitted the evidence of their settlement and improvements to the proper officers, and obtained from them a favorable adjudication, and having complied in every particular with the requisites of the laws of the United States, and purchased of the government the tracts above mentioned, they would have been permitted peacefully to enjoy the premises thus fairly, justly, and lawfully obtained; but so it is not. May it please your honorable bodies, your petitioners are informed that a bill has been introduced into the House of Representatives, which, if enacted, will forever deprive your petitioners of any benefit on account of their settlement and cultivation, and of the right of property vested in them by their purchase from the United States under the act of Congress aforesaid.

Your petitioners do therefore solemnly protest and remonstrate against the bill which has been introduced, and which, if enacted, will, as your petitioners have already said, forever deprive your petitioners of the benefit of their settlement and improvements, and of the right of property vested in them by their purchase from the United States, and secured to them by the laws; and, in support of this their solemn protest and remonstrance, they submit to your honorable bodies the following statement of facts and circumstances connected with their claim, and the controversy which has been got up against them.

Immediately after information reached this part of the country of the passage of the act of the 19th of June, 1834, above adverted to, and before the provisions of the same were generally known to our citizens, or an opportunity had been offered for examining them, George Taylor, of Coosa county, Jesse Taylor, of Talledega, George Whitman, of Montgomery, Edward Sims, of Tuscaloosa, and Bennet S. Griffin, of Autauga, came to the premises above described, occupied by your petitioners, and commenced surveying the same, laid off the premises into building lots, gave public notice of a sale, and by auction disposed of the lots thus laid off to purchasers, received the notes of the vendees, payable in twelve months, and made to said vendees quit-claims to the lots thus sold. In this manner, the premises were sold from under the feet of your petitioners, notwithstanding the remonstrances of your petitioners to the contrary, and ample notice given by your petitioners of their occupancy, and of the right of pre-emption which had accrued to them by the provisions of the act. Upon inquiring into the premises, your petitioners were informed that the company composed of Messrs. George Taylor, of Coosa county, Jesse Taylor, of Talledega, George Whitman, of Montgomery, Edward Sims, of Tuscaloosa, and Bennet S. Griffin, of Autauga, claimed the lands occupied by your petitioners under a pretended purchase from George Taylor, of Coosa county; and that said Taylor claimed to be owner of the same by virtue of a purchase made many years since of one Tallassee Fixico, an Indian of the Creek nation, who had once resided on the same.

It will be manifest to your honorable bodies, upon an examination of the subject, that the claim of the company, viz., of Mr. George Taylor, &c., is not well founded, either in justice or in law, and therefore your honorable bodies will hesitate long before you will, by act of Congress, confirm the same, more especially where the vested rights of settlers and occupants are to be immediately affected and destroyed. If Tallassee Fixico had no right to the lands in question, he could convey none to Mr. George Taylor; and if Mr. Taylor had nothing, of course the company holding under him can have no more.

By the treaty concluded at Fort Jackson, on the 9th day of August, 1814, between the United States and the Creek nation, a cession is made of all the lands lying in this vicinity, including the premises occupied by your petitioners, to the United States; which said cession is accompanied with this provision: "Provided, nevertheless, that where any possession of any chief or warrior of the Creek nation, who shall have been friendly to the United States during the war, and taken an active part therein, shall be within the territory ceded by these articles to the United States, every such person shall be entitled to a reservation of land within the said territory, of one mile square, to include his improvement, as near the centre thereof as may be, which shall inure to the said chief or warrior, and his descendants, so long as he or they shall continue to occupy the same, who shall be protected by, and subject to the laws of the United States; but upon the voluntary abandonment of the same by such possessor or his descendants, the right of occupancy or possession of said lands shall devolve to the United States, and be identified with the right of property ceded hereby." (See Gordon's Digest, art. 2,359, page 444.) We have proved, by the most indubitable testimony, and by persons acquainted with the facts, and the most respectable men in this part of the country, to the perfect satisfaction of the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, and also of the register and receiver at Cahaba, that Tallassee Fixico, a friendly Indian, in the year 1827, abandoned the place on which he resided at the date of the treaty, and removed to a place on the Coosa, a first-rate piece of land, many miles above his former residence, and has also, under the late treaty, received of the United States, a confirmation of title to the place on which he at present resides, and with which, if we are correctly informed, he is perfectly content. The lands then were, according to the terms of the treaty, upon the abandonment by Tallassee Fixico, public lands, and the title to the same vested in the United States. Being public lands, your petitioners settled on them, erected houses, and otherwise improved and cultivated them; and according to the provisions of the act of Congress of the 19th June, 1834, your petitioners became entitled to a right of pre-emption of the same, and, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, and also of the register and receiver at Cahaba, have purchased the same of the United States. If Tallassee Fixico, in 1827, pretended to dispose of the premises in question to Mr. George Taylor, he committed a fraud on the rights of the United States, and could convey nothing.

But your petitioners further contend that the pretended purchase by Mr. Taylor was in open violation of law, and therefore he could take nothing by his purchase, even if Tallassee Fixico had a good right to sell. By section 1 of the act of Congress of March 3d, 1807, still in force, it is provided that "if any person shall take possession of, or make a settlement on, any lands ceded to the United States, which lands shall not have been previously sold or leased by the United States, or the claim to which by such person shall not have been previously confirmed by the United States; or if any person shall cause such lands to be thus occupied, taken possession of, or settled, or shall survey or attempt to survey, or cause to be surveyed, any such lands, or designate any boundaries thereon, by marking trees or otherwise, until thereto duly authorized by law, such offender shall forfeit his right, if any he have, to such lands." (See Gordon's Digest, art. 2,419, page 460.) This act of March 3d, 1807, remains in full force on the statute book, and is conclusive against the right to purchase on the part of Mr. Taylor, and, if your petitioners are not incorrect, operates a total forfeiture of all the claim both of Mr. G. Taylor and also of the company, who, claiming under him, have pretended to survey and dispose of the lands in controversy. Evidence of the sale by the company, made without authority from the United States, and contained in the deed from George Taylor and others to M. Simon, dated in July last, is herewith forwarded, and marked B.

Your petitioners desire to call the attention of your honorable bodies to the fact, that they are in possession both of the lands and of the receipts of the receiver at Cahaba, showing the purchase by your petitioners, under the act of the 19th of June, 1834; and that, in virtue of the certificate of the register and receiver, a full and complete title to the lands in controversy is, by the laws of Alabama, vested in your petitioners. By section 8 of an act of the general assembly, passed in 1812, it is provided that "all certificates issued in pursuance of any act of Congress, by any of the boards of commissioners, register of a land office, or any other person duly authorized to issue such certificates, upon any warrant or order of survey, or to any donation or pre-emption claimants, for any lands in this Territory, shall be taken and received as vesting a full, complete, and legal title, in the person in whose favor the said certificate is granted, to the lands therein mentioned, and his, her, or their assigns, so far as to enable the holder of such certificate to maintain any action thereon; and the same shall be received in evidence as such in any court in this Territory." (See Aikin's Alabama Digest, p. 283, s. 142.)

Your petitioners then state, and show to your honorable bodies, that the lands which were the subject of the sale by Tallassee Fixico to Mr. George Taylor, and the sale of which is sought to be confirmed by the bill introduced into the House of Representatives, against the passage of which your petitioners protest and remonstrate, belong, in truth and in fact, to your petitioners:

1st. Because your petitioners came to the Tallassee Fixico reserve some years since, and, finding the place on which they settled in a state of nature, and belonging to the United States, settled on it, have erected habitations, and have cultivated and improved the same.

2dly. Because, by the passage and approval of the act of the 19th of June, 1834, your petitioners, in consequence of their inhabitation, occupancy, and cultivation, were fully entitled to the right of pre-emption of the same.

3dly. Because, upon evidence of the facts, your petitioners were, by the register and receiver of the land office at Cahaba, in conformity to the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury, permitted to purchase the lands so occupied and cultivated by them, of the United States, and did so purchase them; and 4thly. Because, according to the laws of Alabama, the certificate of the register and receiver vests in your petitioners a perfect, full, and legal title to the lands in controversy.

Your petitioners also state, and show to your honorable bodies, and charge, that the claims of the gentlemen who contest the right of your petitioners, and who are desirous of procuring the passage of the bill against which your petitioners protest and remonstrate, are not well founded:

1st. Because, upon the abandonment of the lands by Tallassee Fixico, in 1827, the said lands, by treaty, which is the supreme law of the land, devolved upon the United States, and therefore said Tallassee Fixico had no right to dispose of the same.

2dly. Because said George Taylor bought of Tallassee Fixico in violation of positive law, and therefore took nothing by his purchase.

3dly. Because Tallassee Fixico has received of the United States, under the late treaty, a large body of valuable land on the Coosa river, in lieu of the land abandoned by him; and therefore his sale operated as a fraud upon the United States.

4thly. Because the gentlemen composing the company, viz., Messrs. George Taylor, &c., bought also in violation of positive law, and without the authority of the United States, and have surveyed and pretended to sell, without the least authority from the government; and therefore not only took nothing by their purchase, but have totally forfeited any pretended title they may presume they have derived from Tallassee Fixico, or from any other source.

Your honorable bodies cannot fail to perceive that the true question in this case is between bona fide settlers and residents on the public lands, and a company of gentlemen who are non-resident dealers in this species of property; and that if the benevolent policy of the government, in the passage of the act of the 19th of June, 1834, is to be at all taken into consideration in this question, it must be unhesitatingly decided in favor of your petitioners. Your honorable bodies will also perceive that the gentlemen composing the company are not entitled to a very large amount of the favorable regard of the government, as their claim has been urged without in the least consulting the United States, and with circumstances of great contumely towards your petitioners. Your petitioners have been compelled to see the lands on which they live sold at vendue from beneath their feet, notwithstanding the title was, by law, clearly vested in them, and notwithstanding the gentlemen composing the company must have been perfectly cognizant of the fact. Your petitioners have been injured without cause, and the government has been heretofore treated with great indifference. The citizens, too, in this vicinity, have just cause of complaint againt the company, for pretending to sell at public vendue lands to which they had no title, and for receiving payment for the same, the title being at the time in your petitioners. Your honorable bodies must also be satisfied that, if the bill against which your petitioners remonstrate should become a law, your petitioners will be deprived of a right vested in them by the law of the land, and be driven from premises which fully belong to them, your petitioners having in good faith complied with the requisitions of the act of Congress, and having honestly purchased from the United States the lands on which they reside.

Your petitioners do therefore remonstrate and protest against the bill introduced into the House of Representatives:

1st. Because it would be a violation of the great and sacred principles of magna charta and the bill of rights, by disseising your petitioners of their freehold, and disfranchising them of their liberties, without the process or due operation of law.

2d. Because it would violate the Constitution of the United States, as it would operate summarily to eject and oust your petitioners without the benefit and inestimable privilege of the trial by jury.

3d. Because it would violate the Constitution of the United States, as it would impair the obligation and sanctity of a contract between your petitioners and the United States.

4th. Because it would be a violation of the Constitution of the United States, as it would have an ex post facto operation on parties to a contract already executed.

5th. Because it would be a violation of the great and republican principle of State rights, as it would operate to set aside a law of the State of Alabama, constitutionally enacted in furtherance of the administration of justice among her own citizens, and on a subject within her exclusive jurisdiction.

6th. Because it would violate the public faith pledged to your petitioners by the act of the 19th June, 1834.

7th. Because it would be against public law, as it would operate a recision of a contract fairly entered into and executed between the government and your petitioners, without fault on the part of your petitioners.

8th. Because it would be depriving your petitioners of rights already and fully vested in them, both by the laws of the United States, and those of the State of Alabama.

9th. Because it would operate to legalize and sanction a fraud committed on the United States.

10th. Because it would operate to legalize and sanction a fraud attempted to be perpetrated on the citizens of this vicinity in July last, when lands vested by law in your petitioners were pretended to be sold by non-residents, without title, in derogation of the authority of the United States, and of the just title of your petitioners.

11th. Because it would be attended with great hardship and cruelty towards your petitioners, in compelling them to abandon their improvements and their habitations, and leaving them to the tender mercies of the gentlemen composing the company—a situation in which your petitioners feel no great anxiety to be placed.

12th. Because it would be causing the United States to become a volunteer in a controversy in which they have no interest, unless it be the protection of your petitioners: the striking and melancholy feature of which officiousness would be an interference against the very right of the case, and in opposition to the eternal and immutable principles of justice.

Your petitioners therefore pray that the bill introduced into the House of Representatives may not pass; and your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 3, 1835.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, January 19, 1835.

On motion of Mr. Plummer,

Resolved, That the Committee on the Public Lands be instructed to inquire into the expediency of passing a law, authorizing Isaac Richmond, Jonah White, Conway Oldham, David Richmond, David Clay, Ignatius Bankston, Samuel Hackenbury, Jefferson Clay, George Simmons, Samuel B. Parrish, Thomas C. McMackin, David Mabray, and John Balfour, and other persons, who were entitled to pre-emption rights to eighty acres of land, under the provision of an act of Congress, passed on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of the public lands," and were prevented from making their entries under said act, in consequence of a decision of the officers of government against their rights, to enter, in lieu thereof, the same quantity of land elsewhere, within the same land district, at the minimum price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre; and that the accompanying documents be referred to said committee.

Attest:

W. S. FRANKLIN, Clerk.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your petitioners, citizens of that portion of the State of Mississippi ceded to the United States by the Choctaw Indians, at the treaty of 1830, most respectfully represent: That they settled within that district of country prior to the 1st day of May, 1832, by the permission of the Choctaws, and with the approbation, as was generally understood, of the agent of the government, and made valuable improvements. During the spring of 1832, a portion of the United States troops were ordered into the country, for the purpose of removing them from the public lands as intruders and trespassers, in violation of the stipulations of the treaty. On a proper representation of the subject to the Secretary of War, the orders were countermanded, and they were permitted to remain with their families in the peaceable and quiet possession of their homes. (A copy of the correspondence with the War Department is made an accompanying document, marked A.) By their industry and labor, your petitioners opened valuable improvements, and erected comfortable cabins for the shelter of their families, cheered with the hope that Congress would, in their wisdom and liberality, extend to them the same privileges extended to other pioneers and settlers on the public lands, the right of pre-emption to a little spot of ground, sufficient to cover their labor, at the minimum price of $1.25 per acre. In their reasonable hope and expectations they were not disappointed. On application made to the 2d session of the 22d Congress, that honorable body extended to them the pre-emption privileges of the act of the 5th of May, 1832, which became a law on the 2d day of March, 1833. Your petitioners were furnished with copies of the law and instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, by their representative in Congress, a copy of which is made an accompanying document, (marked B.) The law required that the pre-emptors should make their applications prior to the commencement of the public sales. Some of your petitioners prepared their testimony in conformity with the instructions of the department, and presented the same to the register and receiver of the Chocchuma district prior to the commencement of the sales in the fall of 1833, when they were informed by them that their office was not opened for the transaction of business, and would not be until the day fixed by the President for the commencement of the sales. On the first day of the sales, during the few minutes' time given them to assert their rights, they presented their testimony in support of their claims, when the officers, after consulting and advising with the speculators, rejected their applications on the pretended ground that the Choctaw lands were not public lands within the meaning of the act of Congress, and that the law, consequently, did not apply to that section of country. An appeal was taken from the decision of those officers to the Secretary of the Treasury, who, without hesitation, reversed their decision, and decided in favor of the rights of your petitioners, as will more fully appear from an inspection of the accompanying documents, (marked C.) The land officers refused to suspend any action on your petitioners' applications, or reserve their land from sale, until a decision of the proper department could be had; but arbitrarily, and without authority of law, and against the dictates of justice, and the feelings of humanity, sold the lands on which your petitioners resided at the public sales, or permitted them to be covered by other claims. Thus were your petitioners thrown into the lion jaws of the aristocratic moneyed speculators, by the illegal and arbitrary decision of the officers of government, and compelled to compete with those lordly mercenaries, who infest the land offices, for their own work and labor. It is not the intention of your petitioners to charge the land officers with being interested with the company of speculators known to your honorable body as the "Chocchuma land company," nor of combining with the speculators against the interests and rights of the settlers on the public lands. The charge has, however, been made by others, and the subject has been investigated by a committee of one branch of Congress. The testimony in support of the charge has been laid before you for inspection, to which your petitioners beg leave to refer your honorable body for particulars. Some of your petitioners, and many other settlers on the public lands, were prevented by the known decision of the officers, which was posted up on the door of the land office, from proving up their claims, and making a formal presentation of them to the register and receiver prior to the land being offered at public sale. (See document D.) Others were prevented by the persuasions, inducements and promises held out to them by the "Chocchuma land company of speculators," which were in some instances violated, and the land of the settlers purchased by them, and converted to their own use; by means of which, the settlers were deprived of their labor, and their families turned out of doors, either without any remuneration, or compelled to take such sum for their improvements as the avaricious and mercenary speculators, in the contraction of their minds, deemed equitable and just. Your petitioners are unwilling to incur the expense of a long, expensive and tedious lawsuit, by resorting to the judicial tribunals of the country for a redress of their grievances; they therefore pray your honorable body to pass a law, giving to them a pre-emption right to other lands, in lieu of those that have been thus taken from them, or grant them such other relief as the equity and justice of their case demands, and may seem meet to your honorable body; and your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

A No. 1.

WASHINGTON CITY, May 22, 1332.

DEAR SIR: By the third article of the treaty made and entered between the United States of America and the mingoes, chiefs, captains and warriors of the Choctaw nation of Indians, on the 27th day of September, 1830, the Indians have until the fall of 1833 to complete their removal to their new home west of the Mississippi river. In the eighteenth article it is stipulated that "no person is to be permitted to settle within the nation on the lands to be sold before the Choctaws shall remove."

The legislature of Mississippi, at the January session of 1830, by a solemn act abolished and took away all the rights, privileges, immunities and franchises held, claimed or enjoyed by those persons called Indians, within the chartered limits of that State, by virtue of any form of policy, usage or custom existing among them, not particularly recognized and established by the common law or statutes of the State of Mississippi, and extended to them all of the rights, privileges, immunities and franchises, held or enjoyed by the free white inhabitants of said State.

The same act also declared all of the laws, ordinances and statutes of Mississippi to be in full force and operation over all persons and property within that part of the territory occupied by the said Indians. This act has not been repealed nor amended, but still remains in full force and operation. I understand that an order has been issued from the War Department, requiring the removal of all white settlers on the Choctaw lands; and that the United States troops have been commanded to repair to the State of Mississippi, to aid in carrying the order into effect. I also learned, in a conversation which I had with you a few days ago on this subject, that the order was issued on the complaint of Mushalatubbe, a chief of one of the districts, and under an impression made from some source on the mind of the President, that the act of the legislature of Mississippi, before referred to, had been repealed. I also learned from you, with pleasure, that the order did not reach the commanding officer of that post, from whence the troops were to be dispatched into the State, until after they had left for some other point, whence they had been previously ordered.

An act was passed on the 4th of February, 1829, extending the laws and jurisdiction of the courts of the State to all white persons resident within the limits of the Choctaw and Chicasaw nations, attaching a portion of the lands in the occupancy of the Indians to the adjacent counties, and limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of such counties to the particular portion of territory attached thereto. The third section of the act, as near as I can recollect, allowed to the ministerial officers mileage, in addition to the fees previously established by law, for executing process within the Indian boundary. This section of the act was repealed on the 20th of December, 1831. In 1830, an act amendatory of the act first above referred to was subsequently, and during the same session of the legislature, passed, which, among other enactments, prohibited any person or persons other than Indians from making any settlement, or attempting to cultivate any land or lands within the boundary of the Indian territory, under the penalty of a heavy fine, and from six to twelve months' imprisonment. So much of said act was, on the 9th of December, 1831, repealed. These are the repealing acts, I presume, of which the President has been advised, and which led him into error in supposing that the first-mentioned act had been repealed. I was a member of the legislature of Mississippi at the time of the passage of the laws of 1829 and 1830, and recollect that the clause in the supplemental act of 1830, to prevent trespasses on Indian lands, was not incorporated into the same, because the statute laws of the State then in force were not amply sufficient to protect the Indians in the quiet and peaceable possession and occupancy of their lands, but it was incorporated for the purpose of quieting any fears which the Indians might entertain of a disposition on the part of the legislature to oppress them; and, also, for the purpose of informing the citizens of the State that they would not be permitted to trespass on the lands of their red brethren, so long as they chose to remain in possession. Under the operation of the law, one or more cases, within my own knowledge, of extreme hardship, occurred, which, I presume, was one inducement for the legislature, at the last session, to repeal it. Another, and probably the great inducement for the repeal, was the consent of the Choctaws themselves, through their principal chief, Col. Greenwood Leflore, who is recognized by the government as the head of the nation, became a candidate at the last August election to represent Yazoo county in the State legislature, and declared his intention, if elected, to effect, if possible, a repeal of that part of the act; he so expressed himself to me and others. The object of Leflore and other intelligent Choctaws, who had the good of the Indians at heart, was to invite emigration into their territory, after the ratification of the treaty, and before their removal, so as to enable the people of the nation to dispose of their reservations, improvements, and such of their stock and farming utensils as they could not conveniently take with them over the Mississippi, to the best advantage, which they could not do unless the purchasers were permitted to go and settle among them. No white man, under the existing laws of Mississippi, is permitted to settle upon the improvement of an Indian without his consent. There is an act upon the statute book of our State, which provides a summary remedy, before a justice of the peace, for any person who may be turned out of possession of any lands or tenements by unlawful or forcible means, on giving the opposite party ten days' notice, by whatever right or title the complainant holds possession, or whatever estate he held or claimed in such lands or tenements of which he is dispossessed. In these summary proceedings the party aggrieved is entitled, without delay, to his writ of haberi facias possessionem, without showing any title, if he proves his right of occupancy. (This act is deemed amply sufficient to protect the Indians.) The only important act ever in force in Mississippi in relation to the Choctaws, which has been repealed, is the one which I have mentioned, declaring it penal to trespass on their lands without their consent, and punishing the offender with fine and imprisonment. The Indians are not dissatisfied with the existing state of things; and for the truth of this assertion, I beg leave to refer to Col. William Ward, United States agent for the Choctaws, who is now in this city. Mushalatubbe is an old, ignorant, and drunken Indian, who can be induced to write by amanuensis anything which a designing person, who has subtlety and capacity enough to entwine himself into his affections, may dictate; and the government ought not to place confidence in any representation he may make, unless sustained by other evidence. It is not, and never has been, the disposition of Mississippi to oppress the Indians; she has, to her honor and credit, always pursued towards them a kind and humane policy. They are now, and have been since the passage of the act of 1830, qualified jurors, competent witnesses, by paying a poll-tax of twenty-five or fifty cents entitled to their votes, and eligible to any office within the gift of the people of the State. It is the interest of the Indians as well as the State and general government, that emigrants should be permitted, with the consent of the Choctaws, to settle among them; they will be able to furnish the surveyors with provisions, and thereby expedite the surveying of the lands; they will prepare the way, and furnish bread and meat for those who may follow. All of the improvements they make will enhance the value, and cause speedy sales of the public domain. There are numerous families of the first respectability from Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, the Carolinas, and the older settlements of Mississippi, who have, by the tacit consent of the United States agent, and express permission of the Indians, settled in the nation, and pitched their crops for the year. Many of them are in moderate circumstances, and have nearly spent their little all in getting there, and they will not now permit, at this season of the year, their families to be turned out of doors, and their wives and children deprived of the means of subsistence for another year, without making the manly resistance of husbands and fathers in defence of everything sacred and dear. In such an event, it cannot be reasonably expected that their relations and friends can refuse to make common cause with them. This is a state of things which no friend to his country and the Union can for a moment desire to witness; but it is a state of things which must necessarily result from sending a military force to remove the white settlers on the Indian lands. The citizens are sufficiently intelligent to know and understand their rights, and I feel assured that they will maintain them, unless a force is sent sufficient to drive them into submission. There is another view of the subject, which I feel it my duty, as a citizen of Mississippi, to take. Laying the facts which I have stated out of the question, and admitting that the Indians, en masse, call upon the general government to carry into effect that clause of the treaty which prohibits white persons from settling in the nation until after their removal, I deny the right of the general government to exercise any jurisdiction over the citizens of Mississippi, within the chartered limits of the State. The right of sovereignty cannot exist both in the State and general governments at the same time. The right of the one necessarily excludes that of the other. If the general government can remove the settlers from the Indian lands, she has the same power to remove settlers from all of the unsold lands within the limits of the State. So long as the general government is recognized as the landlord of the soil, I admit that she has the right to remove all intruders upon her lands, not by any laws of her own, nor by a military force, but resorting to the judicial tribunals of the country, and seeking redress in the same manner of any other landholder, in the courts of justice of the States.

I repeat, if the Indian lands are trespassed upon, the laws of the State are amply sufficient to enable them to redress their grievances; and, on application to the proper tribunals, the constituted authorities of the State will put them promptly in force. I will not, however, attempt to argue the case, but feel it my duty, as a citizen of Mississippi, to remonstrate against the enforcing of the order for the removal of the settlers; and, with this hasty view of the subject, respectfully request its revocation.

F. E. PLUMMER.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

A No. 2.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, May 23, 1832.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive your letter of the 22d instant. Upon the application of Mushalatubbe, one of the Choctaw chiefs, for the removal of intruders from the territory ceded by that tribe to the United States, under the provisions of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, orders were given for a company of regular troops to proceed to the ceded district, and under the instructions of the agent, to remove such intruders therefrom. At the time this order was given, it was supposed that the law of the State of Mississippi, extending jurisdiction over the Choctaw country, had been suspended by the legislature till the expiration of the period allowed the tribe to remove. Had it not been for this belief, no instructions for this object would have been given under the intercourse act of 1802; but whatever proceedings might have been adopted, they would have been had under the act of Congress providing for the removal of intruders from the public land. The execution of this duty would have devolved upon the marshal of Mississippi, and the law authorizes the employment of troops of the United States in carrying it into effect.

A few days since, however, Col. Ward, the Choctaw agent, arrived here, and stated that the Indians did not wish the removal of the white settlers, but, on the contrary, had invited them into the country for the reasons so forcibly represented by you. Upon this information the President directed that the contemplated proceedings should be stayed, and counter instructions, a copy of which I have the honor to enclose to you, together with orders to stop the movement of the troops, have been given. Certainly there is no wish, on the part of the government, to molest or injure any person who has moved upon the ceded territory; on the contrary, the President is happy to find that their residence there is acceptable and useful to the Indians, and that he is not called upon to execute those provisions of the treaty of 1830 which require their exclusion from the country. In our treaties with the Indians, however, we receive valuable concessions, and every consideration of justice and good faith requires that all we promise to them we should perform.

Had the Choctaws called upon the government for the observance of that part of the treaty to which I have referred, I am satisfied that the citizens would have cheerfully acquiesced in the execution, by the President, of those duties enjoined upon him by the constitution and laws, and essential to the performance of the public engagements.

Very, &c.,

LEW. CASS.

To the Hon. F. E. PLUMMER.

Circular to registers and receivers of the United States land offices.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 17, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: Subjoined is the copy of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d of March last, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' approved the 5th April, 1832."

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, in all cases in which persons were settlers or occupants of the public land prior to the 1st day of May, 1832, and were authorized to enter, under the provisions of the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' approved April 5, 1832, and were prevented from making their entries in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned, or where the land was not attached to any land district, or where the same has been reserved from sale in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory, the said occupants shall be permitted to enter the said lands on the same conditions, in every respect, as were prescribed in said act, within one year after the surveys are made, or the land attached to a land district, or the boundary line established; and if the land shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of one year as aforesaid, then the said settlers or occupants shall be permitted to enter before the sale thereof."

The provisions of the above act give the right of pre-emption to two quarter quarter sections to such persons as were entitled to the benefits of a pre-emption entry of two quarter quarter sections of land under the act of the 5th April, 1832, but who were prevented from making an entry, from the operation of the causes stated, viz:

1st. Where the public surveys were not made and returned prior to 5th October, 1832; or

2d. Where the land was not attached to any land district; or

3d. Where the land has been reserved from sale in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory.

The proof to be adduced to you that the party applying for the benefit of the act is rightfully entitled thereto, is his or her affidavit before a magistrate or other officer duly authorized by law to administer oaths, setting forth the fact that he or she is an actual settler and housekeeper on public lands, (not on lands already purchased from the government,) and that the half quarter section applied for includes his or her improvement; which affidavit is to be sustained by the affidavit of one or more disinterested persons, substantiating the fact to your entire satisfaction.

Form of the affidavit.

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I am an actual settler and a housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz: the —— quarter of section No. ——, in township No. ——, of range No. ——, and hereby apply to enter the —— quarter of said section, under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,'" which will include my improvement. And I do further swear (or affirm) that I have not entered, under this act, or under the act of the 5th April, 1832, to which it is supplemental, at this or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter sections, in my own name, or in the name of any other person.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

To the REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ——.

C No. 1.

COLUMBUS September 27, 1833.

SIR: Some of our citizens who were actual settlers and housekeepers on the public lands within the limits of that region of country ceded to the United States by the Choctaws at the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, have, I understand, applied to enter two quarter quarter sections at the minimum price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, including their improvements, under and by virtue of the provisions of an act of Congress approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplemental to the several laws for the sale of public land,' approved 5th April, 1832." In compliance with the request of those interested, I beg leave to give you, in a few words, my opinion on the subject. The points which have been raised before the register, and the only ones involved in the question, are, 1st. Whether the act of 5th April, 1832, applies to lands which, at that date, had not been offered at public sale. 2d. Whether the lands ceded by the treaty aforesaid are public lands. And, 3d. Whether they were public lands prior to the 1st day of May, 1832. The pre-emption clause in the act of 1832 is broad and general in its terms, and, in the language of the law, applies to "all actual settlers upon the public lands." It contains a grant to every individual who adduces satisfactory evidence that he comes within the provisions of the law; and it is a universally admitted opinion which, I presume, will not be controverted, that, in the construction of all laws, as well as instruments of writing, making grants, where the phraseology requires or admits of construction, they shall be construed most strongly against the grantor. I will also assume the incontrovertible position, that where an individual claims a right under an act of Congress, and a doubt arises as to the nature or extent of that right, the decision of the head of the proper department, when in favor of the individual claiming such right, is conclusive in favor of the individual, and against the government. Then, if any doubt existed as to the application of the act, it was put to rest by the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury as expressed in the circular letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the registers and receivers of the United States, under date of May 8, 1832, enclosing a copy of said act. The commissioner says: "I have it in charge from the Secretary of the Treasury to inform you that this privilege (meaning the pre-emption privilege) must not have the effect to stay or interfere with either public sales or private entries of lands during the same period." Again, says the commissioner: "Where the right of pre-emption exists to lands not at this date subject to private entry, and that will be offered at public sale prior to the 5th October next, the evidence of claim under the act must be filed with you, and the purchase money paid prior to the day of the public sale, otherwise the pre-emption will not be recognized." Here is the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury, clearly expressed, that the pre-emption clause in the act of 1832 does apply as well to lands which at that date had not been offered at public sale as to those lands that were subject to private entry. This I consider conclusive against the government, and in favor of the pre-emptors. Congress, composed of the identical same members who made this law, in passing the amendatory act of March 2, 1833, put the same construction on the act of April 5, 1832, as the Secretary of the Treasury did in the circular before referred to. By the act of 1833, the provisions of the act of 1832 are extended to all such persons as "were settlers or occupants of the public lands prior to the 1st day of May, 1832," but could not avail themselves of the privilege granted by said act "in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned," &c., provided they apply "within one year after the surveys are made," &c. "If," however, says the law, "the land shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of one year," after the surveys have been made, &c., "then the said settlers or occupants shall be permitted to enter before the sale thereof." This construction was also put on the act of 2d March, 1833, before recited, by the Secretary of the Treasury, as expressed by the general circular of the Commissioner, enclosing a copy of said act to the several registers and receivers of the United States. After giving a copy of the act, the Commissioner says: "The provisions of the above act give the right of pre-emption to two quarter quarter sections to such persons as were entitled to the benefits of a pre-emption entry of two quarter quarter sections of land under the act of 5th April, 1832, but who were prevented from making an entry, from the operation of the causes stated, viz: 1st. Where the public surveys were not made and returned prior to the 5th October, 1832; or 2d. Where the land was not attached to any land district; or, 3d. Where the land has been reserved from sale in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory." If the provisions of this act do not extend to lands which have not been offered at public sale, they are perfectly nugatory, and do not extend to any case whatever, for there is no case where it can possibly extend to lands subject to private entry. It is, however, unnecessary to argue a point which has never been disputed by the head of the department, but admitted by the Commissioner and the several registers and receivers, who did, without hesitation, permit entries to be made under the law on lands which had not been offered at public sale, by all who applied in proper form, before the expiration of said law. In reply to the second query, whether the lands ceded by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek are public lands, I will only remark, that if they are not public lands within the meaning of the acts of 1832 and 1833, the government has no right to sell them in obedience to the recent proclamation of the President. In discussing the question whether the lands ceded by the treaty aforesaid were public lands before the first day of May, 1832, within the meaning of the acts of Congress, before referred to, it will be unnecessary to disturb the old controversy in relation to the relative rights of the Indians and the general government, or the States, prior to the date of the treaty. On reference to the treaty ratified and confirmed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, on the 4th of February, 1831, it will be found that the Choctaws made an absolute cession of the entire country which they owned and possessed east of the Mississippi to the United States. That stipulation, contained in the treaty which gave to the remnant of the tribe until the fall of 1833 to remove west, does not guaranty to them the right of possession of the whole country, nor to any greater portion of it than they are necessarily compelled to occupy for the time being. It is not the lands temporarily in possession of the Indians which the settlers claim the right of entering under the act of 1833, but such as the Indians have abandoned. If the right of the Indians, whatever it might have been previous to the treaty, does not cease and vest in the general government until after the fall of 1833, the United States, I repeat, have no right to sell the lands before that time; and if the right of the government commences before the expiration of the fall of 1833, it must be dated back to the time when the treaty was ratified. The treaty, however, is conclusive on this subject; the lands ceded by the Choctaws have been considered, and are, to all intents and purposes, public lands, according to the common acceptation of the term, and have been so considered from the 4th of February, 1831. Those enterprising individuals who were the pioneers in the wilderness, and opened roads into the forests for the benefit of the surveyors, land officers, and land purchasers, did not go there in the capacity of trespassers, squatters, or intruders, but they went there with the approbation of the officers of the general government, and on the express invitation of the chiefs and head men of the Choctaw nation. That clause in the treaty, prohibiting white persons from settling on the lands until after the removal of the Choctaws, was made for the benefit of the Indians, and they had a right to waive it. If the fact of the settlers being, in a legal point of view, trespassers, will exclude them from the provisions of the pre-emption act, the same argument will apply to all of the pre-emption acts which have heretofore been passed by Congress. All settlers on the public lands are trespassers, in contemplation of the laws of the United States. The lands could not have been surveyed without some one to furnish the surveyors with provisions. But for these settlers, the land officers could not be supported, nor the purchasers accommodated at the sales. The very object of the framers of the law was to protect those individuals who had settled there, under the circumstances, on the faith of the justice and liberality of the government, from the merciless speculators and others who would soon follow after them, and reap the benefit of their pioneer labors and perils, by securing to their wives and children a home on a little spot of ground, at the minimum price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. Law, equity, and justice, in my humble opinion, demand a decision in favor of the applicants. Major Dowsing will present to you the course which he has pursued, and the reasons by which he has been governed, for your consideration and opinion.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. E. PLUMMER.

C No. 2.

Washington City, June 18, 1834.

Sir: I beg leave to call your attention to a legal question arising under the act of Congress passed on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive an act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands.'" The question is simply whether the provisions of the act referred to extend to the settlers on the lands ceded to the United States by the Choctaw Indians, at the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. I am not ignorant of the fact that the Commissioner, by a letter under date of April 29, 1833, instructed the register and receiver at Columbus (Mi.) that the act above referred to did not apply to these lands; nor am I ignorant of the fact that the Commissioner confirmed that decision on the presentation of a special case from that office in October last. In consequence of the great press of business in the General Land Office, important decisions are necessarily made in a hurry, without giving the cases the examination their importance demands. Such, I presume, was the case in this instance.

I dissent from the construction placed on the law by the Commissioner, but do not desire to take an appeal from his decision to the Secretary of the Treasury. I have full and implicit confidence in his legal attainments, and will abide by his judgment, pronounced on a thorough investigation of the case, whatever it may be. I only ask a rehearing on argument before the Commissioner himself. The Commissioner, being a lawyer by profession, will not, I trust, consider the request unreasonable or indelicate in me.

I made a communication to the Commissioner on the 27th day of September last, enclosed by Mr. Rose, an attorney at law, who accompanied it with an argument of his own. In this document, to which I beg leave to call the attention of the Commissioner, all the controverted points which arose in the case submitted before the register at Columbus are fully discussed. I will not here repeat them. I will simply call the attention of the Commissioner directly to the point of inquiry which will require any consideration. The provisions of the act before referred to give the right of pre-emption to eighty acres of land to all persons who were settlers or occupants of the public land prior to the first day of May, 1832, but who were prevented from availing themselves of the benefits of the act of April 5, 1832, until after its expiration on the 5th of October following, in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned, or where the land was not attached to any land district, &c.

The tract of country referred to comes within both of these rules. 1st. The country was not surveyed prior to the 5th of October, 1832, as is known officially to the Commissioner. 2d. The land, at that date, was not attached to any land district. The land districts were organized by an act passed March 2, 1833. The only question then is, whether these lands were public lands, in the legal and common acceptation of the term, prior to the first day of May, 1832. I admit that they were not considered public lands, within the meaning of the act of Congress, until after the cession of the same by treaty to the United States. The cession was absolute and unconditional. The lands became public, or, in other words, the property of the general government, from the date of the ratification of the treaty. To settle the whole question, it is, then, only necessary to inquire when the treaty was ratified. On reference thereto, it will be found to have been ratified on the 4th day of February, 1831. From that date they became public lands, and subject to the operations of the law under consideration. No further inquiry can possibly be necessary. It is too plain to admit of a serious argument.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. E. PLUMMER.

WASHINGTON CITY, July 21, 1834.

SIR: Daniel Richmond, Conway Oldham, Josiah White, George Simmons, Jefferson Clay, Isaac Richmond, Samuel Hackenbury, David Clay, and Ignatius Bankston, claim a right of pre-emption, each, to eighty acres of land, situate within that district of country ceded to the United States by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, under and by virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress passed on the 3d day of March, 1833. They adduced to the register and receiver of the land office at Chocchuma, Mississippi, satisfactory evidence of their right to the lands which they claimed as aforesaid; but their applications were refused by them, because, in their opinion, the lands ceded by the treaty aforesaid were not public lands on the first day of May, 1832, within the meaning of the act. The parties have enclosed to me their testimony, (which is herewith submitted,) with a request that I would obtain a decision thereon before the proper tribunal. Owing to various causes, unnecessary to mention, the subject has been delayed until this time. I am now enabled by the permission of the Commissioner, who has politely favored me with the enclosed papers, (for the purpose of handing them to you,) to present the subject to you for your decision. The attention of the (then) Secretary of the Treasury (Mr. McLane) was called to the subject by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in a communication under date of April 19, 1833. Although the Secretary decided two other questions submitted in the same communication, from some cause, (probably hurry of business) he omitted to give an opinion on the question now under consideration. The Commissioner, by a letter bearing date April 29, 1833, informed the land officers at Columbus and Chocchuma that the pre-emption privilege intended by the act of March 2, 1833, did not attach to the lands ceded by the treaty of September 27, 1830. This letter of instructions of April 29, it will be seen by an endorsement on the back of the letter of the Commissioner to the Secretary of the Treasury of the 19th of April, was drawn up by direction of the Commissioner, agreeably to his personal understanding with the Secretary. I mention this circumstance only for the purpose of showing that the subject has not had that mature consideration which its importance demands, and that, in fact, no formal decision has ever been made against the claimants. The instructions, in relation to said act, contained in the general circular of the Commissioner to the several registers and receivers under date of May 17, 1833, do not exclude the Choctaw lands from its operation, but, on the contrary thereof, seem to contemplate its operation on those lands. Under the instructions contained in the aforesaid letter of the 29th of April, the officers at Columbus decided against a case arising under the act of March 2, which was reported to the Commissioner for his opinion. He approved of the decision. In that case A. J. Rose, Esq., and myself made a communication to the Commissioner, in the nature of an argument on the side of the claimants, under date of September 27, 1833, to which I beg leave to call your attention. I also call your attention to a letter of mine to the Commissioner, on the same subject, of the 18th ultimo. It will not be understood that I take an appeal from the decision of the Commissioner. The case now stands in the situation of a rehearing before him, and by him referred to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. E. PLUMMER.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

C No. 4.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 25, 1834.

SIR: The honorable F. E. Plummer has submitted, for the decision of the department, the enclosed applications from Isaac Richmond, Jonah White, Conway Oldham, Daniel Richmond, David Clay, Ignatius Bankston, Samuel Hackenbury, Jefferson Clay, and George Simmons, to complete their pre-emption entries under the acts of 5th April, 1832, and 2d March, 1833.

Upon examination, I find that the parties were all actual settlers and housekeepers on the public lands prior to 1st May, 1832; that the entry and proof were made within the time limited by the act of 2d March, 1833, and thus the evidence of these facts in all the cases, except those of Jefferson Clay and George Simmons, is given according to the form prescribed by the instructions of the department. Thus sustained, it is my opinion that, with the exceptions stated, the right of each to the pre-emption claimed is authorized by the act of 2d March, 1833, subject, however to this limitation, that such entries shall not interfere with reservations made by the treaty with the Choctaws, ratified on the 5th of February, 1831, or in any way abridge the rights secured to others by said treaty. I consider the lands as public ones after the cession, and that the clause against settlers and intruders was for the benefit of the Indians, and to be enforced for them alone, who, in respect to settlers on these lands expressed a wish against their removal.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

C No. 5.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 2, 1834.

SIR: I have the honor to represent to you that the tracts of land claimed by pre-emption rights, alleged under the acts of 5th April, 1832, and 2d March, 1833, and which are the subject of your letter of instruction of 25th July last, are ascertained to have been located under the provisions of the act of 20th April, 1832, entitled "An act for the relief of Jefferson College, in the State of Mississippi," as set forth in the accompanying paper. One of those tracts was sold on the 15th November, 1833, and, in one case, wherein the number of the section is not given, the sale or disposition of this land cannot, from such cause, be now detected. I transmit, for your information, the deeds of transfer made by the agent of Jefferson College, under which the register of the land office at Chocchuma has, agreeably to law, issued his certificates of title, which are made of the same validity as a patent.

Your further orders on this subject are respectfully solicited.

With great respect, &c., ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

C No. 6.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, September 3, 1834.

SIR: I return the papers received with your letter of the 2d instant. It appearing that the pre-emption c'aims therein referred to conflict with the titles acquired by the trustees of Jefferson College, in virtue of locations upon the same lands made by that institution under the act of 20th April, 1832, I do not perceive that the department can further interpose until the rights of the claimants are determined by the legal tribunals, or quieted by further legislation. It would seem, however, to be proper that the proofs of the claimants, under the pre-emption act, should be filed in the proper land office with a copy of my letter of the 25th July last.

I am, respectfully, &c., LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

D.

CHOCCHUMA, Mi., October 21, 1833.

As attempts have been made to induce the settlers on the public lands in the northwestern district to believe that they are entitled to the benefit of the pre-emption law of the 5th April, 1832, as extended in certain cases by the law of Congress passed 20th March last; and as attempts have been made, and are now making, to induce those settlers to believe that they are deprived of the benefits of the above acts by us, contrary to law, and to gratify our feelings towards them, we hereunto annex an extract of a letter to us from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated 29th April, 1833, which, by accident, was left at Clinton, and not received here until to-day.

"Enclosed are also duplicates of my circular letters addressed to registers and receivers and surveyors general in relation to the act of Congress of 5th April, 1832, entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands.' The pre-emption privilege extended by that act, which is revived by an act of Congress bearing date the 2d day of March last, does not attach to the lands in the northeastern and northwestern districts of Mississippi, ceded by the treaty of September, 1830."

We hope the above extract will satisfy those interested in those claims that our conduct has been strictly governed by the laws of the land, and that, instead of our deceiving them, those who are urging them to prefer such claims are the persons who wish to gull and deceive them to their injury.

SAMUEL GWIN, Register.
R. H. STERLING, Receiver.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Holmes County:

I, Samuel B. Parrish, do solemnly swear, that I am an actual settler and a housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz., the northwest quarter of section number eight, in township number fifteen, of range number one east, and hereby apply to enter the west half of the northwest quarter of said section, under the provisions of an act of Congress approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands," which will include my improvement where I now reside, and which I occupied prior to the first day of May, 1832. And I do further swear, that I have not entered under this act, or under the act of the 5th of April, 1832, to which it is supplemental, at this or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter sections, in my own name, or in the name of any other person.

SAMUEL B. PARRISH.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, the 29th day of ——, A. D. 1833.

WILLIAM STIGLER, J. P.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Holmes County:

I, William Simmons, do hereby certify and state, on oath, (by request) that Samuel B. Parrish is an actual settler and housekeeper on a tract of public land known and designated (as appears from the lines and corner posts marked by the surveyor) as the west half of the northwest quarter of section number eight, of township fifteen, in range number one east, situate on Little river, in the county of Holmes; and that he lived on said tract of land last year (in 1832).

WILLIAM SIMMONS.

WILLIAM STIGLER, J. P.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Yallabusha County:

Personally appeared before me, Murdoch Ray, an acting justice of the peace for the county and State aforesaid, Thomas C. McMackin, and made oath that he was an actual settler on the east half of southwest quarter, and also had an improvement on the west half of east quarter, section 19, township 24, range 6 east, (on which the town of Henderson is situated,) in the early part of the year 1832; and that he, the said McMackin, was deprived of the necessity of applying for a pre-emption (to which he might have been entitled) by the location of an Indian float on each of the above described quarter sections; and he, the said McMackin, feels himself materially injured by being deprived of his pre-emption. And, inasmuch as the general government could not be injured, (and the claimant perhaps benefited,) he is induced to pray that Congress might grant him the location of a quarter section of land elsewhere in the land district, at the minimum price of the government.

T. C. McMACKIN.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 24th December, 1834.

MURDOCH RAY, J. P.

We, whose names are hereunto annexed, do consider the above testimony, as given by T. C. McMackin, entitled to due credit, and would be pleased if Congress would pass an act which might embrace him in his application. Given under our hands, this 24th December, 1834.

MARTIN EDWARDS.
DAVID MABRAY.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Yallabusha County:

Personally appeared before me, Murdoch Ray, an acting justice of the peace in and for the county and State aforesaid, David Mabray, and made oath that he settled and improved on the west half of the northwest quarter section 29, township 24, range 6 east, in the month of February, 1832; and that he, the said Mabray, believes that he was embraced under the act of the — March, 1833, and was entitled under that act to two quarter quarter sections, at the minimum price of the government; and that he, the said Mabray, did actually prove his claim, and presented it to the officers at Chocchuma previous to the sales in November, 1833, and the officers there would have nothing to do with the affidavit, saying that they had no instructions to act on such claims, (which affidavit is now either lost or mislaid,) which land was offered and sold from him, the said Mabray, and he is, therefore, induced to ask Congress, at least, to admit him the right to locate eighty or one hundred and sixty acres elsewhere in his land district, at the minimum price of the government, thinking that the general government will grant relief to an injured settler when injured by her public officers.

We, whose names are hereunto annexed, being personally acquainted with David Mabray, and knowing to the facts stated in the testimony as given above, know it to be entitled to due credit. Given under our hands this 24th December, 1834.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Tallahatchie County:

I do solemnly swear that I was an actual settler and a housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz., lots six and ten of township number twenty-two, in range five east, and intended to apply to the register and receiver at Chocchuma, prior to the public sale of said lands, and prior to any appropriation of the same, in October last, under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,'" which would have included my improvements. I settled on said tract of land about the first day of March, 1832, and made valuable improvements. My testimony was drawn up, but was not presented to the register and receiver, in consequence of a decision by these officers that the Choctaw lands were not public lands within the meaning of the act aforesaid, and that the said act did not apply to those lands; by which means I was deprived of the benefits of said act. A floating reservation, granted by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek to John Donly, was located on said tract of land so claimed by me. My improvements I value at four thousand five hundred dollars; but the loss which I have in fact sustained by the decision of the officers, is much more than that sum. It has become an important town site, and consequently of great value.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Choctaw District:

I do solemnly swear that I am an actual settler and a housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz., the west half of the southeast quarter of section four, township twenty-three, range five east, and hereby apply to enter the west half of the southeast quarter of said section, under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,'" which will include my improvements. And I do further swear that I have not entered under this act, or under the act of the 5th April, 1832, to which it is supplemental, at this or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter sections, in my own name, or in the name of any other person.

Ives, before the land sales at Chocchuma, which commenced the 21st October, 1833, and requested the register to reserve his land under previous acts of Congress, but was informed he did not think that he was authorized to do so. Further, that the quarter section on which he resided was taken by another claim. He made considerable improvements, which enhanced the value of the land considerably. He further says, he was the first settler on the said land, to wit: the S. E. quarter of section 19, township 24, range 6 east, and that he had not entered any lands under the pre-emption laws of the United States, either in quarters or eighths. He now prays that he may have the privilege of taking 160 acres of vacant and unappropriated lands belonging to the government, at the minimum price, and have the usual time of two years to pay for the same. DECEMBER 25, 1834.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Yallabusha County:

This day personally appeared before me, Murdoch Ray, Esq., an acting justice of the peace in and for the above county, Stephen Smith, and made oath, in due form of law, that he was a settler on public lands of the United States in the year 1833, and that his land on which he resided previous to the land sales at Chocchuma was floated, and that he has not had the privilege of other settlers on public lands of the United States, under the pre-emption laws of Congress, granting to first settlers the right of pre-emption; his residence was on the nineteenth section, S. E. quarter, township twenty-four, range six east. He only asks the privilege of taking one hundred and sixty acres by pre-emption on unappropriated lands of the United States in this district.

STEPHEN SMITH.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 1st day of January, 1835.

MURDOCH RAY, J. P.

We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, are personally acquainted with Stephen Smith, and believe the facts above stated to be correct and true.

JNO. K. MABRAY.
M. EDWARDS.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The petition of William Stone, the subscriber, of the county of Yallabusha, in the State of Mississippi, respectfully showeth: That your petitioner was an actual settler and housekeeper on a certain tract of land, being part of the territory ceded to the United States by the Choctaw tribe of Indians, by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek; said tract now being, as appears by the maps of the Chocchuma district, the west half of the southwest quarter of section twenty, of township twenty-four, range six, east. That your petitioner was an actual settler and housekeeper on said tract, prior to the 1st of May, 1832; that said tract was not within any survey in time for him to claim the benefit of the act of 5th April, 1832, but that it was surveyed shortly after this last date, as will appear by the records and returns in the General Land Office; whereupon he became fully entitled to a pre-emption of two quarter quarter sections, under the supplementary act of 2d March, 1833. Your petitioner would further state, that he proved up his claim to the above tract, in the form and manner prescribed by a circular from the General Land Office, dated 17th May, 1833, (which papers, from time or accident, are either lost or destroyed;) that he attended at the land office for the Chocchuma district, prior to the land sales of October, 1833, with the proof and money to pay for his land at government price; that the land officers refused to admit his proof and entry, saying that they had no instructions to act in such cases, and that it was the opinion of the department that the Choctaw lands were not subject to pre-emption claims under the above-mentioned acts. Your petitioner would further state, that his farm was put up with other public lands, and sold to some other person, thereby turning your petitioner from his home, and depriving him and his family of the benefits of the great labor and expense which he had undergone in making his improvements.

Your petitioner would now refer your honorable body to the records of the General Land Office, which he confidently believes will show that the opinion of the department has always been that the Choctaw lands were open to pre-emption claims under the acts of Congress of 5th of April, 1832, and 2d March, 1833. Such being the case, and in consideration that your petitioner has been burdened with great expense to provide a home for his family, by purchasing at an advanced price, at second hand; and that he has never been benefited by any pre-emption act, although one of the earliest settlers in this country, your petitioner trusts that, in consideration of the premises, your honorable body, regarding his case, will grant him a float, or pre-emption, or relief in such other shape as to your honorable body may seem fit. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

WM. STONE.

We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, do hereby certify, that we are personally acquainted with William Stone, the subscriber to the above petition; that full faith and credit are to be given to his statement, as in said petition read to us; and, moreover, that we are knowing to the fact, that he did prove up his claim, and present it to the land officers previous to the land sales in October, 1833; and that in this, as in some other like applications made at the same time, the land officers refused to admit the proof and entry.

DAVID MABRAY.

I, Thomas B. Ives, clerk of the circuit court of Yallabusha county, do hereby certify that I was an acting justice of the peace for Holmes county, in the month of October, 1833, and that William Stone, the subscriber to the annexed petition, appeared before me on or about the first of said month, and proved up a pre-emption claim to two quarter quarter sections under an act of Congress of the 2d March, 1833.

Witness my seal of office, this 29th day of December, 1834.

THOMAS B. IVES, Clerk. [L. S.]

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Yallabusha County:

Personally appeared before me, Stephen Smith, justice of the peace for said county and State, William Stone, of said county, and being duly sworn, saith that he is the subscriber to the annexed petition, and that said petition is true in substance and fact.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 30th day of December, A. D., 1834.

STEPHEN SMITH, Justice of the Peace of said county.

I do hereby certify that the above-named Stephen Smith is at this time, and was at the date of the above affidavit, an acting justice of the peace in and for Yallabusha county, Mississippi, and that full faith and credit are to be given to his official acts.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto put my private seal, having no seal of office, this 5th day of January, A. D., 1835.

D. M. RAYBURN, Clerk. [SEAL.]

I, Matthew Clanton, judge of probate for Yallabusha county, in the State of Mississippi, do hereby certify that the above named D. M. Rayburn is, and was at the signing of the above certificate, clerk of the probate and police court of said county.

MATHEW CLANTON, Probate Judge.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Choctaw District:

I do solemnly swear that I am an actual setter and a housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz: the east half of the southeast quarter of section 33, township 23, range 4 east, and hereby apply to enter the east half of the southeast quarter of said section, under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,'" which will include my improvement. And I do further swear that I have not entered under this act, or under the act of the 5th April, 1832, to which it is supplemental, at this or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter sections, in my own name, or in the name of any other person.

JNO. W. McLEMORE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, T. B. Ives, an acting justice of the peace of Holmes county, and State aforesaid.

October 17, 1833.

THOS. B. IVES, J. P.

The State of Mississippi, Yallabusha County:

Personally appeared before me, Stephen Smith, an acting justice of the peace for the county and State aforesaid, John W. McLemore, and made oath that the above described land in his affidavit was, at the land sales at Chocchuma, run on him to twenty-two dollars and sixty-five cents per acre; which amount of money he was not able to pay, and was compelled to forfeit the land. It was then put up a second time, and bought in by Mr. Ellis, (one of the commissioners for the land company,) at one dollar and thirty-five cents per acre, who promised to assign or transfer the certificate to the settler, at whatever he might buy it, (that being an article of agreement between the land company and settlers;) and, after keeping him, the settler, at the office four or five days in suspense, the commmissioners decided that they would not make any such transfers, who were Thos. G. Ellis, M. Gilcrees, Robt. J. Walker, and ——— Jimerson. They then put up the land (which he, the said McLemore, was justly entitled to) at their own sales, and sold it for twenty dollars per acre.

The said McLemore, therefore, submits his claim to the Congress of the United States, thinking that body, if not in their power to give him the land described in his affidavit, will at least permit him to enter either 80 or 160 acres elsewhere in the land district, at the minimum price of the government.

The State of Mississippi, Yallabusha County:

Personally appeared before me, Stephen Smith, an acting justice of the peace for the county and State aforesaid, Abel Beaty, and made oath that he was present at Elliot, when the register and receiver were there stationed, on the day that John W. McLemore's affidavit was dated, and saw said McLemore make a tender of his affidavit, with the money to pay his land, out of the office, and they, the officers, refused to take either, saying they had no instructions under which they could act in that case.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR AN EXTENSION OF THE PRE-EMPTION LAWS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 4, 1835.

Whereas, A large number of our citizens are now living on public lands that were unsurveyed at the date of their location; and, whereas, a still greater number are settlers on lands to which the surveys have not been extended; and, whereas, the existing pre-emption laws are based on legal subdivisions, and therefore do not extend the benefits contemplated by the existing laws to the settlers above enumerated; therefore

Resolved, By the general assembly of the State of Illinois, that our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested to use their exertions, to secure the passage of a law extending to settlers on public lands that were surveyed subsequent to their settlement, the privilege of entering one hundred and sixty acres in eighty or forty acre tracts, or either or both, under the pre-emption privilege, so as to secure their improvements, where the same has been divided by the lines of the public surveys.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS, FOR THE CORRECTION OF AN ERROR IN A LAND ENTRY, BY DANIEL MALONE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 4, 1835.

Whereas, It has been satisfactorily represented to the present general assembly, that on the 21st day of November, 1829, Daniel Malone, of Perry county, State of Illinois, employed one John Brown, now deceased, as his agent, to enter for him at the land office at Kaskaskia, in said State, the west half of the northeast quarter of section numbered 35, in township numbered 6, south of range numbered 3, west of the 3d principal meridian; and that said Brown entered by mistake, the west half of the northeast quarter, of section numbered 35, in township numbered 4, south of range numbered 3, west of the 3d principal meridian; and that the land thus entered by mistake, is worthless and totally unfit for cultivation; and whereas, the said Malone has applied to the register of the land office aforesaid, to have said mistake corrected, without success, and will suffer considerable loss without relief, therefore,

Resolved, By the senate and house of representatives of the general assembly of Illinois, that our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their exertions to procure the passage of a law, authorizing the said Malone to relinquish to the government the half quarter section of land thus entered by mistake, and to enter the one upon which he has made his improvement, and which was intended to have been entered by his said agent, as aforesaid.

Resolved, That they be further instructed and requested to procure the passage of a general law upon this subject, by which any person may be relieved under like circumstances, by making satisfactory proof by his own affidavit, or otherwise, at the proper land office, and where such entries have been patented, that in such cases the error may be corrected, by making the like proof to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under such regulations and restrictions as may be deemed necessary to prevent the practice of fraud.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR PERMISSION TO RELINQUISH THE SIXTEENTH SECTIONS WHEN WORTHLESS, AND SELECT OTHER LANDS IN LIEU THEREOF.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 4, 1835.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Illinois would respectfully represent: That the benevolent object of the grant, made by the Congress of the United States to the State of Illinois, of "section numbered sixteen in every township, for the use of the inhabitants of such township for the use of schools," must necessarily be frustrated in many instances by the impracticability of reducing the soil to cultivation. Many of the sections thus designated are sterile, situate in morasses, or otherwise unfit for cultivation, and barren of other resources. And this general assembly, believing that the enlightened policy of the nation will look more to the object of the grant than to its exact terms, indulge the hope that you will permit other tracts, possessing the qualities essential to render them of value, and which will afford the means of promoting the great object of the original grant, to be substituted for those which have been found valueless and unavailable for the purposes designed both by the United States and by this State.

Your memorialists therefore respectfully pray the passage of a law authorizing the selection of other sections in lieu of such sections numbered section sixteen as may be found valueless and unavailable for the purposes designated in the grant.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR A RAILROAD FROM SHAWNEETOWN TO ST. LOUIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 4, 1835.

(Copy.)

Whereas, All that portion of the public domain lying within the limits of Shawneetown and Kaskaskia land districts, has been in market now for twenty years, and much of these lands has been sold by the government, and the best selections have long since been made; and whereas, that portion of the State of Illinois was many years ago the only inhabited part of the State, but that since that time emigration has advanced northward, and public attention has more than ordinarily been drawn towards the northern section of this growing State, and while this has been going on, the eyes of Congress seem to have been turned almost exclusively to the contemplation of the magic like march of that enchanting land, delighted at the progress of things there, it is not unkind or selfish to call the attention of Congress to that old and almost forgotten germ of the State. While public works of vast magnitude and importance, are progressing in other sections of the State, that seem to have every fertility of soil, and innumerable advantages, thus increasing the demand for the public domain, and enhancing the value of property, this section has comparatively stood still; and, whereas, the country between Shawneetown and St. Louis, and that whole section of the State, might be vastly benefited by a donation of land to aid in the construction of a road from Shawneetown, through Franklin county, to St. Louis,

Resolved, That the senators of this State, in Congress, are hereby instructed, and our representatives requested, to procure the passage of a law granting certain lands to aid in the construction of a road leading from Shawneetown, through Franklin county, to St. Louis.

Resolved, That by such a grant of land, many advantages would accrue to that section of the country, in the increase of transportation facilities, and the accession of population, and that, also, it would tend to develop the resources of that region of the country, by giving life and activity to commerce and agriculture, and be the means of increasing the demand and sale of the public domain, in all those land districts before mentioned.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR A CANAL OR RAILROAD FROM LAKE MICHIGAN TO THE ILLINOIS RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 4, 1835.

Resolved by the general assembly of Illinois, That our senators and representatives in Congress, be requested to use their influence to procure the passage of a law of Congress granting to this State the reserved alternate sections of land on the canal route from lake Michigan to the Illinois river, for the purpose of further aiding this State in constructing a canal or railway between said lake and the Illinois river.

Resolved, That they be requested to use their influence, should such a law pass, so to guard it with provisions, that the State may use the lands herself in making the work, or dispose of them to a company upon such terms as the legislature may provide, in order to insure the accomplishment of the work as speedily as possible.

Resolved, That should they not be able to procure an unconditional grant of said land to the State, then they are hereby requested to use their exertions to procure the passage of a law containing a pledge that, if the State will cause the work to be completed by the State, or a company, within ten years next after the passage of such an act, the title to the said alternate sections shall rest in the State or her grantees.

Resolved, That, if they cannot procure the grant to be made upon either of the terms above, that then they use their influence to obtain for the State a preference in the purchase of those lands at a reasonable price for the whole, allowing to the State a reasonable credit for the same, and that they include in one law, which they may procure the passage of relating to the canal, the military reservation, or fractional section of land on which Fort Dearborn, at Chicago, stands.

Resolved further, That they use their exertions to except from the operation of any pre-emption law those reserved alternate sections on the canal route.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 5, 1835.

Mr. Black, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of William Stringer, reported:

That it appears that Francis Stringer, deceased, the father of the petitioner, was a resident in the Mississippi Territory on the third day of March, 1803, and that he did, in pursuance of an act of Congress of that date, make application to the commissioners appointed to allow and adjudge claims under the different provisions of that act, for a donation of certain lands on the Tombecbee river. The claim was presented under the second section of the above-mentioned act, which provided that to each person, being either the head of a family or twenty-one years of age, who did on that day of the year 1797 on which the Spanish troops evacuated the territory, actually inhabit and cultivate a tract of land, such tract of land should be granted, not exceeding six hundred and forty acres; such tract not being subject to other claims to which preference is given by the act. No testimony is offered by the petitioner which is new except the affidavit of a witness who was present when the claim was decided on by the board of commissioners. He states that, on the claim being called up, it was mentioned by some that the granting to Mr. Stringer a whole section would be contrary to his interest, inasmuch as he would be unable to pay for it, that, for reason which he does not know or understand, a pre-emption right to a quarter section was ultimately granted. By reference to the proceedings of the board of commissioners, we find the claim of Francis Stringer thus noticed—American State Papers, title Public Lands, page 676:

"MARCH 21, 1804.

"Francis Stringer's claim for six hundred and forty acres under the second section of the act.

"Thomas Bassett, sworn, said: That Francis Stringer settled and built upon the land now claimed in the month of February, of the year 1798. I do not recollect that he made a crop on the premises in that year, but he cleared some land; that from the year 1798 until the present time he continued to cultivate the land now in question.

"The case was postponed for further consideration."

Page 717—"John Collier, Esq., sworn, says:

"That in the month of January or February, 1798, he assisted Francis Stringer to erect a house on the land he now claims; that he believed he got into it with his family in the month of February, and had continued to live and cultivate there ever since; and, he believed, made a crop on the same land in the year 1798: he also states Stringer was twenty-one years of age, and the head of a family.

"On due consideration, the board is of opinion that this claim is not supported agreeably to the requirements of the law, but that the claimant may be entitled under the 3d section of the act to a right of pre-emption to six hundred and forty acres of land, to be located as follows, viz: beginning on the west margin of the Tombecbee river, at the upper corner of John Dean's six hundred and forty acre pre-emption, thence with said Dean's line due west to his northwest corner, thence due north forty-three chains eighty links, then due east to said river, thence down the margin of the same to the place of beginning."

"On further investigation and consideration, the board is of opinion that the claim may be located as follows, viz: That a square tract of one hundred and sixty acres, running due north, due east, due south, and due west, shall include the present gin-house of the claimant, in the centre thereof."

It will be recollected that, subsequently to these proceedings, it was discovered that Congress had been mistaken in fixing, in second section of the act of 1803, the time of the evacuation of the Mississippi territory by the Spanish troops, on some day in the year 1797, inasmuch as the evacuation did not, in fact, take place until the 29th day of March, 1798. To correct this, the act of 21st April, 1806, section 4, provided that, in all cases where pre-emption certificates had been granted, under the third section of the act of 1803, on account of habitation and cultivation prior to 30th March, 1798, such certificate should, on application within a fixed period, be changed into donation certificates. And it was further provided, by the act 31st March, 1808, section 2d, that, where payments on such pre-emption certificates had been made, the money should be refunded.

Against these proceedings of the board of commissioners two complaints are now urged, for the correction and redress of which the interposition of Congress is asked. First: That the claim was incorrectly located, having been put in the pine woods, upon land of inferior quality, where Francis Stringer, deceased, had a summer residence, instead of being located on the river Tombecbee, where he had a valuable field and ferry.

Second: That six hundred and forty acres should have been granted to him as pre-emption, under the 3d section of the act of 1803. In the location, both of donation and pre-emption claims, the commissioners were governed by the proof. The claim to no tract could be allowed, unless it was both inhabited and cultivated. It does not appear, by positive proof, that Francis Stringer did reside upon the land on the Tombecbee river, upon which he had the clearing, and attached to which he had a ferry, which he considered as most valuable, and wished to locate. It is true, a witness states that his summer residence was on the pine land, for which the certificate was granted, which he says is poor and of little value, but for anything which appears his winter residence may have been there also, or may not have been upon the tract which he wished to have granted to him on the river. Nor is it shown that this land was not claimed by any one having a claim preferred to his by the same act of Congress, viz: by British or Spanish grant, or by habitation and cultivation, prior to the day on which the Spanish troops evacuated the country, fixed by the act on some day of the year 1797; but, without pointing out each point of deficiency of proof to authorize any interference in this particular case, your committee think that these locations having been made by legally authorized agents of the government, they cannot, particularly at this distance of time, undertake corrections. The difficulty of the task—the necessary want of full information in each case—are insurmountable obstacles to such an undertaking. If any injustice had been done, proper place to seek redress was at the department having control of the public lands.

It appears, by the first decision of the board, that the pre-emption claim of Francis Stringer was allowed for six hundred and forty acres, to be located on the river; subsequently it was determined to grant a certificate for one hundred and sixty acres, to include the gin-house of the claimant. From this it is fairly inferable that this alteration in the quantity of the land, and the location, was at Mr. Stringer's own solicitation. It appears natural that he should prefer to make his valuable buildings secure, and risk the sales for his cleared land on the river. This also accounts satisfactorily for his getting a certificate for one hundred and sixty acres instead of six hundred and forty. Many settlers did not want so great a quantity of land as a section; and we accordingly find, on examining the record of the proceedings, a great number of the claimants took less than six hundred and forty acres. They were privileged to claim that much, but it was an advantage which they might waive if they thought proper. They might also take less.

The board of commissioners acting in 1804, in the construction which they gave the 2d section of the act of 1803, which secured to each person of twenty-one years of age, or head of a family, actually inhabiting and cultivating a tract on the day in 1797 on which the Spanish troops evacuated the territory, a donation of such tract of land, confined the settler to proof of habitation and cultivation in the year mentioned in the act, viz: 1797. Your committee are of opinion that a just and true construction of the act of 1803 would have authorized the allowance of donations up to the time the evacuation actually occurred, 29th March, 1798, the true intent and meaning of the act of Congress being, to each settler's coming within the other provisions, a donation up to the time of such evacuation; the actual time should have been regarded, instead of the time supposed in the act. If, under an incorrect decision of the law, it was determined that Mr. Stringer was only entitled to a pre-emption when he was entitled to a donation, and he acting under a mistake as to his legal rights, finding himself only entitled to a pre-emption certificate, accepted it for a small quantity of land, it would appear to be just and proper that he should be relieved from the consequences of such error. This it is competent for Congress alone to do, inasmuch as the act of 1806 only authorized the pre-emption certificates which had been granted into donation certificates in the cases before mentioned. These certificates could not be enlarged. This brings us to the inquiry, was he entitled to a donation by actually inhabiting and cultivating a tract of land prior to the 30th March, 1798? It appears that Francis Stringer settled upon the land to which he made claim in February of that year, but there is no proof whatever of any act of cultivation prior to 30th March, and there is every presumption that there was none.

Your committee, therefore, recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition is unreasonable, and ought not to be granted.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1313. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 5, 1835.

Mr. BLACK, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of John B. Toulmin, reported:

That the petitioner prays to be confirmed to a town lot in the city of Mobile, on account of having built upon, occupied and inhabited the same prior to the 15th April, 1813. By an act of Congress of 3d March, 1819, commissioners were appointed to allow and receive evidence of this class of claims. Their report was confirmed by an act 8th May, 1822, by which the claimants of lots in the town of Mobile, under similar circumstances, were confirmed in their title. By an act of 3d March, 1827, these claims were again opened, and the register and receiver of the land office at St. Stephen's were directed to receive additional evidence until the 1st September, 1827. It does not appear that the petitioner made any attempt to avail himself of the advantages of any of the provisions made by these several acts of Congress; nor does he assign any reason for not having done so. The committee are of opinion that they ought not, under these circumstances, to go into the investigation of this claim. If it be once established that claims under such circumstances are to be allowed, the committee would in a short time have on their hands as much labor as any board of commissioners have had. The testimony must be by affidavit; they cannot have either the advantage of knowing the witness or examining him. It is easy to foresee that frauds to a great extent will be practiced, by bringing forward specious claims and supporting them by fictitious witnesses, or such as are unworthy of belief. The committee are of opinion that the petitioner, showing no reason which prevented him from availing himself of the benefit of the former acts of Congress, is not entitled to relief, and report the following resolution for adoption:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition is unreasonable, and ought not to be granted.

APPLICATION OF RHODE ISLAND FOR A DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS AMONG THE STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 9, 1835.

State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, in general assembly, January session, A. D. 1835:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this general assembly, it is of great "importance, as it respects both the harmony and union of the States," to make, "as soon as circumstances will allow, a proper disposition of the whole subject of the public lands" of the United States.

2. That a material reduction at the present time of the minimum price at which these lands are offered for sale is inexpedient; and that the relinquishment of them would not only be impolitic, but an act of injustice to the States, inasmuch as a portion of said lands was secured in the possession of the States to which they originally belonged, by the common exertions and sacrifices of the whole country in the war of our revolution; inasmuch as the portion so secured was afterwards ceded to the United States for the common use and benefit of all the States; and inasmuch as all the residue of said lands, comprising the greater part thereof, was paid for by the people of the whole country, out of the treasury of the United States.

3. That the public lands, being now free from all pledges for the payment of the national debt, by the extinguishment of the same, the annual proceeds thereof ought to be divided among the States of the Union, according to their respective federal representative population, as ascertained by the last census, to be applied by the legislatures of the same to public education, and to such other purposes as said legislatures may designate and authorize.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to each of our senators and representatives in Congress; and that they be requested to support the passage of a law in conformity with the opinion herein expressed.

CLAIMS TO CHOCTAW RESERVATIONS OF LAND UNDER THE 14TH ARTICLE OF THE TREATY OF 1830.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 9, 1835.

WASHINGTON, February 6, 1835.

To the House of Representatives:

I submit to Congress a report from the Secretary of War, containing the evidence of certain claims to reservations, under the fourteenth article of the treaty of 1830, with the Choctaws, which the locating agent has reserved from sale, in conformity with instructions from the President, who did not consider himself authorized to direct their location.

Should Congress consider the claims just, it will be proper to pass a law authorizing their location, or satisfying them in some other way.

ANDREW JACKSON.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, February 5, 1835.

SIR: In 1831, the agent for the Choctaws, Colonel William Ward, was instructed to prepare and transmit a register of all persons entitled to reservations under the fourteenth article of the treaty with that tribe, of 27th September, 1830. When the location of these reservations commenced, many claimants appeared, whose names were not upon this register. The number of these applicants having increased, you directed that absolute locations should be made for those only who were registered, but that tracts should be designated on the plats of survey, by the locating agent, and reserved from sale, for all others who should produce probable evidence of being entitled to reservations; and you directed that the agent should report the evidence in each case, to be submitted to Congress. Instructions were accordingly given, in October last, to Colonel George W. Martin, the locating agent, and his report has been received.

I have the honor to lay before you copies of these instructions, of the report of the agent, and the documents that accompanied it, for your examination, to be submitted to Congress if you think proper.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEW. CASS.

To the PRESIDENT.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, October 13, 1834.

SIR: The applications that have, from time to time, been presented to this department by persons claiming reservations under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty, that the sale of the sections they claim may be suspended, have been submitted to the President, who has directed the following instructions to be communicated to you:

In the cases that have been brought to the notice of this department, it has appeared, from the evidence exhibited, that the names of the claimants were registered, and the record has been lost; or, that the record was made on separate slips of paper that cannot now be found; or, that they applied verbally, and were led by the agent to believe that this was a compliance with the treaty; or, that their application to be registered was refused, without sufficient reason.

There has also been evidence exhibited, to show that the agent certified that persons "caused their names to be registered," whose names are not upon the register returned by him. In this state of things, the President deems it to be his duty to modify the order that precluded you from locating sections for persons not upon this register, in order that the parties may have an opportunity to obtain the action of Congress upon their claims.

You will, therefore, give public notice, that persons who consider themselves entitled to reservations under the 14th article, and whose names are not upon the register of Colonel Ward, will exhibit to you the evidence in support of their claims. This evidence must show that they were citizens of the Choctaw nation, heads of families, and did signify their intention to become citizens within the time prescribed by the treaty. It must also show the time of their application to be registered, and the conversation and circumstances relating to it.

If they bring themselves within the requisition of the 14th article, and the evidence induces you to believe that the omission of their names on the register was caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent, you will make locations for them in the manner pointed out in the instructions heretofore given to you. These locations, it must be understood, are contingent, and will be complete only in the event of their being confirmed by Congress.

If the whole or a part of a reservation that may be claimed has been sold, you will designate upon the plats tracts of equal dimensions, and of as nearly equal value as practicable.

The register and receiver of the proper land offices will be instructed to reserve from sale the reservations you may locate under this order, until the views of Congress are ascertained.

The President specially directs that you transmit, in season for the action of Congress at its next session, detailed reports showing the names, standing, and credibility of the witnesses, and all the facts and circumstances in each case, with copies of the papers presented to you, and your communications to the land offices upon this subject.

The execution of these instructions will require your prompt and vigilant attention, that justice may be done to the Indians and the government.

I am, &c., MAHLON DICKERSON, Acting Secretary of War.

Colonel John W. Byrn, sheriff of said county, being called upon to state what he heard Colonel David Fulsom, a Choctaw chief, who has gone west of the Mississippi river, say in relation to the erasure of Choctaw names from the books of Colonel Ward, the late agent, states as follows:

That I believe I heard Colonel Fulsom say that he, Fulsom, had scratched the names of Choctaws off the agent's books, where they had been registered for citizenship and land, under the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, saying "that he wanted them all to go west of the Mississippi river." STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Tallahatchee County:

This day personally appeared before me, Thomas G. Ringgold, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county of Tallahatchee, John T. Hammond, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that at the time of the execution of the Choctaw treaty, on the 27th day of September, 1830, he was, and for some time had been, a citizen of the Choctaw country, in said State; that he has for the last five years been acquainted with Charles Frazier, Nelly Dyer, Rachel Davis, James Perry, Nancy Moore, Moses Perry, Molly Frazier, Moontubbi, Tishopia, and Hala, persons whose names are contained in the annexed schedule of claimants under the 14th article of said treaty. That at the time he became acquainted with them, they were, and have ever since continued to be, citizens of the Choctaw nation. That at the time of the execution of said treaty, on the 27th day of September, 1830, they were all heads of separate families in said Choctaw country. That this deponent knows Moontubbi, one of the persons above named, to be a man of intelligence and credibility, and a head man among the more ignorant Indians of his acquaintance, and believes the certificate of the testimony of said Moontubbi, signed by James Oxberry as interpreter, which this deponent has read, to be strictly true. That he is also acquainted with Garret Nelson, the person mentioned in said certificate as having been deputed to carry the list of names taken at the council at John Perry's, to the agency, and have them registered by Colonel Ward, the resident agent. That he knows him to be an intelligent white man, who has long resided in the Choctaw country, and raised a large family of Choctaw children. That he possessed the confidence of the Choctaw people, and having been frequently employed to do their business, this deponent fully believes that he was employed in the manner stated in the annexed certificate of said Moontubbi's testimony. That the said Nelson has removed to the Choctaw country west. That the facts of a council having been held at the house of John Perry, for the purpose stated in said certificate, the mission of Nelson to this agency, and the registry of the said names by the resident agent for the five years, were notorious throughout the neighborhood where the said claimants resided, and near which this deponent resided also, at the time stated in said certificate. That subsequent to the time this registry was reported to have been made, and within six months after the ratification of said treaty, this deponent visited the office of the resident agent, Colonel Ward, for the purpose of registering his own name for the five years' stay. That in looking over a part of the register of the Choctaw claimants, in said office, at that time, he saw the names of said Charles Frazier, Nelly Dyer, Rachel Davis, James Perry, Nancy Moore, Moses Perry, Molly Frazier, Moontubbi, Tishopia, and Hala, duly registered, with the names of their children, for the five years' stay, under the 14th article of said treaty, with the names of many other persons whom this deponent does not now recollect, which names this deponent was informed by said agent, Colonel Ward, were registered upon the application of the said Garret Nelson. That Enos Ward and Samuel Allen, who accompanied this deponent, and who also saw the names seen by this deponent on said register, have removed to the Choctaw country west. And this deponent further saith, that at the time Colonel Armstrong, the agent sent to examine the Choctaw improvements, visited the country, and took an account of the quantity of land this deponent had in cultivation, he informed said agent that he had registered his name for the five years' stay under the 14th article of the treaty, and did not wish to be registered as a claimant by cultivation; and that he was answered by said agent, that the object in taking an account of his improvements was not to return his name as a claimant by cultivation, but merely to ascertain what portion of the Choctaw country was under cultivation. That when the locating agent, Colonel Martin, appeared in the country, this deponent learned, for the first time, that his name was not returned as registered for the five years' stay; and being informed that he could locate one eighth for cultivation, and supposing it was all he could get, was induced to take it. And this deponent verily believes that James Perry, Rachel Davis, Moontubbi, Nancy Moore, and Tishopia, four of the persons named in the annexed schedule, were induced to have the said James one section, the said Rachel half section, and the said Moontubbi, Nancy Moore, and Tishopia, one-eighth of a section each, reserved for the same cause. And this deponent further saith that he has been informed, and verily believes, that all the persons whose names are contained in the annexed schedule of claimants, except himself, were present at the council of Indians at John Perry's, gave in their names to be registered for the five years' stay under the 14th article of said treaty, were all duly registered within the time prescribed in said article, by the resident agent, Colonel Ward, were all entitled to hold land under said article as citizens and heads of separate families, have uniformly persisted in the same desire, and have all, as yet, been prevented from locating any land, except the said James Perry, Rachel Davis, Moontubbi, Nancy Moore, and Tishopia, who were induced to receive the above-mentioned quantities, under the full impression that they could not hope for more. And further this deponent saith not.

We, Reuben H. Grant and Jefferson Clements, having been called upon to state what we know in relation to the conduct and capacity of Colonel William Ward, late agent for the registration of certain Indians or Choctaws, under the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, for citizenship and land, state as follows, to wit: We have been frequently present when the Indians made application to the agent, Colonel Ward, to register themselves to take citizenship and receive land, under the provisions of the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and before the expiration of six months after the ratification of said treaty, and have known the agent, Colonel Ward, to refuse and reject a good number of applicants, "saying that they might go west of the Mississippi river;" that it would be better for them. Being requested, we further state that the agent, Colonel Ward, was frequently incapable of attending to business, from intoxication, and, when not intoxicated, was so negligent and careless that any persons who wished books and papers, did pretty much as they pleased with them; and that said agent was much opposed to the Indians availing themselves of the advantages of the fourteenth article of the treaty aforesaid.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

This 5th day of December, 1834, Major John Pitchlynn, being summoned before me, the subscribing justice of the peace for Lowndes county, for the purpose of being examined touching the applications made to the late Choctaw agent to register certain names for citizenship and lands, under the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, after being duly sworn, deposeth and saith as follows, to wit, as set forth in his answers:

Question. Do you know it to be a fact, that Choctaws have often made application to the late agent, Colonel Ward, to have their names registered for citizenship and lands, under the fourteenth article of the treaty; that he duly received and entered these names; and yet that such names so tendered and registered were not afterwards to be found on his books?

Answer. I have often heard it said that there are many such instances, but, of my own personal knowledge, I only recollect one case. That case was as follows: Within the six months after the ratification of the treaty, at the earnest request of two Indian women, one named Hi-a-cau-ta-na, a widow woman, with two children over ten years of age, and the other E-li-ah, a widow, with one child over ten, I acted as spokesman to the agent for them, and gave in their names, the number and ages of their children, and the place of their residence, which was on a creek called "Trimmed Cane." He wrote the whole down in my presence, in his books, but afterwards it turned out that those names were not to be found in his returns; and the consequence was, that these women lost their lands, which were very good and valuable lands. They were sold at the first land sales.

I now recollect another case of the kind, that came to my knowledge. I mean the case of Red Pepper. His name had been duly registered, and by some person afterwards erased. He proved this, made application to Congress, and obtained relief.

And further this deponent saith not.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

I, Grabel Lincicum, of Oktibbeha county, in said State of Mississippi, being called upon to state on oath what I know respecting an application made by certain Choctaw Indians living on the head waters of Pearl, Leaf and Suckenatchie rivers, to William Ward, late Choctaw agent, to enter their names and families as citizens, and take lands under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek, do declare and say as follows, viz: That I was present at the assemblage of Indians, I think in the month of June, 1831, called together at the council house near the agency, as I understood, for the purpose of giving all such Indians as did not wish to emigrate, a chance of registering their names, as provided for in the treaty. I distinctly recollect that a certain Indian, I think it was Captain Post Oak, came forward with a bundle of sticks in his hand, acting as spokesman for the Indians living down on the head waters of the Pearl, Leaf and Suckenatchie rivers, and handed them in, as showing the families that wished to register in that district. The sticks were handed to the agent, and his words explained by the interpreter. The agent took the sticks, and then threw them away, saying that there were too many of them, and that the Indians ought or must move away. When this was explained to the Indians by the interpreter, they were much hurt at it, and showed very great dissatisfaction; and it was not what they had been promised at Dancing Rabbit creek, and in the treaty. They said they would go home and live five years on their lands, as they had confidence that the government would not turn them off, since they were promised at Dancing Rabbit creek, by the commissioners, and it was put down in the treaty, that they might stay and have their lands, and not be forced to move over the Mississippi. Many of them said they would die first, before they would move. This transaction gave rise to a good deal of excitement among many of the persons present, and it was looked on as a violation of the treaty. The Indians on whose behalf this tender of registration was made, live on the head branches of Pearl, Leaf and Suckenatchie rivers, a good deal cut off from other parts of the nation, and did not seem to have any of the better informed and more active leaders to stand up for them.

Question. How did you come in possession of this book or list of names, now delivered to the justice, to be attached to your deposition?

Answer. When Col. William Ward, late Choctaw agent, was about to break up and remove from the agency, he had a vendue of his goods and effects; at that vendue he put up a lot of books and papers, and some sort of lumber or other, which I bid for, and which was knocked down to me; in this lot of things I found this book.

Question. Do you recognize this to be one of Col. Ward's books in which he registered the names of Indians under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek?

Answer. Yes. It is very evident that this is one of the agent's books in which he entered the names of the Indians; this seems to be a book used principally for entering the names of orphans. The names are not in Col. Ward's hand; they are in the hand of his brother, Stephen Ward, an assistant, but the closing part and the signature, I believe, is in the agent's own hand.

Question. Do you know whether the names contained in this book are to be found in the agent's general book; that is, the one returned to the government?

Answer. I have examined the general book in the office at Columbus, with this book before me; and I cannot find that the names have been transferred, with the exception of one or two, which may have been elsewhere given in.

And further this deponent saith not.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Tallahatchee County:

This day personally appeared before me, Thomas G. Ringgold, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county, James Oxberry, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that for the last fifteen years he has constantly resided in the Choctaw country, in said State; that, for the last five years, he has been acquainted with all the persons named as claimants in the annexed schedule of claimants, many of whom he has known for the last ten years; that, at the time he became acquainted with them, they were, and have ever since continued to be, citizens of the Choctaw country, in the said State; that, at the time of the execution of the late Choctaw treaty, on the 27th September, 1830, they were all heads of separate families in said Choctaw country; that he has recently seen all of them except two, and conversed with them in relation to the registry of their names, and the names of their children, with intention of becoming citizens of said State, under the 14th article of said treaty, examining such of them as cannot speak English, in the Choctaw language, and that they all concurred in giving the following account of their proceedings in this matter, viz: That, previous to the 1st June, 1831, a council was held at the house of John Perry, in said Choctaw nation, for the purpose of making up a list or registry of all such heads of families, containing their names and the names of their children, and their ages, as wished to become citizens of the State, and take their lands under the 14th article of the treaty, by remaining five years upon the places where they then resided, and had improvements; that at this council the names of the persons named as claimants in the annexed schedule were all given in, and taken down in writing, by Garret Nelson, except the name of John T. Hammond; that said Nelson was deputed by said claimants, and others whose names were given in at the same time, to go on to the office of the resident agent, Col. Ward, and have them duly registered for the five years' stay; that they always understood, until application was made to the treating agent, Col. Martin, to locate their lands, that their names, and the names of their children, were properly registered, and had been regularly forwarded to the proper office at Washington; that at the last public sales their lands were all sold, except the lands of Charles Frazier, Nancy Frazier, Polly Frazier, and part of Nelly Dyer's, which have not yet been offered for sale; that they have consequently been compelled to leave their places of former residence, but are still remaining in the country with the hope of obtaining lands, being desirous of becoming citizens of the State, and complying in all things with the requisitions contained in the 14th article of the treaty. And this deponent further saith that he obtained from said Garret Nelson, previous to his leaving this country and removing west, a transcript of part of the list of names made by said Nelson at said council, upon which transcript are found most of the names contained in the annexed schedule of claimants, and was at that time informed by said Nelson that he presented to the resident agent, Col. Ward, on the 1st day of June, 1831, the original and full list of all the names taken down at said council, and that the names upon the said list were duly registered by said agent as claimants under the 14th article of said treaty. And this deponent further saith that he visited the office of said agent, Col. Ward, some time after said Nelson had given in said list of names to be registered, and within six months after the ratification of said treaty; and in looking over a part of the register of Choctaw claimants in said agent's office, saw the names of the greater part of the persons whose names are embraced in the annexed schedule, duly registered for the five years' stay; and this deponent verily believes that all the names embraced in the annexed schedule, together with many others, were sent on by said Nelson, and by him given in to the resident agent, Col. Ward, who received and registered them as applicants for lands under the 14th article of the treaty, and that the account of the affair given by the persons whose names are contained in the annexed schedule, in the annexed testimony of Moontubbi, and by the said Nelson, is strictly true; that the object of this deponent, in looking over a part of said register in said agent's office was to ascertain whether his relations were duly registered, many of whose names are contained in the annexed schedule, and were seen by this deponent on said agent's register, having been given in by said Nelson. And this deponent further saith that he saw the name of John T. Hammond, one of the persons named in the annexed schedule, and the only one who was not present at the council at John Perry's, on the register of said agent, Col. Ward, as a claimant under the 14th article of the treaty, at the time aforesaid. And this deponent further saith that said Nelson has removed from this country to the Choctaw country west, and that William Thompson, the only person who visited the agency in company with this deponent, and looked over with him a part of the registry in said office, has also removed west; and this deponent knows of no person except said Nelson, by whom the fact of the registry of said names in said list contained can be positively proven. And this deponent further saith that, at the time he looked over a part of said registry as aforesaid, and saw the names of part of the persons mentioned in the annexed schedule, he inquired of said agent who had given them in, and was answered by said agent that they were registered upon the application of said Nelson. And this deponent further saith that he examined the said Moontubbi and Tishopia in the Choctaw language, and conversed with the said John T. Hammond, James Perry, and Nancy Moore, in the English language, on the subject of their reserves, and was told by them that, upon being informed that they would not be entitled to the lands under 14th article of the treaty, in consequence of their names not being returned to the office at Washington, they were induced to take, the said James Perry one section, and the said John T. Hammond, Moontubbi, Tishopia, and Nancy Moore, each one eighth of land, to which they were told they were entitled by cultivation, which this deponent verily believes to be true; and that the same consideration influenced Rachel Davis to take half a section. And this deponent further saith that he has long been acquainted with Moontubbi; that he is intelligent and highly credible; and having long been a head man among his people, and transacted business for them, this deponent verily believes the testimony given by said Moontubbi, and interpreted by him, to be strictly true. And further this deponent saith not.

JAMES OXBERRY.

THOMAS G. RINGGOLD, Justice of the Peace.

Moontubbi, a Choctaw Indian, states that he attended a council of Indians held at the house of John Perry, residing in the Choctaw nation, previous to the 1st day of June, 1831, for the purpose of making out a list of persons who intended to become citizens of the State, and take a five years' stay under the 14th article of the late Choctaw treaty, and that the business of the council was in part entrusted to his management, and that he proceeded in the following manner, viz: Having marked a line, and placed the people all on one side, he told them that all such heads of families as wished to become citizens, should cross the line, and place themselves on the other side; that immediately all the persons in the annexed schedule named, (except John T. Hammond, who was not present at the council,) with many others, crossed the line, and expressed their determination to become citizens; that their names, and the names of their children, were then taken down in writing, and the list of them handed to Garret Nelson, who was deputed to go on to the agency, and have them registered for the five years' stay; that he always supposed they would hold the land they were registered for, until informed that their names were not on the books at Washington; that the lands of all of them were sold, except that of Charles Frazier, and part of that of Nelly Dyer, whose lands have not yet been offered for sale, but whose names have been lost with the rest, as he is informed; and except, also, a section for James Perry, half a section for Rachel Davis, and an eighth of a section, each, for himself, Nancy Moore, and Tishopia, which were reserved without their request or wish, as they still wish and intend to become citizens, and although driven from their former residences, to remain in the country. Taken this 15th day of November, 1834, by me, as the interpreter of Col. Martin.

JAMES OXBERRY.

We certify that we have, for about a year past, been acquainted with John T. Hammond and James Oxberry, who have, during that time, resided in the neighborhood of this place; and we have no hesitation in saying that we consider them highly credible and intelligent men, and worthy of all confidence.

He understood the Suckenatchie Indians, otherwise the warriors of the Little Leader, to be there, many of whom he was acquainted with, for the purpose of registering their names, and saw several families going up and coming down the stairs; did not see any of their names, but believes all of them to have been registered, as he understood that to be their business, and knows them to have been anxious to do so.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Sumpter County:

Personally appeared before me, Philip L. Grover, an acting justice of the peace for the county aforesaid, Matthew Seabronch and Benjamin F. Bullock, who, being first duly sworn, depose and say, that they were at the place called the Old Factory, at the time of the distribution of the Choctaw annuity, in 1831; that Colonel Ward was there for the purpose, as they understood, of registering their (the Choctaw) names, under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty, concluded at Dancing Rabbit creek the 27th day of September, 1830; that they saw many of the Suckenatchie Indians there, whose business, they understood from them, was, to register their names under the article of the treaty above mentioned, and that they believe many of them to have registered, as they were anxious for so doing.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Sumpter County:

I, Daniel Wormack, clerk of the county court of Sumpter county, do hereby certify that Philip L. Grover, whose name appears to the foregoing affidavits, is an acting justice for said county, and was at the time of signing and transacting the same; and that full faith and credit is due his official acts as such.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and affixed the seal of the county of Sumpter, this 27th day of November, A. D. 1834.

DANIEL WORMACK, Clerk. [SEAL.]

The foregoing is a true copy of the several affidavits annexed, the originals being placed on file in my office.

GEO. W. MARTIN, L. Agent.

CHOCCHUMA, December 29, 1834.

From information, I am induced to believe that John Jones and John B. Hancock are credible witnesses, and that what I know of B. F. Bullock, I believe him fully entitled to credit.

No. 8.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

Ho-pi-es-ka-te-ne, or the "Little Leader," being summoned to state what he knows respecting the registration of the names of certain Choctaws, living on Sook-e-nock-e, to become citizens and hold their lands as provided for in the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, deposeth and saith as follows, to wit: That, within six months from the ratification of the treaty, he went with certain Choctaw Indians, living on the waters of Sook-e-nock-e, to the Old Factory, where the agent, Colonel Ward, was to attend to distribute the annuity, and to receive and register names of such as were unwilling to emigrate, but wished to stay and become citizens, and hold their lands. He says that he sat near Colonel Ward, and assisted to give the names and numbers of children, as the Indians came up, one at a time; that, when the agent got through with one, he would go away, and another would come up; that he (the agent) wrote all their names down on paper, as also the number and ages of their children.

He further states that, before they got through registering all the names, the agent got up from his seat, and said they must stop and go to distributing the annuity, otherwise it would be too late, and that those present who wished to register must come up to the agency. He then put up the paper on which he had written the names, and stuck it in his pocket, and went off to drinking and distributing the annuity.

Question. Was the agent intoxicated during that day?

Answer. He acted very much like a drunken man.

Question. What became of those whose names were not then taken down?

Answer. They afterwards went up to the agency, and were recorded, and these are the only ones whose names can now be found on the book; the names of the rest (those taken at the Old Factory) have been lost or destroyed.

Question. Did these people give in their names with the intention of staying here, becoming citizens, and living on their lands?

Answer. Yes, most certainly they did. From the first establishment of the treaty, they declared that they never would go over the Mississippi, but would stay here and become citizens among the white people. He says that himself, Chap-a-ho-ma, and others counseled with George S. Gaines how they must act to hold their lands, and that they acted according to the advice of Mr. Gaines.

The Little Leader, Chap-a-ho-ma, and two others, here gave in a list of names, for the locating agent, of all of those who then registered and are yet in the country, (omitting those who have since emigrated,) and who now claim their lands under the 14th article of the treaty. And further this deponent saith not.

HO-PI-ES-KA-TE-NE, his + mark.

Major John Pitchlynn maketh oath that he acted as interpreter in this examination of "the Little Leader," or Ho-pi-es-ka-te-ne, and that the above deposition truly sets forth the facts stated by him, and the answers given to the questions proposed to him.

JOHN PITCHLYNN.

John Carter, of Kemper county, being also called on to state what he knows respecting said Indians, deposeth and saith as follows, as is set forth in his answers:

Question. Do you reside near the Sook-e-nock-e Indians, and, if so, what is their condition?

Answer. I do reside near them. These Indians, being a remnant of the Sook-e-nock-e settlement, claim to be entitled to lands under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek; they say that they gave in their names to the agent. In various instances white settlers have come in, driven them out of their houses and off their lands, and taken possession of both. In some cases, where these Indians have spoken up for their rights, these intruders have beaten and abused them very much. I have seen Indians with the marks of violence on their persons a good while after they were inflicted. In some cases the best lands of these people have been taken away from them, and covered with pre-emption rights. These Indians are civil, peaceable, and inoffensive people, who interrupt no person, and seem only to want their lands and possessions. Further this deponent saith not.

JOHN CARTER.

John Walker who also resides near the settlement of the Sook-e-nock-e Indians, deposeth and saith as follows: That all these Indians claim their lands under the treaty; they say they gave in their names to the agent at the Old Factory; that he knows, from his own observation, and from general information, that these Indians have been very much intruded upon and ill-treated by certain white men who want their lands. Some of these Indians have been forced off their lands and cruelly treated by these intruders. He says, as he was on his way to Columbus a few weeks ago, an old Indian woman came to him crying and complaining that a man by the name of Yancy had driven her out of her house, and would not even let her dig her potatoes, besides much other ill-usage. He further states that these poor Indians will, in a short time, be deprived of all their good lands unless government shall soon step in and secure their rights. Further this deponent saith not.

No. 9.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

Grant Lincecum, being called on to state what he knows touching an application made to William Ward, late United States agent, by certain Choctaw Indians, to have their names registered according to the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, deposeth and saith as follows, to wit: That he was present at the assembly of Indians, called at the council house near the agency, in June, 1831, for the purpose of distributing the annuity, and of affording to all such Indians as did not wish to emigrate, an opportunity of registering their names to become citizens and hold lands, as provided for under the 14th article of the treaty. He states that when the business of the day was opened, the agent directed the interpreter, Middleton McKee, to tell the Indians that all who did not wish to emigrate had a right, by the treaty, to stay and hold lands, and that he was then ready to receive their names, and register them in his book; all of which the interpreter did make known to the Indians. This deponent further states, that after the business of the day had considerably advanced, and while he was standing near the agent's table noticing what was going on, he saw a parcel of Indians come up, with an Indian they called the Red Post Oak as their spokesman, and one or two others as sort of leaders. One of them had a bundle of sticks in his hand, which he gave in to the agent, and told the interpreter to inform the agent that these sticks represented a number of Indians who were unwilling to go away, and who wished to remain, become citizens, and hold their lands, and that they would give in the names of each head of a family, the number and sizes of their children.

The interpreter explained all this to the agent, who took up the sticks and threw them away, and said there were too many of them, and told the interpreter to tell them that they must move west of the Mississippi.

Question. Did the interpreter tell the Indians what the agent said?

Answer. Yes, he did, and it gave great dissatisfaction to them. Some of them talked a good deal about it, and said it was not what the treaty promised them; they said they would never move away; that the treaty promised them they might stay here and live on their lands if they did not wish to move away. Some of them said they would die before they would go; others said they would go home and live on their lands, for they had confidence that the government would not drive them off. There were some white men present who advised the Indians to go home and stay on their lands, and told them that the government would treat them honestly.

Question. Do you understand the Choctaw language.

Answer. Yes, I understand and speak it very well. I have lived in constant intercourse with the Choctaws for the past twenty odd years.

Question. Is it a common method for the Choctaws to give in and enumerate by sticks in the manner you mentioned?

Answer. They always use sticks, or corn, or something of the sort, to count by; most commonly small sticks.

Question. What became of those Indians after they were repulsed in the manner you stated by the agent?

Answer. They all went to their homes. After a time some of them became discouraged, thinking they could get no lands, and concluded to move off to Arkansas. But others of them still stick to their homes, and say they never will move, but will die first. The last time the emigrating agent was collecting a company to go, one of the sub-agents went among the Indians to get them to go. Finding that persuasions would not do, he used all kinds of threats, and told them, if they did not go, the soldiers would soon come with their muskets and drive them off. About that time I passed through one of their little settlements, and found, in some places, the women and children had left their houses, and fled into the woods and swamps to keep out of the way of the soldiers. They were told that the soldiers were coming with guns and bayonets to drive them off. I told them it was all false, and quieted their fears as well as I could, and they returned to their houses. They have since lived on their lands, except in some cases where white settlers would drive them off and take possession of their houses and lands; and those who occupied good land have generally met with this fate. The coming on of the land sales has alarmed them, as they are told by the whites that their lands will now be sold. This has made them employ counsel, and apply to the government for relief and aid.

Question. Have any of these Indians, to your knowledge, ever received any reservations, such as field or cultivation claims, for their improvements?

Answer. No. I have frequently been among them, and I am very certain that not one of those now applying to Congress ever received any reservations, or other benefits of the treaty. All they wanted was their lands and homes, and they say they wish to become citizens, and live under the white men's laws.

Question. You say that the agent, in the morning when the business opened, gave notice that all who wished might come forward and register, and then, after a time, he refused to register the names offered. How do you account for this conduct?

Answer. All who knew the agent's habits can very easily account for it. In the morning he was sober, and in the evening he was drunk.

Question. Was the agent in the habit of intemperance?

Answer. Hundreds besides myself can answer that question in the affirmative.

Question. Do you recollect of seeing Samuel McGee in May or June, of the year 1831, at the agency give in his name, and did you see the agent register it?

Answer. Yes; I think it was in May, 1831, I was with McGee at the agency, and I saw him give in his name, and saw Colonel Ward enter it down, but I understood that his name was not afterwards to be found, and McGee's land was sold from him at the sales. It was first quality land; he has never yet got any land.

And further this deponent saith not. GRANT LINCECUM.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

Adam James, being called upon to state what he knows respecting the application of certain Choctaw Indians to Mr. Ward, the late agent, to register their names for citizenship and land, under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, deposeth and saith, as set forth in his answers to the following interrogatories, to wit:

Question. Were you present at the meeting of Indians held at the council house near the agency, in the spring of 1831, which was called for the purpose of distributing the annuity, and of receiving names of such as wished to register for citizenship, and to hold their land?

Answer. Yes, I was present at the council or meeting.

Question. Did you see any Indians offer to register their names, and refused by the agent, and their sticks thrown away?

Answer. Yes, I did. I was standing, among others, close by where the agent was, at his table, and saw a number of Indians from the settlements on the head waters of Pearl, Leaf, and Suckenatchie rivers, with Red Post Oak and some other leaders at their head, come up to register. They handed in a bundle of sticks, and said they wished to register the families that those sticks stood for, and that they would give in the names and numbers and ages of the children; they said they would not move off, but wanted to stay here, and live on their lands. When the interpreter, old McKee, told this to the agent, he took the sticks, and flung them away, and said there were too many of these Indians, and that they must move away.

Question. What became of the Indians after this refusal on the part of the agent to take their names?

Answer. They retired very much hurt and dissatisfied, and said it was not what was promised them in the treaty, and by Major Eaton, in his last talk at Dancing Rabbit creek. Old McKee, the interpreter, also said it was a violation of the treaty, and he did not like it, for the agent had made him, in the morning, tell the Indians that all had a right to register and stay here, and hold their lands, if they did not choose to move; and now to turn them off in this way looked very bad, and the Indians might say he did not interpret right.

Question. What became of the Indians?

Answer. They said they would go home and stay on their lands, for they belonged to them. Some said the agent was drunk, and they did not believe the government would take their lands from them; others said they would die rather than go to Arkansas. Since, however, a good many of them have been persuaded to go away, but others still stick to their houses, and say they will never go; they are now in hopes of getting their lands from government, as all that have not moved away are trying to get their lands.

Question. Have the whites intruded on the improvements of these Indians?

Answer Yes, they have, and in many cases taken their good lands from them, and pushed the Indians on the poor land. I understand that a great deal of the best land of the Indians, that was not sold at the first land sales, has now been taken by pre-emption rights.

In answer to question, he further states that Mr. Ward was very often disqualified for business in consequence of drinking, and that he believes he was intoxicated at the time he threw the sticks away.

He also states that Middleton McKee, the interpreter, has been dead these two years.

Question. What became of the sticks that were thus thrown away by the agent?

Answer. They were picked up by an Indian of the name of Hol-lo-tubbe, who said that he would keep them to show hereafter.

Question. Where is Hol-lo-tubbe?

Answer. He afterwards moved west of the Mississippi, and I hear that he is now dead.

And further this deponent saith not.

No. 11.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Tallahatchee County:

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, a justice of the peace in and for the county and State aforesaid, James Standley, who, being first duly sworn by me, to the following interrogatories made the following answers, to wit:

Question first. How long have you been acquainted with William Simmons?

Answer. Since about one year before the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, between the Government of the United States and the Choctaw nation of Indians.

Question second. Where has said Simmons resided since you became acquainted with him?

Answer. He has resided on Femergusha creek, in the southern part of the Choctaw nation of Indians, on the same place that he now claims under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek.

Question third. State whom he married, and, at the time of the said treaty, whether he was the head of a Choctaw Indian family, and whether he then was, and now is a Choctaw citizen.

Answer. He married a Choctaw Indian woman named Foster, and was, at the time of said treaty, the head of a Choctaw Indian family, resided in the nation at the place aforesaid, and still resides there, and was since about one year before the treaty, and has been since, and now is, a Choctaw citizen.

Question fourth. If you know anything in relation to said Simmons having registered under the 14th article of said treaty, please to state it.

Answer. Some time in the month of June or July, 1831, I went, in company with William Simmons, to the agency at Colonel William Ward's, for the purpose of registering under the 14th article of the treaty aforesaid. Upon our arrival, we were both registered on the register kept by said Ward for that purpose, within the time prescribed by said treaty, and I saw said Ward set down the name of said Simmons, with the number of his children under ten years of age at the time of said treaty, (being two,) with his own hand, on his register. Afterwards I was at the agency in September following, and saw Simmons' name on the same book, and saw said Ward, strike out the names of various persons, and, among the rest, I saw said Ward strike out the name of one Indian who was not present, and heard him (Ward) remark, when he struck it out, "that he reckoned that fellow did not wish to stay either." The names of some were struck off upon the representation of their neighbors who were not present, and, indeed, the whole business, to me, seemed to be done in a very loose manner. I have examined the list furnished to Colonel Martin by the War Department, and the name of William Simmons is not to be found upon it; I mean the list of claimants under the 14th article of said treaty.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 15, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit, herewith, copies of the undermentioned letters and papers, viz: letter of 17th ultimo from the register of the land office at Chocchuma, transmitting a list of lands selected by William Trahern for Choctaw orphans.

Letter of 17th ultimo from the register at Chocchuma, respecting the location of reservations for Allen Jenkins.

Letter of 23d ultimo from the register at Chocchuma, with a list of the lands reserved at the late public sales at that office, as reservations under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty of 1830.

Letter of the 29th ultimo from the land officers at Tuscaloosa, with a list of the lands claimed under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty of 1830, as Indian reservations.

I am, &c., ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

NORTHWEST LAND DISTRICT, Chocchuma, Miss., December 17, 1834.

SIR: I herewith enclose additional testimony, furnished by Allen Jenkins, in reference to his claim on sections 25 and 26, township 25, range 2 east, viz: the letter of George W. Martin, the locating agent, under date of the 30th of September, 1833, to which there is annexed the certificate of Samuel Neill, deputy surveyor; also, the affidavits of Samuel Neill and Lemuel George upon the same subject.

I am, &c.,

SAMUEL GWIN, Register.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington.

SEPTEMBER 30, 1833.

SIR: You are, agreeably to the decisions already made by me in locating floating claims, entitled to locate your two floating claims on the two sections including or adjoining your present residence and improvement; and they would be registered and returned at this time, but for the circumstance, as I am informed, that there has been some mistake in numbering the township in which you live; and, to prevent mistake, I would recommend that you defer making your location until it is corrected by the United States surveyor, so as to enable you more properly to designate your location on the plat of survey, and to render the location full and permanent.

Yours, respectfully, GEORGE W. MARTIN, Locating Agent.

Mr. A. JENKINS.

N. B.—You at present apply, on condition it can be done, and correctly, for section 25, township 25, range 2 east, and also for section 26, township 25, range 2 east.

GEORGE W. MARTIN, L. A.

I do hereby certify that, at the time I was surveying township 25, range 2 east, in placing the number of the sections upon the bearing trees at the corner of the sections 26, 27, 34 and 35, a mistake was made, to wit, the number 34 was placed upon two of the bearing trees at said corner, when one should have been 35, which mistake I have since corrected.

Given under my hand, this 13th day of December, 1834.

SAMUEL NEILL, Deputy Surveyor.

Witness: THOMAS G. RINGGOLD, Justice of the Peace.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Tallahatchee County:

This day Samuel Neill personally appeared before me, an acting justice of the peace in and for the said county, and being duly sworn, states: That, in the month of February, 1833, I was engaged in surveying township 25, range 2 east, and I was requested by Allen Jenkins to select such portions of said township as, in my judgment, he might float to advantage. I accordingly selected and recommended to him to float sections 25 and 26 of said township and range, and marked off, on my map or diagram, annexed to the field notes of the survey of said township, the aforesaid sections 25 and 26, at the request of the said Allen Jenkins. He further states, that he furnished the said Allen Jenkins with a diagram of said township, and marked off the sections 25 and 26 on said diagram, and that the said Jenkins intended to float the aforesaid sections, and now understands he has floated said sections. He further testifies that he met the said Jenkins on his way to settle near said sections 25 and 26, and that he settled near said sections; and that the said Jenkins cultivated on section 26 two years, and that he knows section 25 was cultivated by his permission during the last year.

SAMUEL NEILL.

THOMAS. G. RINGGOLD, Justice of the Peace.

STATE OF MISSISSPPI, Tallahatchee County:

This day personally appeared before me, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county, Lemuel George; after being duly sworn, states as follows: I was a settler on section 25, township 25, range 2 east, and that Edmond Jenkins lived on the same section, and that he cleared and cultivated on two other sections for two years; and that James Alford had settled the same section, and that he had cleared on two other sections, and cultivated one of the clearings in the year 1834.

LEMUEL GEORGE.

Sworn to and subscribed, before me, this 15th day of December, 1834.

SIMEON STERRETT, J. P.

LAND OFFICE, Tuscaloosa, December 29, 1834.

SIR: Enclosed herewith you will receive a list of lands claimed under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, as presented to this office, agreeably to your letter of the 16th of October last, viz: Ohoyo Tom, claim to section 25, township 21, range 2 west, and the south half of section 19, township 21, range 1 west, application for which had been made previous to the receipt of your letter of 19th November; but as a portion of section 25 had been taken by pre-emptions, say the north half, and three pre-emption floats had been laid on the south half of section 19, township 21, range 1 west, the agent of Ohoyo, therefore, located on lands as set forth in the accompanying list.

Application was also made by the agent of Imponah and Cunneubbee, on the fifth day of sale, to locate lands as set forth in the accompanying list, just as the lands applied for were offering for sale, and, by an oversight, a part of which was sold, say the northeast quarter section 27, township 21, range 3 west. However, a great portion of the land in the two last applications is taken up by pre-emptions and pre-emption floats, and there is only reserved the northwest quarter section 27, northwest quarter and east half of southeast quarter section 34, and southwest quarter section 33, same township and range. We proposed to him to lay his claims elsewhere, but he refused, unless he were permitted to lay them on such pieces as he might select, regardless of quantity, to which we objected, and he therefore prefers contending for the land claimed, against those holding by pre-emptions, &c.

We are, sir, respectfully, your obedient servants,

JNO. H. VINCENT, Register.
WM. G. PARRISH, Receiver.

The following is a list of the land claimed under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, agreeably to your letter of 16th October last, and which has been marked on the maps as conditional reservations.

Names.	Parts of.	Sections.	Townships.	Range.
Ohoyo	North half	29	21	2 west.
Ohoyo	North half	28	21	2 west.
Ohoyo	South half	25	21	2 west.
Imponah	Whole	34	21	3 west.
Imponah	South half	33	21	3 west.
Cunneubbee	Whole	27	21	3 west.
Cunneubbee	North half	33	21	3 west.
Betsey Beams	Whole	18	24	2 west.
Betsey Beams	Whole	19	24	2 west.

LAND OFFICE, Tuscaloosa, December 20, 1834.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, Chocchuma, December 23, 1834.

SIR: Knowing that most of the claims under the Choctaw treaty, for which lands were reserved at the land sales at this place, under the 14th article of the treaty, will have to be laid before Congress at the present session, I herewith send you a list and description of the lands reserved at the late sales, for your information.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant, SAMUEL GWIN, Register.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

List of lands reserved at the land office at Chocchuma, by order of Colonel George W. Martin, locating agent, under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek.

Robert Turnbull, east half section twenty-seven, township twenty-four, range two east, 319.93. Cultivation claim, November 29, 1834. Molly Nail, whole of section thirty, township twenty-five, range three east. Floating claim.

The following is a list of the lands reserved from sale at the public sales in December, 1834, in pursuance of instructions from the War Department, to satisfy claims arising under the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek; all of which, with the evidence to sustain the same, have been forwarded to the War Department, to be laid before the next Congress for its confirmation or rejection.

John T. Hammond, seven-eighths west half of southeast quarter, and west half northeast quarter section sixteen, township twenty-two, range one west.

Robert Turnbull, half section west half section twenty-seven, township twenty-four, range two east.

Moontubbee, three sections and one-eighth, whole of sections fifteen and sixteen, and north half twenty-one, and north half twenty-two, and west half northwest quarter twenty-three, township twenty-four, range seven west.

Tis-ho-pia, four sections and one-eighth, whole of nineteen, twenty, seventeen, north half thirty, south half eighteen, and east half northeast quarter eighteen, township twenty-four, range seven west.

Rachel Davis, three and one-half sections five, in section four lots one to twenty-four, inclusive; in section three, lots twenty-five to forty, inclusive; in section five, lots seventeen, eighteen, twenty-three, twenty-four, twenty-five, thirty-two, thirty-three, and forty, and east half section eight, all in township twenty-four, range seven west.

El-a-no-au-chi, one section, whole of section nine, township twenty-four, range seven west.

Och-in-chi-homa, four sections, whole of ten and eleven, and lots twenty-five to forty, inclusive, of section two, township twenty-four, range seven west.

Tick-bafa-tubbee, three sections, whole of twelve and fourteen, north half thirteen, and southwest quarter section one, say lots thirty-five, thirty-six, thirty-seven, and thirty-eight, all in township twenty-four, range seven west.

This is to certify that the foregoing list is a true copy from my register, of the lands reserved under the Choctaw treaty, and also those reserved from the action of Congress under the 14th article of said treaty.

JAMES OXBERRY.

CHOCCHUMA, Miss., December 24, 1834.

I have carefully examined the annexed list of names, and am personally acquainted with the witnesses, John T. Hammond and James Oxberry, who are respectable and intelligent; and many of the individuals therein named resided on their lands until sold by the United States; many of whom applied in person to me prior to the land sales in the fall of 1833, to have the lands reserved from sale, under the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty, stating their names had been registered by Colonel Ward as citizens, under said treaty. I was only presented by Garret Nelson with a list which he said he had retained as a copy of the names of individuals registered by Colonel Ward, under the 14th article of the treaty at Dancing Rabbit creek.

CHOCCHUMA, Miss., November 14, 1834.

DEAR SIR: I am in the receipt of instructions from the War Department, dated the 13th October, to the following effect: "You will, therefore, give public notice that persons who consider themselves entitled to reservations under the 14th article, and whose names are not upon the register of Colonel Ward, will exhibit to you the evidence in support of their claims. This evidence must show that they were citizens of the Choctaw nation, heads of families, and did signify their intention to become citizens within the time prescribed by the treaty. It must also show the time of their application to be registered, and the conversation and circumstances relating to it." "If they bring themselves within the requisition of the 14th article, and the evidence of credible and intelligent witnesses induces you to believe that the omission of their names on the register was caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent, you will make locations for them in the manner pointed out in the instructions heretofore given to you. These locations, it must be understood, are contingent, and will be complete only in the event of their being confirmed by Congress."

Now, sir, you will readily see the impossibility of my attending at all the different land offices prior to the day of sale, and I have already given notice to the claimants to apply at this place for the purpose of having them laid before Congress; and it would appear to me that all those who will come before you with their claims fully authenticated, under the rule laid down by the department in the instructions of the 13th ultimo, these lands should be reserved from sale, and the claimants are required to produce their claims, with a description of the land, together with all the requisites as set out with regard to the testimony, to me, at Chocchuma, at the earliest time practicable, that the same may be communicated by me to the proper department for the consideration of the next Congress, and it is expected they will have their immediate attention and be presented here for examination.

Respectfully, &c.,

CHOCCHUMA, Miss., December 24, 1834.

SIR: As per my instructions from the War Department, of date the 13th of October last, which came to hand on the 12th day of November, I herewith transmit a list of claimants under the 14th article of the treaty at Dancing Rabbit creek, for the purpose that said claims and accompanying testimony may be laid before Congress.

A register of the locations will be forwarded to the War Department as soon as the lands are designated on the plats of survey, and a complete list can be procured and regularly made out: all of said claims have been conditionally reserved for the final action of Congress.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE W. MARTIN.

The Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

No. 17.

CHOCCHUMA, Miss., December 29, 1834.

SIR: I have the honor, in addition to the list of claims transmitted on the 24th instant to the War Department, herewith to forward the following testimony in support of a number of Indian claimants therein embraced.

These Indians claim to be entitled to lands under the 14th article of the treaty, having, as they allege, fully complied, on their part, with all its requisitions; notwithstanding, their names do not appear on the agent's books. The 14th article provides that each Choctaw head of a family, being desirous to remain and become a citizen, shall be permitted to do so, by signifying his intention to the agent within six months from the ratification of the treaty, and thereupon shall be entitled to receive certain allowances of land, in manner as set forth in the treaty.

These claimants allege that they did so signify their intentions, as required by the treaty; and say, if their names do not appear on the agent's book, it is no fault of theirs, and consequently they ought not to be deprived of their just rights, by the neglect or default of the agent, or anybody else, over whom they had no control. This being the nature of the claims set up by them, I have, in each case presented, inquired, first, is this a case coming under the 14th article? and next, "is there (in the language of the President's letter) probable evidence of credible witnesses, of their rights under the provisions of said article; and that their failure to obtain such reservations has been caused by the mistakes or neglect of the agent appointed to make a list of reservees?"

Wherever it has been satisfactorily proven to me, by indisputable testimony, that the claims under the 14th article, and that the failure to have their names registered was not their fault, but arose from the neglect or mistakes of the agent, or other cause not embraced in the treaty, I have located their lands, and directed the register to withhold them from sale, conditionally. The letter of the President directs, "that, in all cases, the locating agent will make special reports of the names of the witnesses, and of the facts and circumstances submitted to the War Department." In obedience to these instructions, I have caused all the testimony offered to be taken in writing, under oath, and in due form of law. A list of the names of the witnesses is annexed to this report, and copies of the depositions themselves are herewith transmitted, the originals being retained for the use of this office. The instructions require that I should report the facts and circumstances submitted to me. By a reference to the papers, it will be seen that the depositions establish the following facts, viz: 1st. That within the time limited by the treaty for registration, on one occasion a number of the Indians then living on Suckenatchie, and some of them living yet on the same, did actually go forward to the agent, then at the Old Factory, for this and other purposes, and did not only offer their names for registration, but their names were duly and formally entered down in a book opened for that purpose; nevertheless, few, if any, of the names then and at that place taken down, are now to be found in the agent's book in my possession. The conclusion is inevitable, that the small book or sheet of paper on which their names were entered, has been either lost by the agent, or destroyed by those who might possibly wish the Indians to emigrate. It appears that a portion of these Indians have since gone away, while others remain on their lands, and now contend for their claims.

2d. That there are instances where individuals went forward and had their names entered down on the book, and yet they were afterwards erased or blotted out by (possibly) those who had free access to the agent's book.

3d. It further appears, from the testimony of several witnesses of unquestionable character, that, in the month of June, 1831, a number of Indians attended at the council house, for the purpose of entering their names to become citizens and take lands. Being ignorant of the English language, they appointed one or two head men, or leaders, to go forward for them, and give in their names accordingly. As is customary among the Indians, they collected a parcel of small sticks, designating the number of them that wished to register. With these sticks in their hands, the spokesmen went up to the agent and gave them in; at the same time informing the agent, through the interpreter, that these sticks showed the number they came forward to give in, and that they would give the name of each head of families, the number and ages of their children. It appears further, that the agent took the sticks in his hand and threw them away, and directed the interpreter to tell the Indians that there were too many of them, and that they ought, or must, move over the Mississippi.

Being thus repulsed or turned off, it appears that many of these Indians abandoned their claims, and have gone west, while some of them yet remain, and now assert their claims, under the foregoing signification of their intention to remain.

I have, &c.,

GEO. W. MARTIN, L. Agent.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

No. 18.

WASHINGTON, October 13, 1834.

The requisite instructions will be given by the proper departments for the location and suspension from sale of reservations of land in the Choctaw country, wherever persons claiming reservations under the 14th article of the treaty with the Choctaws of 27th September, 1830, shall exhibit to Colonel Geo. W. Martin, the locating agent, probable evidence of credible witnesses, of their rights under the provisions of said article, and that their failure to obtain such reservations has been caused by the mistakes or neglects of the agent appointed to make a list of reservees.

These locations will be contingent, and will be complete only in the event of their being sanctioned by Congress. Until that decision is obtained, the tracts located under this order will be reserved from sale.

If the tracts to which any claimants were entitled have been sold, in whole or in part, the locating agent will designate upon the plats tracts of equal dimensions, and of as nearly equal value as practicable; and these, also, will be reserved from sale.

In all cases, the locating agent will make special reports of the names of the witnesses, and of the facts and circumstances committed to him. And these reports will be transmitted in season for the action of Congress at its next session.

ANDREW JACKSON.

WASHINGTON, February 18, 1835.

To the House of Representatives:

Since my message, a few days ago, relating to Choctaw reservations, other documents on the same subject have been received from the locating agent, which are mentioned in the accompanying report of the Secretary of War, and which I also transmit herewith, for the information and consideration of Congress.

ANDREW JACKSON.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, February 18, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit copies of other documents relating to Choctaw reservations, prepared and forwarded by Col. Martin, under the instructions of 13th October last.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEW. CASS.

To the PRESIDENT.

CHOCCHUMA, Miss., January 7, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor, this day to forward to the War Department copies of such claims as have been presented to me under the instructions of the 13th of October last, and have been acted on by me since my last communication to you of the 29th December.

Among the claims herein enclosed are those of Jacob Johnson, John R. Contee and Thomas Stewart, on the application of the Hon. Mr. Plummer, who alleges the testimony is on file in the War Department, in support of the three last-mentioned claims.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. W. MARTIN.

The Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

CHOCCHUMA, December 1, 1834.

SIR: Jacob Thompson claimed section No. 31, and the N. W. $\frac{1}{4}$, the S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$, and the S. E. $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 30, township 22, range No. 3 E., under and by virtue of the provisions of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. His case was referred to the War Department, together with the testimony, for decision, because his name was not on the register of Col. Ward, furnished you by the department. His case is recognized by the Secretary of War, as embraced within the general instructions recently given you by order of the President, as will more fully appear from a letter from the Secretary of War, under date of October 30, accompanying this communication. The testimony in support of his claim is still on file in the War Department. The documents contain the testimony of Thompson himself, stating that he was a Choctaw by birth, a native and citizen of the Choctaw nation, and related to the chief, Greenwood Leflore; that he had an improvement on section 31, township 22, range 3 E., prior to the making of the treaty, and settled upon the same with his family during the year 1830, prior to the ratification of said treaty; that he had not at that time any other improvement within the limits of the Choctaw nation; that his family consisted of a wife, and three children under ten years of age; that he signified to the United States agent, Colonel William Ward, his intention of remaining and becoming a citizen of the States within six months from the ratification of the treaty, and that he continued to reside on the said tract of land, intending to remain a citizen of Mississippi. The testimony of Hammond, Reilly, and others, corroborating the statement of Thompson, and swearing positively that they were present when he signified his intention to the agent, is among the papers. The statement of his chief, and other leading men of the nation, in support to his right to land, is one of the accompanying documents. There is, also, among the papers, a letter from Colonel Ward in relation to the subject, accounting for errors and mutilations in the register. The land claimed by Thompson has been sold, as will appear from the records of the land office at this place. He remained on the land until some time after it was sold, but has since removed to another section of the country. I now ask for him that other lands of equal quality and value may be located, of equal quality and value of those sold. A portion of the lands claimed by Thompson has been sold for twenty dollars per acre; the residue has been sold for ten and fifteen dollars per acre. The abstract of the testimony is given from recollection, but I know it to be true in substance.

Yours, &c., F. E. PLUMMER.

To GEORGE W. MARTIN.

CHOCCHUMA, December 11, 1834.

Jacob Thompson makes application to locate section No. 4, the southeast and southwest quarters of section No. 5, and northwest quarter of section No. 3, township 19, range 1 east, (being $1\frac{3}{4}$ sections,) which he claims under the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and requests that the same may be reserved from sale, and secured for him in conformity with the provisions of the treaty.

JACOB THOMPSON,
By F. E. PLUMMER.

To Col. GEORGE W. MARTIN, locating agent.

Jacob Thompson is registered for the within described tract of land. The register of Columbus is requested to reserve the land from sale, that the facts and testimony in the case may be laid before the next Congress.

GEO. W. MARTIN, Locating Agent

WAR DEPARTMENT, October 30, 1834.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that instructions have been given, by order of the President, to Colonel George W. Martin, locating agent, in relation, generally, to claims to reservations under the Choctaw treaty of 1830. These instructions embrace the cases of Jacob Thompson, Thomas Stewart, and John R. Contee, whose papers were presented at this department by you.

Very respectfully, &c.

LEW. CASS.

GEORGE W. MARTIN, Land Agent.

CHOCCHUMA, Miss., November 30, 1834.

John R. Contee makes application to locate section No. 2, of township No. 16, in range 1 west, under the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. His residence and improvement, I am informed, was on the above-named section. My information is derived from those who know and were acquainted with Contee and his family, and the numbers of his land. He requests that his land may be reserved from sale, and secured to him according to the provisions of the treaty.

JOHN R. CONTEE,
By F. E. PLUMMER.

I do certify that John R. Contee is a citizen of the Choctaw nation, east of the Mississippi; but as to claim, I do not know whether he has a legal claim or not; that he will be qualified to his claim.

Given under my hand, this 22d June, 1831.

GREENWOOD LEFLORE, Chief of the N. W. Dist., C. N.

I do certify that John R. Contee has registered as a citizen of the State of Mississippi, to remain five years, this 27th June, 1831.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that instructions have been given, by order of the President, to Colonel Martin, locating agent, in relation, generally, to claims to reservations under the Choctaw treaty of 1830. These instructions embrace the cases of Jacob Thompson, Thomas Stewart, and John R. Contee, whose papers were presented to this department by you.

CHOCCHUMA, December 2, 1834.

SIR: Thomas Stewart claims the northwest quarter of section No. 10, lots Nos. 3, 4, and 5, of said section, in township No. 16, range No. 1 west, under the provisions of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. He requests that the same may be reserved from sale, and secured to him in conformity with the provisions of the treaty.

THOMAS STEWART,
By his Assignee, J. R. PLUMMER.

Registered for the within described tract of land. The register of the land office at Clinton is requested to reserve the same from sale, that the facts connected with the case may be laid before Congress.

GEO. W. MARTIN.

CHOCCHUMA, December 2, 1834.

SIR: The papers and testimony in support of the claim of Thomas Stewart to land under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, were taken up to the War Department by me. His case was decided upon, and is embraced within the general instructions recently issued to you by order of the President, as will more fully appear from an inspection of a letter from the Secretary of War, under date of the 30th October, 1834, made a part of this communication. The documents submitted to the department, which are now on file in the Indian Bureau, contain his own affidavit, stating that he was a citizen of the Choctaw nation, with an Indian family, and that he resided with his family within that district of country ceded to the United States by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and had more then twelve acres in cultivation. He also states that he signified to the agent his intention of remaining and becoming a citizen of the States within the time prescribed by the treaty. The statements are supported by the testimony of David Cochnaur and others. A letter from Major F. W. Armstrong is on file, recognizing the claim of Stewart, as entitled to one quarter section of land, under the 19th article of the treaty, and requesting it may be secured to his wife.

Stewart's name is not on either Ward's or Armstrong's register; his claim being recognized by Armstrong, in the letter before referred to, and not by Ward. He is willing (if it should meet your approbation) to waive his right to a section of land, under the 14th article of the treaty, and take a quarter section under the 19th article. The land claimed by him, and on which he resides, is the northwest quarter, or lots Nos. 3, 4 and 5, of section No. 10, of township No. 16, of range No. 1, west, situate in the Clinton land district.

Respectfully, &c.,

F. E. PLUMMER.

Testimony said to be on file in the War Office. GEO. W. MARTIN.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Holmes County, ss:

John B. Stewart and Susan Graham make oath and say, 1st. John B. Stewart, that on or about the 13th day of August, in the year 1831, he went in company with and attended his mother (Susan Graham) to the agency at Colonel William Ward's, who went for the purpose of registering, under the article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, providing for a five years' stay; that, at the time of his mother's registering, being about the time aforesaid, he saw the register to which his mother was registered lying open, and was led by curiosity to examine it, and then and there upon said register saw and read aloud, in the presence and hearing of said Ward, (the agent,) the name of Benoni Taylor, and that said Ward said nothing in denial of said Taylor's having been duly registered. That, in regard to the truth of Taylor's name having been registered upon Colonel Ward's register, he cannot be mistaken, for he saw it and read it. 2d. Susan Graham states, on oath, that on or about the 13th day of August, 1831, she went with her son, John B. Stewart, to the agency at Colonel Wm. Ward's, for the purpose of registering for the five years' stay, under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek; that about the time aforesaid, she registered before said Ward at the agency aforesaid, she heard and saw her son, John B. Stewart, read aloud the name of Benoni Taylor from the register kept by said Ward for that purpose, and that said Ward did not gainsay it.

SUSAN GRAHAM.
JOHN B. STEWART.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, the undersigned, judge of probate for the county and State aforesaid, on the 22d day of November, 1834.

W. S. TRIMBLE, Judge of Probate, Holmes county.

CHOCCHUMA, December 4, 1834.

DEAR SIR: The persons by whom I expected to prove the value of Benoni Taylor's land have left the place. All I know in relation to the value of the land which has been sold, is derived from the information of others. The land on which he lived was sold at the Columbus land sale last fall. It is now worth five to fifteen dollars an acre. I pledge myself, as soon as I can reach the neighborhood, to adduce to you satisfactory evidence of these facts, provided you will make the location. The whole tract is worth five dollars on an average.

Most respectfully, &c.,

F. E. PLUMMER.

To Col. GEO. W. MARTIN.

I have seen a part of the tract of land claimed by Benoni Taylor, and believe it to be worth ten dollars an acre.

DECEMBER 14, 1834.

A. VERNON ROWE.

CHOCCHUMA, December 4, 1834.

Benoni Taylor applies to locate the following lands, under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, in 1830, all in township 10, range 1 west. The west half of section twenty-one; the 16th section; southeast quarter of section twenty; the west half of section 28; the east half of section 32; the west half of section 33. He requests that the above lands may be reserved, to satisfy his claims under the 14th article as above, subject to the approval of the Congress of the United States.

BENONI TAYLOR.

Col. GEO. W. MARTIN.

Benoni Taylor is registered for the within tract of land. The register of the land office at Clinton, is requested to reserve the land from sale, that the case may be laid before Congress.

Ward, his name, as intending to reside, or remain, and become a citizen under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek; and that, at the time of his registry, he gave in and caused to be registered two children then unmarried, both over ten years of age, and under his guardianship, he being their step-father; one named Ophia, since married to one Dennis Payne, and the other a boy, named David Walker. That the said two children were registered by the said agent, Col. Ward, with the name of Zadock Brashears, sen., at the time before stated. These affiants further say, that they have understood that the name of Zadock Brashears, sen., was not to be found upon the copy of the register of names under the 14th article of the treaty, but that his name was found as registered under the 19th article of the treaty, for a cultivation claim, and his land located to him accordingly, whereby the two children registered by him, as aforesaid, have been deprived of any location whatever.

Before me, William Bennett, a justice of the peace in and for the county of Sumter, and State aforesaid, personally came and appeared Alexander Brashears, of said county, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that at the date of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek with the Choctaw tribe of Indians, and for many years before, he was a citizen of said Choctaw nation, and the head of a Choctaw family residing in said nation. That in the month of June or July, 1831, he, this deponent, applied to Col. William Ward, then United States agent for the Choctaws, and gave notice to him of his intention to remain and become a citizen of the States, and that he claimed the benefit of the provision made by the 14th article of said treaty aforesaid, and requested the said William Ward to register his name, and the number of his children at that time, in conformity with the instructions given said agent. That the said Ward did, accordingly, register the name of this affiant, and the number of his children at the date of the treaty. That he had, at the date of the treaty, nine unmarried children living with him, three over ten years of age, and six under ten years of age. That all of said children, before named, are now living. This affiant further says, that, upon applying to the locating agent, Col. Geo. W. Martin, to locate the lands granted to himself and children, he discovered that two of his children had been omitted in the register of the agent, one over ten, and the other under ten years of age, and, in consequence thereof, this affiant has, by said omission of the agent, been deprived of three quarter sections of land granted them under said treaty, and he therefore asks that the land granted on account of his two children, thus omitted, may be located to him.

Elias Williams makes oath that he has been well acquainted with Imponah and Cunneubbee, two Choctaw Indian citizens, the heads of Choctaw Indian families, for about six years. That, within the time prescribed by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, he saw the above-named Indians at the Factory trading house, where the Indians received their annuity, at which time and place Col. William Ward was registering the heads of Choctaw Indian families, under the 14th article of said treaty. That it was well understood at that time in the neighborhood, by everybody, that the above-naned Indians, with many others, had attended for the purpose of registration and receiving their annuities. That, in a short time afterwards, he heard said Indians say that they had registered, and that Col. Gaines went with them and had seen it done. That said Indians, with their families, have permanently resided at the same place upon their claims and improvements ever since. That he is well acquainted with their families, and believes at the time of said treaty Imponah had one child over ten years of age; Cunneubbee had two children under ten years of age. That it has always been a matter of universal understanding that they had registered in due time under the 14th article of said treaty; that they have frequently so informed him, and he believes it to be true; that he has no interest whatever in the location of their claims.

DEMOPOLIS, Alabama, November 15, 1834.

SIR: I have met here Mr. Williams, the bearer of this letter, who was in pursuit of me, in order to obtain my testimony of the fact of Imponah, alias Billy, and Cunneubbee, two Choctaws residing on Factory creek, having applied in due time to Col. Wm. Ward, late United States Choctaw agent, to be registered for citizenship, in conformity to the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, the former having one child over ten years of age, and the latter two children under ten years of age.

I well recollect of interesting myself for the Indians residing in the neighborhood of the Factory, who desired to become citizens, and of going with them to the agent's room when at the Factory, and seeing that he took down their names and described their families for registration, as the parties called upon me for that purpose, and I do verily believe the above-named Indians were of the number; and that they, with others, who I am told are not found on the register in your hands, did what was required of them to entitle them to the lands occupied by them.

I have, some two weeks ago, addressed the Hon. Secretary of War on the subject of the omission of the agent mentioned, to record upon his books the applications for citizenship of many families, made to him at the Factory, and full minutes of the same, made by him for that purpose in my presence, requesting an order from him on the proper authority to reserve from sale the lands claimed, until the parties could produce proof of their applications in due time. But as there may not be time to receive such an order at the land offices before the public sales next month, I would respectfully suggest to you whether, under the circumstances, it would not be your duty to cause to be reserved from sale all the lands claimed by the parties mentioned, including all those named in my letter to the Hon. Secretary, a copy of which Major Whitsell will lay before you. It is beyond doubt that the parties are entitled to their lands, and that justice would be subserved by the course suggested, and the government saved much trouble.

I am, &c.,

Before me, Charles H. Drummond, a justice of the peace in and for the county of Marengo, and State of Alabama aforesaid, personally came and appeared Allen Stanton, of Sumter county, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposeth and saith, that he is acquainted with Lush-pe-o, a Choctaw woman, who resided near the mouth of Suckenatchie, in the Choctaw nation, (now Sumter county, Alabama,) at the date of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, concluded in the month of September, 1830. That she resided with her family at the place before described, for several years before said treaty, and from that period down to the present time. This affiant further says that the said Lush-pe-o was entitled to all the privileges of a Choctaw citizen at the date of said treaty, and that she is a full blooded Choctaw woman; that she had, at the date of said treaty, living with her, four children, all unmarried, two over ten, and two under ten years of age, at the date of said treaty, to wit, a girl named Betsey, otherwise called Shamah, in Choctaw, about fourteen years of age, at the date of the treaty; a girl named Eliza, otherwise called, in Choctaw, Jucha-ho-yo, about twelve or thirteen years of age; a boy named Sam, otherwise called Nock-a-chubbee, about eight years old; a girl named Lucy, about six years of age. This affiant further says, that he was present at the old Choctaw trading house, in the month of August, 1831, between the 10th and 13th of August, 1831, and saw the said Lush-pe-o apply to the agent, Colonel William Ward, and give him notice of her intention to remain and become a citizen; and requested him to register her name, and the number and ages of her children, so as to entitle them to the provisions made by the 14th article of the treaty before mentioned, and saw the said agent take down their names in writing accordingly. This affiant well remembers this fact, because Lush-pe-o did not speak the English language, and she was carried to the presence of the agent by Zadock Brashears, sen., and her request to be registered under the 14th article of the treaty was communicated to the agent through an interpreter. This affiant well remembers that George S. Gaines, Dr. Hand, of Columbus, and Thomas Lewis, were present at the time. This affiant further says, that Lush-pe-o was the reputed wife of a white man, named George Clarke, who, from his constant habits of intemperance, is wholly unfit to attend to or transact business of any kind, and that, upon the occasion referred to, his reputed wife gave the notice of their intention to remain, and had the register of their names made by the agent, as before stated. That the said Lush-pe-o, and her family, have remained upon their land ever since, and have always believed and said they were entitled to the provisions made by the 14th article of the treaty, and that, upon the application made by the said Lush-pe-o to have her name registered under said treaty by Colonel Martin, the locating agent, it was found that her name was not upon the register. This affiant further says, that the agent who went around for the purpose of ascertaining the quantity of acres each Choctaw had in cultivation, under the 19th article of the treaty, took down and returned the names of all heads of families, as well those who intended to remain as those who did not; and that the name of George Clarke was taken down for a cultivation claim, but he always claimed the benefit of the 14th article, and he and his reputed wife have always expressed their intention to remain, and claimed the benefit of the said 14th article, and now remain upon their land, as before stated. Upon the survey of the land, the residence is upon section 22, township 17, range 1 west, in Sumter county.

That George S. Greene was present, and interpreted for the same Lush-pe-o to the agent at the time of her registration. That she has always, from before the treaty till the present time, lived with her family upon the land now claimed by her, and was and is entitled to all the privileges of a Choctaw citizen. She is the reputed wife of one George Clarke, who, from excessive intemperance, is unfit to attend to business of any kind. This affiant has, for several years, lived near said Lush-pe-o, and knows that she intended to remain upon the land claimed by her and her family, and that she has always believed her name, and those of her children, were duly registered by the agent, under the 14th article of the treaty.

ON REFUNDING TO PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS THE OVERPLUS OF PURCHASE MONEY WHEN THERE IS A DEFICIENCY IN THE NUMBER OF ACRES PATENTED.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 10, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred a resolution instructing said committee to inquire into the expediency of making provision, by law, for refunding to purchasers of the public lands the overplus of purchase money paid by them in cases where it shall appear, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that there is a deficiency in the number of acres patented to such purchasers; and to whom was referred the petition of John Barclay, reported:

In the investigation of this subject the committee have confined themselves to the following points: 1st. Has the government received from any portion of the purchasers of the public lands more than the legal price? That, in many of the legal subdivisions of sections, there is found to be a deficiency, or not the quantity of acres returned on the official plats, cannot be denied, the causes of which it is not now perhaps very necessary to examine. Errors in the original surveys have been occasioned, perhaps, by the negligence of chain carriers, by mistakes in making out the field notes, and from the obstructions and difficulties attending the survey of wilderness lands.

The purchaser, in good faith, relies upon the prima facie evidence afforded by the official plats in the land offices, that he is to possess at least the specific quantity of land for which he pays; the deficit that may be really found to exist, and the disappointment that may happen in consequence thereof, are not chargeable to any negligence or fault of his. Does it not follow, that the government should execute the contract according to the understanding of both parties? There can be no reason to justify the government in taking from the citizen any of his property or money, to be applied to public use, without rendering an equivalent. Congress has repeatedly refunded duties shown to be unequally and improperly collected; and it cannot be presumed that, in this case, there is a material and sufficient reason to show the inexpediency of doing justice to the purchasers of the public lands, when we are so observant of its rules and principles in providing for rigorous prosecutions in the district courts for trespasses on the public domain, by which the rights of the government are sought to be sustained, although the damages are nominal compared with the costs, and must be far below the loss of individual purchasers, to which the present inquiry is directed.

The committee are, therefore, of the opinion that it is just and expedient to extend the relief contemplated by the resolution.

2d. It may be urged that, where a deficiency is found in one legal subdivision, it is balanced by an overplus in an adjoining tract. This may be said of lands lying in different sections, but rarely happens to be the case as to lands in the same section. The purchaser of two such tracts would not, in equity, be entitled to relief. But if one individual has obtained more land than he expected, it forms no reason why another should be compelled to pay too much for less than the quantity which the government proffers to sell.

Under the foregoing view, the committee have no means of estimating the probable number of applications for relief that might be made. It would doubtless be very small, comparing it with the whole number of purchasers of the public lands. If, however, the number of persons entitled to relief should be great, the evil calls more loudly for correction; an observation that may apply to the objection that increased labor would be thrown upon the land officers.

The committee are of opinion that, in cases where balances might be found due to purchasers of the public lands, instead of paying them out of the Treasury, it would be more convenient for the government, and probably as acceptable to those entitled to relief, to authorize scrip to be issued to them, receivable in purchase of any of the public lands.

The committee will now advert to an objection which presents itself as to the difficulty of ascertaining the amount to be refunded in every instance of the kind alluded to. This objection cannot be considered insuperable, unless Congress is incompetent to prescribe rules by which to enable the proper officers to adjust the accounts of land purchasers. The committee do not discover that greater obstacles would be found in adjusting and settling such accounts, than in determining the justice of ordinary charges against the government, or the amount of arrears of pay due to public officers or soldiers of the army. It would be desirable in all cases whatever, where the government is to be made liable for the payment of money, to rely upon the evidence and acts of public agents or officers directly responsible to the government. This, in many instances, is either impracticable, or would be attended with expenses which there would be no difference in the result to justify. In the States and Territories where the public lands are situated, there are surveyors, appointed by competent State authority, who are required to take an oath of office, and to give security for the honest and faithful performance of their duties, and whose duty it is made (when called on) to subdivide the public lands for individuals, in accordance with the rules and regulations of Congress. A transcript from a court of record, under seal, of their official returns, with the opinion of the court, would, in the opinion of the committee, be sufficient evidence by which to determine the facts.

The committee therefore report a bill.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 10, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the papers in the case of John S. Conger, reported:

That it appears, from a letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that on the 24th of January, 1818, a ticket designating the southeast quarter of section thirty-two, in township seven south, of range four west, in the Illinois military district, appears to have been drawn out of the military lottery wheel for, and located in the name of, Amos Hedden, by warrant No. 12,794; but the patent, which was issued the same day, instead of designating the same tract, was filled up so as to describe the southeast quarter of section thirty-two, in township seven south, of range two west; and the latter tract (which was not set apart for the soldiers of the late war) appears to have been conveyed by the patentee to Thomas Lyon, of New York, on the 21st February, 1818, and on the 18th April, same year, to have been conveyed by the said Lyon to John S. Conger, of the same place. He further states, if the patent was altered so as to designate the tract in range four, the deeds would be rendered invalid. In a letter from a Mr. Myers to George Graham, Esq., late Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated September 29, 1828, in answer to one which appears to have been written from the department, the former says: "You request us to have the patent returned to your office for correction. Dr. Conger would naturally object to part with it in this way, because the southeast quarter of section thirty-two, in township seven south, of range two west, was advertised in the name of Conger, and sold by the State of Illinois for the taxes of 1818 and 1819, amounting to $13.20, and redeemed by him in 1820, at the cost of about $20; and secondly, because, upon examination of the tax sales in Illinois, the tract which would be substituted, to wit, the southeast quarter of section thirty-two, in township seven south, of range four west, was sold for taxes in 1823, and is past redemption." The present Commissioner of the General Land Office states that, under these circumstances, and as the error originated in his office, he respectfully suggests the difficulty might be remedied if Congress would pass an act authorizing John S. Conger to relinquish the tract actually patented to Amos Hedden, and conveyed to him, and in lieu of the same to enter any other quarter section in the Illinois military district, subject to entry at private sale. To this the committee objects. The committee is of opinion that the southeast quarter of section thirty-two, in township seven south, of range four west, which appears to have been the tract allotted to said Hedden for military services, could not have been legally sold for the taxes, inasmuch as no patent had been issued; therefore the title remains with the government; and that it may yet be patented to the assignee of Hedden, upon his relinquishing to the United States the tract which has been patented to Amos Hedden, and for the purpose of authorizing him to do so, they report a bill.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1318. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 10, 1835.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Selvia C. Vick, relict of Hartwell Vick, deceased, and guardian, duly appointed, of his minor heirs, Mary E. Vick, Charles W. Vick, Henry W. Vick, and Virginia Vick, reported:

That said petitioner sets forth that, on the 23d day of May, 1818, her late husband purchased of the United States, at the land office at Washington, Mississippi, fractional section number twenty, township eighteen, range four east, containing $225\frac{79}{100}$ acres, at the rate of two dollars per acre, on which her said husband, at the time of the entry, in accordance with the existing laws relative to the public domain, paid one-fourth of the purchase money, viz: $112.85. Petitioner further represents that her husband subsequently availed himself of the provisions of the act passed 2d March, 1821, for the relief of purchasers of the public lands; that, in the year 1828, previous to the falling due of the last installment, a re-survey of the private claims of citizens took place in the section of country where the lands in question were situated, by order of government; when it was discovered, by means of said survey, that there was an error in the original returns of survey in the land office; that the section intended to have been purchased by said husband, was covered by a private claim of one Elihu H. Bay, previously located, and that the said land was not the property of the United States at the time they made the supposed sale to her husband. It seems that Vick, in making this entry, was guided by the maps and books used and exhibited in the land office, for the purpose of informing and guiding purchasers in their entries; that the section of land so entered was valuable, but that, at the time of entry, there were thousands of acres around it subject to entry, equally valuable, some of which he would undoubtedly have entered if he had not been misled by the mistakes of government agents; that he entered for the purpose of procuring a home for himself and family, and which he improved, but which he has been deprived of, as well as of the means of procuring another in the same section of country. It is stated to be situated within one mile of the town of Vicksburg, one of the most flourishing towns on the Ohio or Mississippi rivers, between Louisville and New Orleans.

Richard Featherstone makes oath that, to the best of his belief, the land above referred to is worth twenty dollars per acre.

William Mills states that Mr. Featherstone has not overstated the value of lands in the vicinity of Vicksburg.

Thus the petitioner conceives that herself, and the heirs of her husband, who are all minors, have been deprived of a valuable property.

Petitioner, after setting forth many facts, not herein stated, concludes by praying Congress to grant to her and her children, as joint tenants, or according to their respective interests, two sections of land as an indemnity.

The committee have no criterion by which they can form a proper estimate of the loss sustained by the husband of the petitioner, yet they readily agree that the petitioner is entitled to relief, because the purchase was made in good faith; the committee, therefore, report a bill, authorizing the Treasury to refund the sum which was advanced towards the payment of said tract of land above described, together with the interest thereon, at the rate of six per cent per annum from the date of entry (if not already refunded), to the widow and heirs of said Hartwell Vick, and that said widow and heirs have a pre-emption right to two hundred and twenty-five acres of any of the unappropriated lands within the State of Mississippi.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR A PORTION OF THE LAND HERETOFORE GRANTED TO THE VILLAGE OF CAHOKIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 10, 1835.

Whereas, By an act of Congress passed March 3d, 1791, there was granted to the French village of Cahokia and Prairie du Pont in St. Clair county, a large tract of land, about five thousand acres in quantity, including those villages (which had been before that time used by the inhabitants of said villages as a common) to be appropriated to the use of the said villages respectively, as a common, until otherwise disposed of by law; and whereas, said tract of land thus appropriated, is exempt from taxation, sale or lease by the laws of this State, and much inconvenience has resulted from this tenure and enjoyment by the said inhabitants, inasmuch as said tract of land is located in part opposite the city of St. Louis, and the ferry thereto, so that difficulties are experienced in relation to the construction of the Vincennes road and the repair thereof; and whereas, great benefit, in the opinion of this legislature, would result to the people of the State in these respects, by having a grant of one hundred and sixty acres of the land so appropriated for these purposes, and to facilitate and extend the ferry privileges, and improve said road, therefore,

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Illinois, That our senators and representatives be desired to use their exertion to procure the passage of a law in Congress granting to the county of St. Clair one hundred and sixty acres of said land, for the purposes aforesaid, to be located in a part of said appropriated land, under the direction of the county commissioners' court of said county.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR THE RELIEF OF CERTAIN PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 12, 1835.

JOINT MEMORIAL in relation to public lands.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists would respectfully represent to your honorable body that many of the earliest settlers and most worthy and valuable citizens of the State of Alabama became purchasers of lands from the United States in the year of 1818 and 1819, at the extravagant prices at which they were then selling, and made settlements upon. It is a part of the history of this State that at that time cotton, the staple commodity of the country, was selling at a most extravagant price, thereby imparting an unreasonable and unreal value to all other property; therefore in the purchases of land made under such circumstances, a price greatly exceeding their real value was in most, if not every instance, given for them. Shortly, however, cotton fell in the price, and produced a corresponding depreciation in the value of all other property.

So great and distressing was the state of things that Congress, at its session in the year 1820, passed a law for the relief of land purchasers, allowing them to relinquish a part, and applying the payments made thereon to other parts retained, and of paying the residue of the purchase money at a discount of thirty-seven and a half per cent, or to take a further credit of six or eight years, without interest, according to the installments paid.

Believing that the terms offered by this act were the best that would ever be proposed, the class of purchasers to which your memorialists allude, feeling the great importance of securing homes for their families, paid the whole price of the lands retained, either by relinquishment, or in cash, at the discount. Since that time, however, Congress has from time to time extended relief to those who took further credit, until the session of 1829 and 1830, when a law passed giving to those who had paid the amount of three dollars and fifty cents per acre, patents for their lands without further payment, and to those who had not paid this amount the privilege of paying one dollar and twenty-five cents or less, in addition to what they had paid, and receiving a patent for their lands. The first class of persons thus relieved was composed of those who purchased land at the price of fourteen dollars and upwards; and the second, of those who purchased at a less price. Another class of purchasers who had only paid one-twentieth part of the purchase money, and permitted their lands to revert, were relieved by granting them scrip to the amount they had paid.

Thus it is shown to your honorable body, that all other classes of land purchasers except those who were most prompt in paying their money into the public treasury have been relieved, and your memorialists are entirely unable to see any justice in making this difference to the prejudice of those who have been most prompt in payment; and nothing is more common than to see persons residing in the same neighborhood, and in fact adjoining each other with only an imaginary line between them, occupying lands of equal value, which were bid off at the same price at the sales, one of whom has paid twenty dollars per acre for his land, and the other only five, and so in proportion to the various prices at which the land sold. Such inequality is diametrically opposed to those principles of equal justice which should constitute the foundation of all legislation.

Your memorialists conceive it to be the duty of all governments, and particularly our own, so to legislate that equal rights and equal privileges may be established and preserved among its citizens, and to hold out every inducement to punctuality and good faith. Your memorialists cannot believe that the inequality in the law to which they allude was designed by Congress, but that it was the result of inadvertence, for your honorable body are not unapprised that the citizens alluded to are as valuable as those who have been relieved; and, according to the revenue laws of this State, have been compelled for years to pay a larger amount of taxes than those who had only paid a small portion of the purchase money on their lands. Your memorialists therefore pray that a law may be passed placing this class of purchasers upon an equal footing with others who have received such ample and generous relief. And that the treasury may not be burthened by having to refund this money, your memorialists will be satisfied for this class of purchasers to be placed on the same footing with those who permitted the lands they had purchased to revert to the government, by granting them scrip receivable in payment for other lands which may hereafter be sold by the government; and in extending the benefit asked for by your memorialists, will, as in duty bound, ever pray, &c.

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed and our representatives be requested to use every exertion in their power to carry the foregoing measure into effect; and that his excellency be requested to furnish each of our representatives in Congress with a copy of the same.

ON CLAIM FOR THE RE-ISSUE OF A BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 13, 1835.

Mr. GALBRAITH, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom the petition and documents of Robert Allison, of Franklin county, Pennsylvania, claiming indemnification for the loss of two hundred acres of bounty land, were referred, reported:

That they have had the petition and documents under consideration, from which they extract the following facts: The petitioner was a lieutenant in the third regiment of the Pennsylvania line in the revolutionary army, and served until the close of the war, and thereby became entitled to two hundred acres of bounty land, under the laws of Congress. A warrant, No. 43, was issued in his name, for two hundred acres of bounty land, on the 6th day of April, 1799, which was located by and for a certain William Steel, on the 10th of February, 1800; upon which, together with other warrants, surrendered by said Steel to the amount of four thousand acres, a patent issued in the name of said Steel, upon section three, township six, range seven. The authority under which Steel undertook to locate the warrant in the name of Robert Allison, appears to have been an assignment in the warrant to him, purporting to have been executed by Allison. The petitioner states in his petition, that the warrant "never came to his hands, and that he never, in any form or manner, transferred or parted with his right to said land, or warrant, or gave any person any authority to assign or transfer the same." And to the petition is attached his affidavit, "that the facts set forth are just and true, as stated therein." In proof of the assignment to Steel not being the genuine act of the petitioner, the deposition of Hon. Matthew St. Clair Clarke was submitted, the most material part of which is the following extract, in which he says, "deponent, knowing well the character of Captain Allison for integrity and truth, requested to see the surrendered warrants. They were shown to this deponent, and, without hesitancy, he pronounced the name of Captain Allison, as assignor, a forgery. The handwriting he did not believe to be that of Captain Allison, nor was the name spelled correctly." This evidence, in connection with the good character of the petitioner, as stated by Mr. Clarke, who appears to have been well acquainted with him, and also by some of the committee, to whom he is well known, the committee deemed as satisfactory that the assignment of the warrant to Steel was a forgery.

Under this state of facts, it appears to the committee no more than justice to the petitioner to grant him a new warrant, the warrant to which he was entitled, under the acts of Congress, having been, without his consent or knowledge, spent and executed in such a manner, under the direction of the officers of the government, as placed it out of his power to obtain what he was entitled to, even were he willing to adopt the location thus made without his consent, which would be imposing of itself a hardship upon him which would be unjust. His warrant was not laid upon any specific two hundred acres which could be designated or distinguished from any other two hundred acres of the four thousand covered by Steel's patent; and, even if it could, if the land had passed to a third person, purchasing bona fide under Steel, without knowledge of the fraud, your committee are of opinion he could not recover in an ejectment: but, as before observed, it would be unjust to subject him to this trouble and expense without his consent, if it were even manifest that he could recover it. Your committee, however, are clearly satisfied that his right in the land covered by that warrant is gone from him past recovery; that he cannot recover in an ejectment; the two hundred acres covered by his warrant being thrown in with three thousand eight hundred acres more, in one general patent covering the whole, it is impossible for him to describe any particular two hundred acres, so as to entitle him to recover it; and this without his act or participation, and without any fault of his. In this view of the case, the committee have reported a bill, authorizing the proper officers of the government to issue a new warrant to the petitioner.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1322. [2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM FOR THE RE-ISSUE OF A BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 14, 1835.

Mr. GALBRAITH, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Maxwell, of Butler county, Pennsylvania, praying for relief, reported:

That they had the petition and documents referred to them under consideration. The petitioner states that he served in the army of the revolution, as an enlisted soldier, in the eighth Pennsylvania line, until the close of the war; and that, on application to the Bounty Land Office, he ascertained that a warrant had issued, No. 10,098, for one hundred acres, on the 19th March, 1799, to James Maxwell, as a soldier of the eighth reigment, Pennsylvania line, and but one of that name was returned on the records of the Pennsylvania line as being entitled to bounty land; that, on examination, the said warrant appeared to be transferred by an assignment, purporting to be executed by James Maxwell, on the 10th December, 1808, to Thomas Thompson, and a patent issued thereon to said Thomas Thompson, on the 4th of January, 1810; that he never, in truth, and in fact, made any such assignment, and never had the warrant in his possession.

The committee entertain no doubt of the services of the petitioner, as it appears that he has furnished sufficient evidence of that fact to induce the War Department to place him on the pension roll. The committee have no doubt, also, that warrant No. 10,098, for one hundred acres of bounty land, was issued in favor of the petitioner. But there is no evidence exhibited to the committee, negativing the fact of the assignment of the warrant of the 10th December, 1808, excepting the affidavit of the petitioner himself, that the facts set forth in his petition are true. There is evidence that the petitioner bears the reputation of an honest, respectable man, and, indeed, he is known to some of the committee as such; but the committee believe it would be attended with great danger, as a precedent, to grant relief on the mere affidavit of the party in interest, that an instrument, purporting to be executed under his hand and seal, particularly after so great a lapse of time, was a gross forgery. The fact itself is one susceptible of proof by the testimony of disinterested witnesses, so that it does not present a case of necessity. Until proof be furnished, other than the oath of the party, that this assignment was not in fact executed by him, the committee feel it their duty to report it as their opinion that relief ought to be withheld, and submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the subject; and that the petitioner have leave to withdraw his petition and documents.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 14, 1835.

Mr. CHAMBERS, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Ferdinand D. McDonell, reported:

That they have considered the claim of the petitioner, by which it appears that said Ferdinand D. McDonell did, in the year 1799, become an inhabitant of the island of Amelia, East Florida, a province then of his Catholic Majesty, the King of Spain; that he had a wife, several children, and a number of slaves; and that he purchased, on said island of Amelia, land which he occupied and cultivated.

By the royal order of November, 20, 1790, the said Ferdinand, as an inhabitant, taking the oath of allegiance, was entitled, if he claimed the same, to a certain quantity of the vacant lands of the province, in proportion to the number of his family and slaves, if it were his election to enter on said lands and cultivate the same. The privileges and concessions, by this order extended to settlers, were to encourage emigration, and the improvement and cultivation of the wild unappropriated lands of the province; and an inhabitant, who elected to purchase improved lands on which to employ himself and family in their cultivation and improvement could have no pre-emption or inception of title until, at least, he applied for vacant lands with the intent of bona fide settling on the same. That the privilege was granted in consideration of taking possession of, and cultivating the lands, is manifest from the order and regulations of Governor White, of said province, dated at St. Augustine, October 12, 1803; by which, amongst other things, it is provided "that all concessions, on which no title is specified, shall become extinct, and shall be considered null, if the persons to whom they are made do not take possession and cultivate the same within the space of six months."

Occupancy and cultivation being essential to the validity of a concession to a settler, an inhabitant, who preferred occupying and cultivating improved lands which he had purchased from some person having a previous grant, could not, by virtue of such occupancy, claim the vacant lands appropriated to actual settlers. It also appears, that said Ferdinand did not make any such claim until May, 1819, about twenty years after taking the oath of allegiance, and some months after the treaty of cession of said province by the government of Spain to that of the United States, which was concluded at Washington on the 22d February, A. D. 1819.

Entertaining the opinion that the petitioner's claim is not brought within the provisions of the laws of Spain or the United States in relation to actual settlers, the committee report that said Ferdinand Donald McDonell is not entitled to relief.

APPLICATION OF LOUISIANA FOR DONATIONS OF LAND FOR THE PROMOTION OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 16, 1835.

The legislature of the State of Louisiana, earnestly desirous to diffuse, as widely as possible the blessings of education, thinks the importance of the object will justify what may, at first view, seem a departure from the course heretofore pursued by this State in its intercourse with the general government.

Whilst other States have urged their claims on, and received large grants of land from Congress for the promotion of this laudable purpose, Louisiana has sought nothing, and received but little. As the largest land owner in the new States, the legislature do not doubt that the United States may be fairly called on for a liberal contribution to that object, which, beyond all others, has the strongest claims on the owners of property for support.

The vast extent of public land, the great and rapidly increasing value it is constantly receiving from the industry and capital of our citizens engaged in the cultivation of our rich products, and especially the great benefit these lands derive from the levees made and kept up entirely at the expense of individual proprietors, seem to place the claims of Louisiana, on strong and peculiar grounds: Therefore,

Resolved, That our senators, and representatives in Congress, be requested to use their exertions to obtain a grant of land, for the purposes of public education in the State of Louisiana.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR THE SALE OF REFUSE LANDS IN THAT STATE, AT REDUCED PRICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 18, 1835.

A JOINT RESOLUTION AND MEMORIAL in relation to certain saline reservations therein named.

Whereas, By an act of Congress, approved July 3d, 1832, the legislature of this State was authorized to sell and convey certain lands therein mentioned, but not at a less price than that at which the public lands belonging to the United States are sold at private entry; and whereas, under several acts of the general assembly of the State of Indiana, so much of said lands as are supposed to be worth the minimum price of the public lands have been sold, leaving a residue of refused lands which cannot be sold at said price, without great delay and length of time. Therefore,

Be it resolved by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That our senators in Congress be and they are hereby instructed, and our representatives earnestly requested, to use their utmost exertions to procure the passage of an act of Congress, authorizing the legislature of this State to sell and convey such residue of said lands, without restriction as to the price thereof.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR A RAILROAD FROM EVANSVILLE TO TERRE HAUTE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 20, 1835.

A JOINT MEMORIAL to Congress, praying a grant of land to aid in the construction of a railroad from Evansville to Terre Haute.

The general assembly of the State of Indiana would respectfully call the attention of Congress to a plan of internal improvement proposed in Indiana, by the construction of a railroad between Evansville, in Vanderburgh county, and Terre Haute, in Vigo county. This work would unite the Wabash and Erie canal with the Ohio river, thereby making a complete chain of inland communication between the city of New York, by the way of the Hudson river, the Erie canal, lake Erie, the Wabash and Erie canal, and the said railroad, to the Ohio river, two hundred and fifty miles below Louisville, a route greatly preferable to any other for those who may wish to ship goods from the city of New York, either to Evansville or to any point lower down. It is contemplated to remove the obstructions below this point to river navigation; and when such improvements are made, steamboats, with but little interruption, might ply from this port, and others situate beyond and westwardly. The road would pass through the counties of Vanderburgh, Gibson, Knox and Sullivan, to Vigo,—a country, by its level surface and the materials which it could furnish, remarkably well adapted to the construction of such a work. In December, 1834, the legislature of this State granted a charter to a company for the purpose of aiding in making this desirable improvement, by the name of the Evansville and Lafayette Railroad Company. Much of the land in the counties through which this road will pass still belongs to the United States. This general assembly would respectfully recommend to Congress to make such a grant of land, of the land yet unsold, and which lies in the counties through which said road will pass, as will insure its speedy commencement and completion. No work could be of greater importance, either for the purposes of commerce or convenience of traveling, which could be made in the western country.

Resolved, That our senators be instructed, and our representatives requested to use their exertions to procure a donation of land by Congress, that will insure the speedy commencement and construction of a railroad from Evansville to Terre Haute; and that his excellency be requested to send a copy of this resolution to our senators and representatives in Congress,

CLAIMS TO CHOCTAW RESERVATIONS OF LAND UNDER THE FOURTEENTH ARTICLE OF THE TREATY OF 1830.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 23, 1835.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 20, 1834.

SIR: Jacob Thompson claims a quantity of land for himself and family, under the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. He made application to Colonel George W. Martin, the locating agent, to have his land reserved from sale, and secured to him; but the agent could not, in conformity with his instructions, act on the case, because his name was not found on the register among those who had signified their intention of remaining and becoming citizens of the States. I herewith enclose the evidence in support of his claim.

The following is a list of the papers:

No. 1. His application to Colonel Martin.
No. 2. His own affidavit, accompanied by the affidavit of John T. Hammond.
No. 3. The affidavit of Patrick Reilly.
No. 4. A certificate of Hon. D. W. Wright.
No. 5. A petition addressed to Congress by one of the chiefs and several of the captains and headmen of the Choctaw nation.
No. 6. A copy of a correspondence between Colonel William Ward, former agent, and myself, on the subject.
No. 7. A plat of the land claimed by Thompson.
No. 8. An abstract of, and argument in favor of the claim.

I request to be informed whether, in the opinion of the department, from the testimony submitted, the said Jacob Thompson is entitled to the land which he claims under the treaty.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. E. PLUMMER.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON CITY, July 9, 1834.

SIR: Jacob Thompson claims a quantity of land for himself and family, under the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. He made application to Colonel George W. Martin, the locating agent, to have his land reserved from sale, and secured to him; but the agent could not, in conformity with his instructions, act on the case, because his name was not found on the register among those who had signified their intention of remaining and becoming citizens of the States. I herewith enclose the evidence in support of his claim. The evidence shows conclusively that he comes within the provisions of the treaty, and that he signified to the agent, Colonel Ward, his intention of remaining and becoming a citizen of the State within the time prescribed. That the land which he claims has been sold, as appears from the testimony and records in the General Land Office. The residue of the lands in that region of country will be offered for sale on the first Monday in December next. I most respectfully ask the department to allow him to select one section and three-quarters of other lands of equal quality and value, and that the same may be reserved from sale until an investigation into the merits of his claim can be had, or such other order had thereon, as may be deemed advisable. If his claim is a legal or equitable one, great injustice will be done him unless he is allowed to select other lands before the sales. If his claim is not valid, no injustice can be done the government by this course.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. E. PLUMMER.

Hon. LEWIS CASS.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your petitioner, Jacob Thompson, would respectfully represent that he is descended from the tribe of Choctaw Indians, by the mother's side, and was an inhabitant of the territory ceded to the United States by that tribe, by the treaty made at Dancing Rabbit creek in 1830; that he was then married, and had living, at that time, in said territory, a wife and three children, all of whom are still living at the place where he then resided, to wit, on section thirty-one, in township twenty-two, range three east of lands subject to sale at Chocchuma; that he intended residing permanently on said land, and thereby to acquire a title according to the provisions of said treaty, and signified his intention to reside five years, and become a permanent citizen, to —— Ward, a brother, and a deputy of —— Ward, appointed to register the claims of that class herein referred to, but that said Ward refused to register his application; that, afterwards, he applied to Ward, the principal commissioner, who also refused to register his claim.

Your petitioner, before the land sales at Chocchuma, in virtue of said claim, applied to —— Martin, the commissioner on the part of the United States, to have registered and set apart to your petitioner and his three children the said section thirty-one, and the west half of said east quarter of section thirty, in said township and range; but said Martin refused to ratify his claim, on the ground that Commissioner Ward had refused to register his application; after which, one Samuel B. March covered said land by a float which he had purchased from Jefferson College.

Your petitioner is himself ignorant of the laws of the land, but is advised that he is still entitled to said land, and has conferred with said March, who is willing to withdraw his float, provided he can locate so much elsewhere before other sales are ordered.

Your petitioner further states that both said applications were made to said Ward in less than six months after the treaty at Dancing Rabbit creek.

Your petitioner prays your honorable body to consider his case, and grant such relief as may seem right and just; and, as in duty bound, he will ever pray, &c.

JACOB THOMPSON,
Per attorney, S. B. MARCH.

No. 1.

To George W. Martin, Esq.:

SIR: You are hereby notified that I am in possession of section No. 31, the south half of section No. 30, and the northwest quarter of same section, in township No. 22, of range 3 east, amounting, in all, to one section and three-quarters of a section, which I claim under and by virtue of the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. I request that the same may be reserved from sale, and secured to me in conformity with the provisions of the treaty aforesaid. As evidence of my right to said land, I refer you to the accompanying documents.

JACOB THOMPSON.

SEPTEMBER 18, 1833.

I do hereby certify that I presented to Colonel George W. Martin this notice and the accompanying documents, on the day and year within mentioned, but he refused to reserve the land therein described from sale, and assign the same to Jacob Thompson, because, as he alleged, his name was not on the register made out by Colonel Ward, and furnished him by the War Department.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Holmes County:

Before me, the undersigned, justice of the peace, personally appeared Jacob Thompson, who, being duly sworn, on oath, deposeth and saith, that he is a Choctaw by birth, a native of the Choctaw nation of Indians, and that his mother was a native Choctaw, and that he resides within the limits of that tract of country ceded to the United States by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, made and entered into between the United States of America and the Choctaw nation of Indians, on the twenty-seventh day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, and ratified by the President of the United States, in pursuance of the advice and consent of the Senate, on the fourth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one; and also that he resided there, and had an improvement and land in cultivation at the time of, and previous to, the date last aforesaid. The said Jacob Thompson further deposeth and saith, that he is the head of a family, and has a wife and five children, viz., Elizabeth, Nancy, Greenwood, Washington, and Benjamin, three of whom, viz., Elizabeth, Nancy and Greenwood, were born previous to the treaty. The said Jacob Thompson further deposeth and saith, that he signified to the United States agent for the Choctaws his intention of remaining and becoming a citizen of the State before the expiration of six months from the ratification of the treaty aforesaid, for the purpose of holding a reservation of land for himself and children, under and by virtue of the 14th article of the treaty aforesaid, in the manner prescribed by said article. The said Jacob

Thompson further deposeth and saith, that section No. 31, the south half of section No. 30, and the northwest quarter of said section in township No. 22, of range No. 3 east, making, in all, one section and three-quarters of a section, on an examination of the corner posts and trees marked by the surveyor, are found to contain his dwelling-house and improvements, and the tract of land which he had in cultivation, and on which he resided at the time aforesaid. The said Jacob Thompson further deposeth and saith, that he still continues to reside with his family on said tract of land, and cultivate the same, intending to become and remain a citizen of the State of Mississippi.

JACOB THOMPSON.

THOS. B. IVES, J. P.

I, John T. Hammond, do hereby certify that I am personally acquainted with Jacob Thompson, whose name is subscribed to the foregoing affidavit, and have been for many years. He is a native Choctaw, and has a wife and children, as stated by him. He was an actual settler and housekeeper on said tract of land, where he now resides, and was at the time stated by him in said affidavit. I was present at when he signified to the agent, Col. William Ward, his intention of remaining and becoming a citizen of the States, and made application to have his name registered. The statements made by the said Thompson in said affidavit which I have heard read, are within my own knowledge, and true in substance and fact.

JOHN T. HAMMOND.

Sworn to and subscribed, before me, the 18th day of September, 1833.

THOS. B. IVES, J. P.

I do hereby certify that I am personally acquainted with Jacob Thompson, whose name is signed to the annexed affidavit. He has the character of being an honest and industrious, but poor man. He is quite intelligent for an Indian, sufficiently so to understand the nature and solemnities of an oath. I read to him the within statement, signed and sworn to by him, and saw him sign the same. I am also acquainted with John T. Hammond, whose name is signed to the annexed affidavit. He is an intelligent white man of good character. I saw him sign said affidavit. I am also acquainted with Thomas B. Ives, before whom the affidavits were sworn to and subscribed. I know that he was an acting justice of the peace in and for the county of Holmes, and State of Mississippi, on the 18th day of September, 1833.

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, justice of the peace in and for said county, Patrick Reilly, who says, on oath, that he has resided for many years in the country ceded to the United States by the Choctaw Indians, by the treaty made at Dancing Rabbit creek in 1830; that he was present within six months after said treaty, and heard Jacob Thompson apply to Ward, a United States commissioner, and heard him signify his intention to reside permanently where he then lived in said ceded country, and requested that his name might be registered as such, and also that he was the head of a family, and had several children, say three or four: deponent further states that said Thompson is descended by the mother's side from the Choctaws lately inhabiting said country, and is a full cousin to Greenwood Leflore, one of the descendants and chief of said tribe.

P. REILLY.

To all whom it may concern:

It has been represented to me that Coleman Cole, W. King and Jacob Thompson, have forwarded, for the action of Congress, petitions (supported by affidavits and certificates) praying to be indemnified for the loss of their land, supposed to have been secured to them by the treaty made between the United States and the Choctaw tribe of Indians at Dancing Rabbit creek, in 1830, and that Patrick Reilly is one of the affiants referred to, and I am requested to state my knowledge of his character as a man of veracity.

I with pleasure state that I have known said Reilly for about ten years; a part of that time he resided near me. I have never heard his veracity questioned, and, from my personal knowledge of him, I would implicitly believe his statement to be true.

A petition to the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled.

Your petitioners respectfully represent to your honorable body, that Jacob Thompson, a native, or quarteroon, of the Choctaw nation, who has not been noticed in the treaty between the United States and said tribe of Indians, called Choctaws, claims his rights as a citizen of said nation under the cultivation act. Therefore, your petitioners think it nothing more than justice, and hope that you will have the same privilege allowed him as others registered in the said act; and your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

COLUMBUS, September 24, 1833.

DEAR SIR: John T. Harlan, Jacob Thompson and John T. Hammond, have informed me that they signified to you, as agent for the Choctaws, their intention of remaining and becoming citizens of the State, within six months from the ratification of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, for the purpose of holding a reservation of land, under the 14th article of said treaty. I have not the register before me, and understand that but an imperfect copy is in the hands of the locating agent. I am, however, of opinion, that their names are not on the register in the hands of Colonel Martin. I wish to learn from you the simple fact, whether they did signify to you their intention of remaining and becoming citizens of the States within six months from the date of the ratification of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, as stated by them: I want your statement of that fact for a particular purpose. Whether you did or did not register their names, or whether they are or are not entitled to reservations of land under the treaty, are questions hereafter to be inquired into, and upon which you will probably be called to relate all of the circumstances, and express your opinions. In your statement to me, I request nothing but a certificate of the particular fact above stated. Please give me separate certificates in each case, and enclose them to me at this place.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant, F. E. PLUMMER.

Col. WILLIAM WARD, agent for Choctaws.

CHOCTAW AGENCY, Miss., October 18, 1833.

DEAR SIR: Your note of the 24th ultimo is now before me, requesting information respecting the entries of John T. Hammond and several persons, as desirous to become citizens of the States according to the provisions of the late treaty at Dancing Rabbit creek with the Choctaws for the lands on the east side of the Mississippi river.

In answer to the first inquiry, I can say that John T. Harlan, a white man, did apply to me, within the time prescribed, to signify his intention to become a citizen. I refused to enter his name, on the grounds that he was not a resident in the Choctaw country at the time of making said treaty which you allude to. In answer to your inquiry as to the names of John T. Hammond and Jacob Thompson being registered by me for five years as citizens, if their names are not on the register, I have no recollection of the cause why they, if Choctaws, were not registered with others. You will please to observe that numbers, who did make applications to have their names registered as relinquishing lands, would come and make alterations, by the advice of their chief or captains to make alterations. I believe that all those whose names were returned to the Department of War were correct, with allowing for errors that might be made in the entries, as after changed to suit the wishes of the persons interested. I have no doubt that, in some cases, errors were committed by the frequent changes of names and persons, that I could not at any time control. But whenever any error has been discovered, the locating agent ought to correct it, to do justice to all who may be concerned.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM WARD.

Hon. F. E. PLUMMER.

No. 8.

Abstract, &c., of the case of Jacob Thompson.

Jacob Thompson claims one section and three-quarters of land, viz., section No. 31, and the northwest, the southwest, and the southeast quarters of section No. 30, of township No. 22, in range 3 east, for himself and three children, under and by virtue of the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. The 14th article of the treaty provides that "each Choctaw," &c. (see Laws, 30, 31, Appendix, page 129.) Colonel William Ward, then agent for the Choctaws, it seems, immediately after the ratification of the treaty, under instructions from the War Department, registered the names of such of the Indians, who were desirous to remain and become citizens, as signified to him their intention within the prescribed time. The register or list of names was returned to the War Department. Colonel George W. Martin, the agent appointed to locate the reservations under the treaty, refused to locate the reservation claimed by Thompson, because his name was not on the register made out by Colonel Ward, which he took as his guide, under instructions from the War Department. He now asks, as a matter of right, that the said tract of land may be secured to him according to the provisions of the treaty. The question which presents itself to the department for consideration is, whether Thompson comes within the provisions of the treaty. If the right to the before-described tract of land was vested in him by the treaty aforesaid, he cannot be divested of this right, without a manifest breach of good faith on the part of the government. In order to entitle him to the peaceable and quiet possession of one section of land for himself, and one quarter section for each of his three children, it is only necessary for him to show, to the satisfaction of the department, 1st. That he is a Choctaw, and was the head of a family at the time of the ratification of the treaty. 2d. That he had at that time an improvement within the limits of the nation. 3d. That he is desirous to remain and continue a citizen of the State of Mississippi; and 4th. That he signified to the agent his intention of so remaining, within six months from the ratification of the treaty.

These are all questions of fact susceptible of proof, and are proven by the testimony of Thompson himself, John T. Hammond, and P. Reilly. This testimony must be considered satisfactory, unless the credibility of the witnesses is impeached. The fact of his name not being on the register or list returned to the department, does not, and cannot prejudice his claim. There is no such thing as a register known to the treaty. It was made out in conformity with instructions from the Secretary of War, as a guide to the department in the settlement and adjustment of the claims; and although it is prima facie evidence of the rights of those whose names are therein enrolled, it cannot be considered as evidence against those whose names are not there. The circumstance of his name not being on the register, may be a reason why the facts should be inquired into and thoroughly scrutinized, but cannot, in good faith, be urged as a plausible reason why the poor Indian should be robbed of the only means of providing a subsistence for his wife and children, and driven from the land of his fathers without a resting place which he can call his own. There is no cause assigned why Colonel Ward did not register his name; he does not assign any himself; he probably neglected it through mistake. The only act required to be performed by Thompson as a condition precedent on his part to secure him in the possession of his land, was to signify "his intention to the agent within six months from the ratification of the treaty." This he did, and rested quietly under the supposition that the agent would do his duty. The neglect of the agent cannot deprive Thompson of the land secured to him by a solemn treaty. Any other evidence that Thompson did signify within the time, which is satisfactory to the department, is as good as the register, which is nothing more nor less than evidence.

PLUMMER, for claimant.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI:

John R. Countee states and says, that he is a citizen of the Choctaw nation of Indians, a husband and father, and the head of a Choctaw family; that he resides within the limits of that portion of country ceded to the United States by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, made and entered into on the twenty-seventh day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, between the United States and the Choctaw nation of Indians; and that he resided within the limits of said nation, with his family, and had an improvement and land in cultivation, at the time of the making of the treaty aforesaid. The said John R. Countee further states and says, that he had in actual cultivation, with a dwelling-house thereon, during the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, more than twelve acres of land. The said John R. Countee further states and says, that the northwest quarter of section two, of township sixteen, in range one west of the basis meridian, situate on what is commonly called Honey island, (on an examination of the corner posts and lines marked by the surveyor,) is found to include his improvement and dwelling-house, where he resided with his family at the time of the making of the treaty aforesaid. The said John R. Countee further states and says, that he applied to the agent to have his name registered among the other Choctaws for a reservation; the agent seemed to discourage the idea, and he does not know whether it was registered or not.

RANKIN, July 9, 1833.

Thomas Stewart states, on oath, that he was a citizen of the Choctaw nation of Indians, a husband and father, and the head of a Choctaw family. He resided there, and had in actual cultivation, during the year 1830, more than 12 (about 14) acres of land, with a dwelling-house thereon. He signified, in person, to the agent, Col. Ward, his intention of remaining and becoming a citizen of the States, for the purpose of holding a reservation under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, but the agent expressed an unwillingness to register him for a five years' stay. Col. Armstrong, when he was in the county, for the purpose of registering the names of the Indians, informed him that he would be entitled to one eighth (80 acres) of land under the 19th article of the treaty; but he understands that he has been excluded from the number of those entitled to that quantity, under the limitation prescribed in the said article. The land on which he resided is known as the S. W. quarter of sec. 10, of t. 16, in r. 1 W. (of the basis meridian.)

David Cochnaur swears to all of the material facts, excepting as to the number of acres and the numbers of the land; identifies it as being on Honey island, (where Stewart locates it;) has known Stewart for 8 years; is honest, industrious, and intelligent, for an uneducated man. Gilbert B. Collins swears that the statements made by Stewart are true, in substance and fact, excepting as to the quantity of land, which he never measured. Gives it as his opinion, from the appearance of the field, that there was 12 acres or more.

The testimony of John T. Harlan corroborates the statements made by Stewart; never measured the land; should think, from appearance, there was from 12 to 15 acres.

S. Atchinson certifies that he knows Gilbert B. Collins and David Cochnaur, two of the deponents, and that full faith and credit ought to be given to their statements on oath.

His name is not registered. The land which he claims is now advertised for sale. This case is recognized by Major Armstrong, and is the one referred to by him in his letter to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, April 25, 1834, on file in the office. See 15th interrogatory, and Commissioner's reply, of May 30.

FEBRUARY 24, 1832.

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom were referred the memorials of John T. Harlan and of Ca[illegible]. Tuckaloona, and others of the Choctaw nation, have, according to order, had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

The memorialists represent, that John T. Harlan, a citizen of the Choctaw nation, in the State of Mississippi, intermarried many years ago with a Cherokee woman, and, in the year 1821, removed with his family into the Choctaw nation, where he has ever since resided. They settled among the Choctaws, by the permission of the authorities of the nation, and were, according to the forms, ceremonies, usages, and customs of the Choctaws, soon afterwards adopted into, and made members of, the Choctaw family or tribe; and, by virtue of such adoption, were entitled to, did enjoy, and have ever since continued to enjoy, all of the rights, immunities, and privileges of native citizens of the Choctaw tribe of Indians. The children of said Harlan, nine in number, were, by the Choctaw authorities, recognized as Choctaws, from the time of their adoption as aforesaid, and admitted into the missionary schools on an equal footing with the children of the most favored Choctaw families. He is represented as an honest, honorable, but poor man. He settled on a tract of land on Honey island, in Little river, not far from its junction with the Yazoo, where he has, ever since the year 1821 or '22, continued to live, and cultivate a little farm; and by his industry, in a reputable manner, has supported and educated a numerous family, consisting of a wife and nine children, who were dependent on the sweat of his brow for a livelihood. Within six months after the ratification of the treaty made and entered into between the United States and the mingoes, chiefs, captains, and warriors of the Choctaw nation, at Dancing Rabbit creek, on the twenty-seventh day of September, 1830, Harlin, on behalf of himself, his wife and children, signified to Col. William Ward, the United States agent for the Choctaws, their intention of remaining and continuing citizens of the United States, for the purpose of obtaining a reservation of land for himself and children, under and by virtue of the fourteenth article of the aforesaid treaty. But it seems that the agent rejected the application, and refused to register their names for a reservation. It does not appear on what ground the agent predicated his refusal; but it is more than probable that he rejected the application, because he did not consider Mr. Harlan, in the language of the treaty, as a "Choctaw head of a family." It is true that there is among the papers accompanying the memorial, a certificate, signed by several persons, charging the agent with being "actuated solely by personal and private feeling of enmity towards said Harlan;" but the known integrity of Col. Ward as an officer to one of the committee is sufficient to repel the charge, and forbid the idea of his being actuated by improper motives. It is also stated that Harlan was one of those who aided our country in the war with the Creek nation of Indians. The memorialists ask Congress to pass a law extending to the said John Harlan the same rights and privileges guaranteed by the article of the treaty before mentioned, to native Choctaws, and to those who have intermarried with native Choctaws.

The committee do not deem it necessary to enter into an investigation of the tribel laws, usages, or customs of the Choctaws, in relation to the right of the mingoes, chiefs, or captains of the nation, to admit into their territory, on a footing with the natives, a citizen of any other tribe; nor to enter into a repetition of the arguments contained in the report, made by the same committee to the House, in favor of Joseph Dukes. (See report No. 246.) It is sufficient for the committee, in the present inquiry, that Harlan, on principles of equity and justice, as well as sound policy, is entitled to the same privileges extended, by the 14th article of the treaty, to those who were adopted by the authorities of the nation, and intermarried with native Choctaws. The facts set forth in this report, which is nothing more than a simple abstract of the case, gathered from the evidence adduced by the petitioners, are, by the committee, submitted to the consideration of the House without comment. If Harlan had married a Choctaw, instead of a Cherokee, he would have been entitled to a reservation, under the treaty, of six hundred and forty acres of land for himself, to three hundred and twenty acres for each unmarried child over ten years of age, and to one hundred and sixty acres for each child under ten years of age. The same reasons which induced the government to grant to the head of each Choctaw family and his children conditional reservations of land, agreeably to the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty above referred to, are, in the opinion of the committee, sufficient for them to recommend the granting of the prayer of the petitioners. The committee therefore report a bill, to be entitled "An act for the relief of John T. Harlan."

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR COUNTY SEATS AND BUILDINGS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 24, 1835.

A JOINT MEMORIAL AND RESOLUTION of the general assembly of the State of Indiana.

To the honorable the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists respectfully represent to your honorable body that they have, at their present session, laid off into counties and designated the boundaries, to wit: The counties of Adams, Noble, Jay, Wells, De Kalb Steuben, Whitby, Kosciusko, Fulton, Marshall, Stark, Pulaski, Jasper, Newton, and Porter, being all the unorganized territory within the State of Indiana to which the Indian title has been extinguished. Your memorialists believe that the interest of the general government will be greatly promoted by laying off the said unorganized territory into counties, and designating and permanently establishing their boundaries, as it will have a tendency to increase the sale of the government lands, and also prevent speculators from defrauding the public. Your memorialists would therefore respectfully request your honorable body to pass a law donating one-half section of land to each of said counties, for the purpose of locating the county seat, and erecting public buildings for each county; and that the United States land officers, within their respective land districts in said State, be authorized by law to select and reserve from sale one-half section of land as near the centre of each of said counties as the said officers may deem most suitable for the purpose of locating a county seat for each county. Therefore,

Be it resolved by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing memorial and the resolution to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

ON CLAIM TO LAND IN ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 24, 1835.

Mr. LINCOLN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of Matthew Arbuckle, with accompanying documents, reported:

The memorialist represents, that, on the 17th of February, 1829, he purchased, in the then Lawrence land district, Arkansas Territory, in township 9 north, and range 29 and 30, several tracts of land, which he describes as follows:

Eight hundred and forty-five acres 69-100, from Charles Kelly.

Three hundred and twenty-one acres 40-100, from John Ringgold.

Two hundred and sixty acres 32-100, from John McLaughlin.

One hundred and ninety-four acres 68-100, from William Hull.

That these tracts of land were entered under Spanish claims, which had been confirmed by the land courts of Arkansas Territory at the time he purchased the same, and that he paid therefor a valuable consideration in money, at the time of the purchase.

The memorialist further represents, that, at the same time, he purchased from Robert Crittenden a Spanish claim for three hundred and forty acres 28-100, which he paid for, and immediately located.

That, afterwards, he purchased from John C. Sumner ninety-seven acres 13-100, which had been located by William G. Shannon, under a Spanish claim; and from John Rogers, seventy-five acres 85-100, which was located by T. Dickinson, also under a Spanish claim, and that for these tracts he paid an adequate consideration.

The memoralist states his peculiar situation at the time, and the particular circumstances under which he made these purchases, and avers that he had reason to believe that the Spanish claims under which these several tracts of land were located were valid, and had been duly confirmed by a court of the United States having jurisdiction of the matter pursuant to a law of Congress; but that, subsequently, these supposed Spanish claims were proven to be spurious, the judgments of confirmation have been reversed, and the title which he had to the lands has been wholly avoided, and he has been altogether deprived of his interest therein.

Inasmuch, therefore, as he relied upon the judgments of confirmation of the original grants by the courts of the United States, and was a bona fide purchaser, for a valuable consideration, of the lands, or rights of location under the grants, and ignorant of any fraud in relation thereto, he seeks relief from Congress, either by a grant of patents to the same lands without charge, or by permission to enter them, at such sum, not exceeding the minimum price of the public lands, as, under the circumstances, shall seem just.

It satisfactorily appears to the committee, from the showing of the memorialist, and the papers in the case, that the title of the land described in the memorial was derived to him from certain judgments of confirmation of supposed Spanish grants rendered by the superior court of the Territory of Arkansas, sitting as a court of equity. Under the provisions of an act of Congress, passed on the 26th day of May, 1824, entitled "An act enabling the claimants to land within the limits of the State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas, to institute proceedings to try the validity of their claims," numerous petitions were filed in the office of the clerk of the said superior court, in the month of November, 1827, in the names of different petitioners, respectively praying confirmation of certain grants of land, and orders of survey, alleged to have been made to them in different years, from 1785 to 1799, by Miro, Spanish governor general of the province of Louisiana; which said grants, by reason of the lapse of time, and of the transfer of the territory under the treaty of 1803, between the French republic and the United States, could not then be located without the intervention of the authority of the latter government. On each of these petitions, to the number of one hundred and thirty, a subpœna, to show cause why the grants, respectively therein mentioned, should not be confirmed, was issued to the district attorney of the United States, returnable at the term of the court then next to be holden, in December, 1827. At that term the district attorney appeared for the United States, and, protesting his utter ignorance of the matters alleged in the several petitions, and his want of opportunity, from the short notice of a few days, to be informed of the facts contained therein, and to answer the process, moved for a continuance, and time to reply thereto. The motion was overruled, and upon the testimony offered, ex parte, in support of the petitions, and applicable alike in its character to each and all of them, the court proceeded to render judgment of confirmation of all grants in the several cases, in the names of the petitioners respectively, against the United States.

Subsequently suspicions became excited of fraud and imposition upon the court, in the procurement of the before-mentioned judgments, by the party interested therein, and the district attorney of the United States, at the April term, 1830, of the said superior court of the Territory of Arkansas, filed bills of review in all the cases, founded on the allegation that the supposed grants of the Spanish governor, Miro, to the original petitioners in equity, were forgeries of the name of the said governor, and that the witnesses who had testified in support of those grants, and upon whose testimony, in aid thereof, the judgments of confirmation had been obtained, had committed gross and corrupt perjuries; and, further, that the names of the petitioners were altogether fictitious, there never having been such persons in existence, or if so, they had long before deceased. After a due course of proceedings upon said writs of review, the judgments of confirmation of the grants aforesaid, in each and all of the original cases, were reversed and annulled by the judgment of said court, by reason and on account of the fraud, forgery, and perjury, made manifest, and fully established as alleged. The committee do not find it necessary to go more particularly into the history of these proceedings, inasmuch as they are specially and technically set forth in an abstract of the case of Bernardo Sampeyreac and Joseph Stewart, appellants, against the United States, from the judgment of the said superior court of the Territory of Arkansas, which abstract accompanied the papers referred with the memorial to the committee, and is herewith returned; and, also, in a report of the same case adjudged in the Supreme Court of the United States upon appeal, and to be found in the seventh volume of Peters' Reports; the facts and principles involved in the final decision of that case being alike applicable to all the others, to which reference has been had, including those under which the title of the memorialist was derived.

The writs of review before mentioned, and the jurisdiction of the court therein, appear to have been sustained under and by force of a law of Congress, passed the 8th day of May, 1830, entitled "An act for further extending the powers of the judges of the superior court of the Territory of Arkansas, under the act of the 26th of May, 1824, and for other purposes." The constitutionality of the law, with its applicability to, and the effect of its provisions upon the previous judgments, were specially considered, and fully decided, upon the trial of the review in the case reported.

The memorialist, however, now claims that, notwithstanding the acknowledged fraud and perjury by which the original judgments of confirmation were obtained, and the subsequent reversal of those judgments by reason thereof, he is entitled, in equity, to the lands against the United States, inasmuch as he was an innocent and bona fide purchaser, for a valuable consideration, and relied, at the time of his purchase, upon the faith of the government, and the original adjudications of confirmation by a court of the United States, under the laws of Congress, to sustain his title. This position has not escaped the attentive consideration of the committee.

It appears, from the record of the case of Sampeyreac and Stewart vs. the United States, before referred to, that one John J. Bowie had represented all the nominal petitioners, in the whole number of the one hundred and thirty cases originally brought before the superior court of the Territory of Arkansas, and that he had committed or procured the forgery of the name of the Spanish governor, Miro, to the grants of land, and suborned the perjuries by which they had been supported. On filing the bills of review, a subpœna to answer thereto had been issued to each of the original petitioners, not one of whom could be found; and it was conceded, upon the trial of the review, that no such persons existed, and that Bowie was the real and only party to the proceedings. In the meantime, however, (subsequent to the judgment of confirmation of the supposed grants in the original suits, and the suing out the writs of review,) Bowie had fabricated grants in the name of the original supposed petitioners, conveying their rights, acquired by the judgments of confirmation, to himself, and in the whole number of cases had transferred these rights to third persons, who claimed thereupon to be admitted as parties to the bills of review, to defend their interest and title, derived, as they alleged, under a bona fide purchase from him, without suspicion of fraud, and for a valuable consideration. The court admitted these parties accordingly, and an issue was made up between the district attorney, acting for the United States, on the one hand, and the claimants, under Bowie, on the other, by which to try the effect of the original judgment of confirmation upon the rights of subsequent bona fide purchasers. To several of the cases in review, the memorialist himself, as appears by the copy of the record before the committee, thus became a party, and the claim to the lands purchased by him under the supposed Spanish grants, and for the loss of which he now asks indemnity, was, among others, submitted to the judgment of the court, and which, with the principal case of Sampeyreac and Stewart, before referred to, was involved in the final decision. In that case, it was conceded that Stewart, who was admitted as a party upon the review, was an innocent and bona fide purchaser under Bowie, yet it was held by the superior court of Arkansas, and afterwards affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States on appeal, first, that the original judgment of confirmation was absolutely and in itself null and void for want of a real party to the process, the petitioner being a fictitious and feigned person: second, that, by the fraud, forgery, and perjury committed in procuring the judgment, by Bowie, and afterwards his forgery in making a conveyance to himself, a third person claiming through him, however innocent, could have no better title to the property than Bowie himself acquired by force of such judgment and conveyance: and, thirdly, that, by the judgment of confirmation, even if unreversed, the original party to the record had but an equity under the statute of 1824, to be matured into a title upon the issuing of a patent for the lands located, but which was not assignable before the issuing of the patent, and, therefore, that a bona fide purchaser of this equity must take it subject to all the impeachment to which it was liable in the hands of the original claimant.

The committee find nothing in the case of the memorialist to distinguish it favorably from the right of Stewart, in the case referred to. Both placed themselves before the courts in the attitude of bona fide purchasers of Spanish grants, confirmed by the superior court of the Territory of Arkansas, pursuant to a law of Congress. Each, alike, although in different cases, were parties to the review of the judgments of confirmation, and are alike concluded by the final adjudication of reversal, in the titles which they attempt to maintain under and by force of those judgments. The highest judicial tribunal of the land has pronounced against them, that neither in law nor equity had they acquired, by the grants to them, a title to the lands against the United States, and that, by the application of known principles to the circumstances under which these purchases were made, they are not to be recognized as bona fide purchasers without notice. That, in taking an assignment of an equity under the judgments of confirmation, when the law expressly gave the legal title to the lands only to the patentee, they took it subject to the peril of impeachment, by a reversal of the judgments.

Upon the foregoing view of the merits of the claim of the memorialist to relief from the United States, this committee are of the opinion that his case is placed upon the same ground with that of every other of the numerous purchasers of these fabricated Spanish grants. To yield to his appeal would be to open the door to demands of an entirely novel character, and to an unforeseen extent. It would be little else than to give indemnity for misfortune to those who suffer by fraud; or, rather, to repair inadvertence, where precaution in contracts would guard against loss, by reference to the responsibility of those with whom the party deals.

But there are other circumstances, apparent from the papers submitted to the committee, which, as this application has before been the subject of examination, and may again be presented to the consideration of Congress, it may be proper at this time to state. The memorialist insists that he is a bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration, without notice of the fraud. What is notice, is matter of legal inference. The law construes many facts, short of actual communication, into legal notice. In other words, circumstances which should excite suspicion, and put a prudent man upon inquiry, may amount to notice. The memorialist has filed in the case copies of several of the deeds of conveyance under which he claims to have derived his title to the lands. These deeds are so general, and yet so vague in the description, that, without the aid of parol testimony, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to determine the identity of the lands conveyed thereby, with the entries alleged to be made under the supposed Spanish grants. The quantities in the certificates of these grants and orders of survey, when compared with the deeds, appear to be greater, and the description in terms so different, as to render it uncertain, from comparison, whether they apply to the same tracts. Nor is the regular chain of conveyance from the confirmed grants made out by the exhibition of the intermediate assignments, so as to enable the committee to decide that whatever right may be supposed to have been acquired by the original petitioners in equity under the judgments of confirmation, was, before the reversal of those judgments, transferred to the memorialist. In all these respects, the case of the memorialist is defective. The appeal to Congress is substantially for indemnity for losses of property purchased under reliance upon a title derived from a judgment of a court of the United States. It would seem reasonable, at least, that the party asking relief should show that, but for the reversal of this judgment, his title to the property would have been complete.

The committee are led, in this equitable view of the case, to notice another circumstance. All the deeds of conveyance, save one, to the memorialist, are by indenture, and contain covenants for better assurance of the lands, by the execution and delivery of such other or further deeds or conveyances as may be necessary to convey the title to the memorialist in fee simple, after the issuing of the patents therefor. These covenants are proof of a recognition by the memorialist to the legal position, that his purchase was of an equity only, to be perfected into a title after the issuing of the patents by a conveyance of the lands. The memorialist must have trusted for his assurance of a legal title to these covenants, and, as it seems to the committee, might with the same propriety appeal to Congress for indemnity for the refusal of the covenanter to fulfill his engagements in making the conveyance, had that been the state of the case, as now to make good his defect of title through fraud in its origin.

There is another collateral circumstance which has fallen within the observation of the committee, having a bearing upon the claim of the memorialist to be regarded as a bona fide purchaser of the lands, without notice of the liability of the title to impeachment. In a paper filed in the case, purporting to come from him, and apparently in his handwriting, dated at Fort Gibson, September 22, 1831, is contained a schedule of the title deeds to the lands described in his petition. The paper is headed "a memorandum of location made on the island in township 9 north, ranges 29 and 30, at the land office in Batesville, and purchased and paid for in February, 1829, by Colonel M. Arbuckle;" and against the tract last entered in the memorandum is the following note: "Purchased for a price of more than three dollars per acre; the money not paid in consequence of there being a doubt, at the time of the purchase, whether this claim would be subject to review." Here is a distinct and explicit admission, (unless the note can be explained in a manner repugnant to the language,) that the memorialist, at the time of his purchase at Batesville, apprehended that the title to the lands supposed to be acquired by the judgments of confirmation were liable to impeachment by a review of those judgments, and in one instance, at least, he took care to protect himself, by withholding the payment of the consideration. In other instances, with like precaution, he may have looked to the covenants for his security. But whether this be so or otherwise, cannot be material to the point of notice, if he was apprised of the hazard which he took by the purchase.

In respect to seventy-five acres and $\frac{83}{100}$ of land, represented by the memorialist to have been purchased by him of John Rogers, the copy of the deed filed in the case as evidence, purports a conveyance from John Rogers and wife of several tracts of land, one of which is of the quantity before mentioned. It happens, however, unfortunately for the memorialist, if the deed applies at all to the tract described in his memorial, that its date is the 26th of December, 1832, more than two years subsequent to the reversal of the judgment of confirmation under which he derives his title. There would seem, therefore, no foundation for the assumption that confidence in the original judgment of the court had betrayed him into a reliance upon the validity of this grant.

No evidence whatever of a conveyance from Robert Crittenden of the tract alleged to have been purchased of him is found in the case.

Upon the whole, the committee are of the opinion, as well from what appears in the papers submitted to them, as from the default of the memorialist to show an equitable claim against the United States in the judicial proceedings which have been had touching the title to the lands, that he is not entitled to the relief which he seeks. They therefore submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition of Matthew Arbuckle ought not to be granted.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The memorial of Matthew Arbuckle humbly showeth: That on the 14th day of February, 1829, he purchased, in the then Lawrence land district, Arkansas Territory, in township 9 north, and ranges 29 and 30 west, the following tracts of land, viz:

Eight hundred and forty-five acres $\frac{69}{100}$ from Charles Kelly; three hundred and twenty-one acres $\frac{40}{100}$ from John Ringgold; two hundred and sixty acres $\frac{32}{100}$ from John McLaughlin; and one hundred and ninety-four acres $\frac{68}{100}$ from William Hull.

Your memorialist states that all these tracts of land were entered by Spanish claims, which had been confirmed by the land court of the Arkansas Territory at the time he purchased the same. That for the land he purchased from Charles Kelly and John Ringgold, he paid $$1.18\frac{3}{4}$ per acre; and for the land purchased from John McLaughlin and William Hull, he paid $1.50 per acre. The whole purchase amounting to $40.80 more than the minimum price of public land; the whole of the money having been paid at the time of the purchase.

Your memorialist further states that at the same time he purchased from Robert Crittenden, a Spanish claim for four hundred arpens, or three hundred and forty acres $\frac{28}{100}$ and paid him $1 per acre, and immediately located the said claim.

Your memorialist afterwards purchased from John C. Sumner ninety-seven acres $\frac{13}{100}$ of land, at the price of upwards of $3 per acre, which had been located by William G. Shannon by a Spanish claim. And your memorialist also purchased from John Rogers, seventy-five acres $\frac{85}{100}$ of land, which was located by T. Dickinson, by a Spanish claim, and for which your memorialist paid upwards of $5 per acre.

Your memorialist avers that when he made the purchases of the land and claim at Batesville, on the 17th of February, 1829, he was on his way from Fort Gibson to Jefferson barracks, in Missouri, on public duty; and as his engagements allowed him but little intercourse with the citizens of Arkansas Territory, he inquired particularly if there was any doubt of the validity of the Spanish claims by which these lands were held, and was assured there was none; that patents had been issued upon some of them; and it was not until the bill of review had been applied for, or granted, in the fall of 1829, that he had reason to apprehend that some of the claims passed by the land court were of a spurious character: and it was shortly after this that your memorialist was informed that most of the claims passed by the said land court had been presented by an individual called Bowie, as claims he had purchased in Louisiana. Until this time, your memorialist had supposed that each claimant had appeared before the court, and proved his claim.

And your memorialist avers that, in the transaction of the 17th of February, 1829, he was a fair and innocent purchaser of the lands and Spanish claim for a valuable consideration.

And in the purchase of the lands from Rogers and Sumner at a subsequent period, although the bill of review of such claims had been granted, still your memorialist, from the most respectable authority, was advised that the individuals for whose benefit those tracts had been located, were as much entitled to relief from the government as any that held lands by virtue of Spanish claims. It appears, however, that by an adjudication since made upon the bill of review, all these Spanish claims derived from Bowie have been set aside as spurious, by which your memorialist has been subject to the loss of all the beforementioned land, and his improvements thereon, except one hundred and three acres $\frac{3}{100}$ of the land purchased from Charles Kelly, which it appears was covered by a good claim granted to Terrance and Mary Farrelly.

Under all these circumstances, your memorialist conceives that, in equity and justice, he and those from whom he purchased lands are entitled to relief.

The land was purchased under the sanction of a decision of the United States court expressly charged with the examination of land claims in the Territory of Arkansas; and as they and your memorialist have once paid a valuable consideration for these claims, it would seem that we ought not to be subjected to the total loss of our money; but that patents should be granted for the land referred to, without further charge, as it is well understood that there is no prospect of obtaining a cent from Bowie, who committed the fraud.

If Congress should not deem it expedient to comply with this reasonable proposition, then your memorialist considers it but common justice that himself and those from whom he purchased should have the privilege of entering and locating the several tracts of land referred to, and now held by your memorialist, for such sum, not exceeding the minimum price of public lands, as may be deemed just: provided these entries and locations shall be made within twelve months after the passage of a law for that purpose.

With these observations, your memorialist submits his case to the wisdom of Congress, in confidence that justice will be done him.

And your memorialist, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

M. ARBUCKLE.

CANTONMENT GIBSON, September 22, 1831.

SIR: The foregoing will inform you of the lands I purchased at Batesville, in February, 1829, and the price paid for them, (at the time of purchase,) except the land held by the claim of Duberg, as well as of the claim of James Anderson, which was purchased and paid for at the same time and place. All of the claims by which the lands are held, except that of Torrance and Mary Farrelly, I am informed, are regarded of spurious character.

The above exhibit, it is believed, will be found to accord with my answer before the land court at Little Rock, and, if so certified by the clerk of that court, it is presumed will furnish sufficient evidence, or all the evidence necessary to present these claims to the consideration of Congress at its next session, so far as I am interested; yet I doubt not that you will, before your departure from the territory, obtain a transcript from the records of the land court, in all cases where it may appear that lands are held by claims of the character referred to, by innocent purchasers, or where a valuable consideration has been paid for lands, or claims so purchased, as it is believed that the time has nearly arrived when it must and ought to be finally determined whether the government or the innocent purchasers are to suffer the loss, admitting the claims to be of the fraudulent character attributed to them. The land I purchased under the claim of Juan Duberg has not been paid for; the reason for the delay of payment is given.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. ARBUCKLE.

H. BOSWELL, Register.

I wrote to Colonel Boswell as soon as I heard that some of the Spanish claims passed by the land court of Arkansas were regarded as spurious, and that it was probable they would be again brought before that court on a bill of review, and requested him to inform me if the Spanish claims by which the land I had purchased at Batesville, on the 17th February, 1829, had been located; and the foregoing is his statement on this subject. In the deeds to me from Charles Kelly, I notice two errors: First, one of the tracts purchased of him, of eighty acres, is described as the S. W. fractional $\frac{1}{4}$ section 30, township 9 N., range 29 W., ought to have been the W. $\frac{1}{2}$ S. W. fractional $\frac{1}{4}$ section 30, township 9 N., range 29 W. It also appears that the tract he sold me, containing $101\frac{3}{100}$ acres, was altogether omitted in the deed; and this will appear obvious from a calculation of the number of acres I purchased of Mr. Kelly. The last tract is located by Farrelly's claim, which, I am informed, is good; and that all the other tracts that I purchased, which are located by Spanish claims, have been set aside on bill of review. The tract purchased of John C. Sumner, to wit, the S. W. fractional $\frac{1}{4}$ section 31, township 9 N., range 29 W., containing $97\frac{13}{100}$ acres, was located by William G. Shannon, or Richard Searcy, deceased, under the claim of Juan Duberg, and the east fractional part of the N. E. fractional $\frac{1}{4}$ section 30, township 9 N., range 29 W., containing $75\frac{83}{100}$ acres, was located by Colonel Townsend Dickinson, and by deed transferred from him to James Wilson, and by said Wilson to John Rogers, of whom I purchased. By an examination at the General Land Office, I presume, it will be readily ascertained under whose Spanish claim this tract was located.

This is accompanied by certified copies of the deeds I received from Charles Kelly, John Ringgold, William Hull, John McLaughlin, John Rogers, and John C. Sumner, which deeds were drawn up by an attorney employed by me, and I supposed it was done in the best legal manner, being unacquainted with papers of this character. At the same time, I had no doubt of the validity of these claims, nor did I hear anything to the prejudice of them for seven or eight months after I became the purchaser of lands at Batesville.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR PERMISSION TO TAX LANDS SOLD BY THE UNITED STATES IN HER LIMITS FROM THE TIME OF SALE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 25, 1835.

Resolved by the senate and the house of representatives of the State of Illinois, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their influence to procure the consent of the Congress of the United States to rescind so much of the compact between this State and the United States as prohibits this State from taxing land sold in it by the United States for five years from and after the time of such sale.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR A CANAL IN THE VALLEY OF THE WHITE RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 25, 1835.

A MEMORIAL AND JOINT RESOLUTION to the Congress of the United States.

To the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the State of Indiana,

RESPECTFULLY REPRESENT:

That a canal, connecting the Wabash and Erie canal with the valley of White river, at some eligible point north of Indianapolis, and thence down said White river to its junction with the Wabash, or to some eligible point on the Ohio river, would, in the opinion of your memorialists, be of common importance to the people of the United States, as well as those of Indiana, as well for national as local purposes, and as well to facilitate commerce as to provide for the national defence; and would, therefore, beg leave to call the attention of the national authorities to the expediency of appropriating a suitable portion of the public lands in this State to the construction of the same. Arguments to prove the advantages of internal improvements such as here contemplated to the general government, as well as to this State, are deemed unnecessary in addressing your enlightened body, on a subject so well understood by the American people as the one under consideration. In adverting to the public lands within the limits of the State as a source of means to aid internal improvements now, as formerly, the general assembly must strenuously contend that the principles of State equality, plainly recognized in the Constitution of the United States, present to us high and reasonable ground to occupy, in soliciting the application of a considerable portion of them to uses in which there must be a mutual participation of advantages on the part of the whole confederacy, as well as on ours. In presenting the present work to the view of Congress, it is only necessary to look at the map of the State, and the course of rivers, to be forcibly struck with the conviction that the general government must, in the event of its completion, be a large participator in the benefits resulting from the construction of such a canal in peace, and more especially in war. It will constitute a lateral arm of the great Wabash and Erie canal, reaching south as far as the seat of government in Indiana, or further, and penetrating a rich and flourishing country, to at least the great thoroughfare of the nation designed for the march of armies, as well as the advancement of commerce. As therefore, we consider this as but a continuation of the Wabash and Erie canal, and intended to enlarge its benefits and profits both to the State and nation, we are induced to pray your honorable body to place this work on the same footing, as to the amount of land to be granted, as the said Wabash and Erie canal, except that we may for this object, owing to the quantity of land sold on its contemplated route, be compelled to receive a quantity of land elsewhere than contiguous to the line of the canal, in such cases when it cannot be purchased in the immediate vicinity on either side.

Resolved, by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That our senators in Congress be, and they are hereby instructed, and our representatives earnestly requested to use every becoming exertion to obtain of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, an appropriation of land equal to five sections to each mile of canal, to be selected as in the foregoing memorial contemplated, to aid in the construction of the aforesaid canal.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing memorial and joint resolution to each of our senators and representatives in Congress as speedily as possible.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR PERMISSION TO PURCHASE CERTAIN LANDS IN THAT STATE AT REDUCED PRICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 25, 1835.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Indiana respectfully represents, That there is a large tract of land that belongs to the United States that lies in this State, between Munceytown, in Delaware county, and Michigan city, in Laporte county; and that a part of this land has been in market for eleven years, and remains unsold, and of no use to the United States; and that it is, most of it, so remote from navigable streams that would enable the agriculturist to convey his produce to a market, that there is but little inducement for emigrants to settle in this region of country. And as it is the interest and correct policy of the State to encourage the settlement of her whole territory with an industrious and enterprising agricultural people, and it would be a great inducement to the immediate settlement of the country, and afford great facilities to the citizens of this State, by the construction of a railroad or canal from Munceytown to Fort Wayne, and from thence to Michigan city; and as, by the construction of said road, it would at once enhance the value of said lands through which said road or canal would pass, and those lying contiguous thereto, to an amount, as is believed, sufficient to defray the expense of constructing said road or canal, which would be alike advantageous to the United States and this State: Therefore,

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested to use their exertions to procure the passage of a law giving Indiana the right to purchase, by an agent she may appoint for that purpose, of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on a credit of not less than five years, and at a price not to exceed fifty cents per acre, a strip of land ten miles in width, from Munceytown, in Delaware county, to Fort Wayne, in Allen county, and from thence to Michigan city, in Laporte county: the proceeds of the sales of said lands, after paying the cost, to be applied to the construction of a railroad or canal on said route.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to forward copies of the foregoing memorial and resolution to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

LAND CLAIMS IN THE VINCENNES LAND DISTRICT IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 24, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 23, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution adopted by the House of Representatives on the 11th December last, calling for certain information in relation to land claims in the Vincennes land district in the State of Indiana, I have the honor herewith to transmit to the House of Representatives a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the documents accompanying that report.

The cause of the delay in replying to this call of the House will be perceived from the accompanying letters, marked X, Y, and Z.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JOHN BELL, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

X.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 16, 1835.

SIR: Some weeks ago a resolution was adopted in this House requiring certain information in relation to land claims in the Vincennes land district, Indiana, particularly specified therein; I beg leave to inquire at what period an answer may be expected?

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. EWING.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 17, 1835.

SIR: In reply to your letter of yesterday, I have the honor to inform you that the resolution which you mention as having passed the House of Representatives, in relation to land claims in the Vincennes land district, has never been received at this department or it would have been attended to. I have caused an examination to be made of the printed journal of the House, and have referred this day a copy of the resolution, taken therefrom, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, whose report, when received, shall be transmitted to the House of Representatives.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JOHN EWING, House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 17, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to return the letter of Mr. Ewing, referred by you to this office, and to state that no resolution of the House of Representatives, of the character mentioned by him, has been received at this office during the present session.

With great respect, sir, your obedient servant, ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 21, 1835.

SIR: The resolution of the House of Representatives which appears by their printed journal to have been passed on the 11th of December last, by which the Secretary of the Treasury is directed "to transmit, or cause to be transmitted, to this House, a list of all such land claims heretofore noted by, or presented to, the commissioners authorized to receive and adjust the same, as may have been decided unfavorably, or the decision thereupon suspended, or favorably decided, and not yet satisfied, in the Vincennes land district, with the foundation of the claims, and the decisions in brief, and such documents in relation to the subject-matter as he may control and deem proper;" having been referred by you to this office on the 17th instant, I have the honor to state, that, as it is not now practicable to have the particular lists and decisions, referred to in the resolution, copied in time for any action thereon by Congress at their present session, in case such action is desired, I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a bound volume, containing copies of the reports made by the commissioners at Vincennes, upon claims to land, and beg leave to refer to the following documents in that volume as furnishing all the information, so far as is known to this office, required by the resolution, viz:

In the report of the commissioners dated 25th March, 1806, under the act of the 26th March, 1804.

Document E, "a report on land claims rejected on their merits."

Document F, "claims rejected for want of evidence."

Document G, "cases not embraced by any act of Congress," with the exception of "No. 3," being claims to the "upper prairie," which is confirmed by the 3d section of the act of the 3d March, 1807.

Document H, "special cases," with the exception of the claim of "Angelique Racine, as heir to her father François."

It is proper to state that in a letter from the commissioners at Vincennes, dated the 27th November, 1806, purporting to transmit certain papers, it is said that "the paper entitled supplement E, contains certain rejections made since our report of March 25, 1806," and that "the paper entitled supplement to No. 1, of document H, contains a further illustration of the case of Henry Vanderburg, Esq.," but that those papers are not to be found on the files of this office.

In the report of the commissioners, dated 27th May, 1812, under the act of the 30th April, 1810, viz:

Document A, "claims not embraced by the act of 30th April."

Document B, "claims in support of which no evidence has been produced."

Document C, "claims heretofore exhibited to the former commissioners, &c.

Document F, "claims which have been rejected on their merits."

As the volume now transmitted should be preserved among the files of this office, it being the only copy in this office of those reports, I must beg leave to request that it may be returned, so soon as it may not be needed for the purpose of legislation.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE, Vincennes, March 25, 1806.

SIR: The commissioners for examining claims to land in the district of Vincennes, in pursuance of the act of Congress of 26th March, 1804, entitled "An act making provision for the disposal of the public land, in the Indiana Territory, and for other purposes," beg leave to report:

That they have arranged the said claims under the three following heads.

1st. Those which have been decided on and confirmed by the governors.

2d. Those which have not been decided on by the governors.

3d. Those which are not embraced by any act of Congress.

The first class is again subdivided into: 1. Claims founded under ancient grants or possessions, under the French or British governments; 2. Claims founded on supposed grants, from the courts; 3. To the donations of 400 acres, as heads of families, on or before the year 1783; 4. Claims to the donation of 100 acres, as militia men, enrolled in the militia on the first day of August, 1790, and had done militia duty.

The powers of the governors to confirm or to grant lands being vested in them by law, the commissioners have accordingly considered their grants, or confirmations, except in one solitary instance, explained in document H, No. 1, where the grant appears to have been surreptitiously obtained, and sufficient evidence of title.

In the confirmations made by the governors, it has not always been practicable to distinguish those founded upon French or British grants, and possessions, from those made in virtue of court deeds, and improvements; the commissioners, therefore, have been obliged to consolidate the claims of the first and second class, under one head, in document marked A, which contains the names of the original claimants, the quantity confirmed to each, and the names of those who have entered their claims thereto with the register, as assignees or otherwise.

The document marked B contains: 1st. The names of those heads of families who were entitled to the donation of 400 acres, to whom or to whose assignees the same are respectively granted by the governors; 2d. The number of the tract allotted to each; 3d. The names of the present claimants.

The first column of document marked C contains the names of the militia men, originally entitled to the donation of one hundred acres; the figures in the second column denote the number of the tract allotted to each in the general militia donation on the south side of White river; and where there are no such figures, the different donees have, by permission of the governors, had their respective tracts surveyed or located on their improvements; and the third column contains the names of the present claimants.

The second class admits of a similar subdivision.

Document D contains a list of the confirmations made by the commissioners, exhibiting under the different columns the names of the persons originally entitled, the quantity claimed, the present claimants, the quantity confirmed, and the names of those to whom confirmed.

Document E contains the rejected claims, the substance of the evidence adduced in their support, together with the commissioners' remarks thereon.

Document F is a list of claims, in support of which no evidence has been exhibited, and have consequently been rejected.

To the third class belong claims founded upon Indian purchases, and unusual grants made by the court.

Document G contains those species of claims, observations thereon, and rejections of the same.

Document H contains special cases.

Document I is a plat as well of the tracts confirmed by the governors in the upper prairie, with the continuation thereof, claimed under purchases from Indians, as of the 150 acres granted by the act of March 3d, 1791, to the several persons then in possession thereof.

The commissioners beg leave to observe, that from about the end of the year 1785, until about two years after the treaty of Greenville, the country about Vincennes, completely surrounded by hostile Indian tribes, and cut off from every means of relief, was placed in a situation highly dangerous; that the attempts to form settlements and make improvements were faint, hazardous, and most generally frustrated; they are therefore sensible, that, bound as they were by the act of 1791, to confirm no claim of that description except such as had been actually improved and cultivated, their decisions made conformable to that principle must be severe and bear hard upon numbers of individuals, who have remained ever since in the country, and have yielded only to the imperious necessity either of exposing themselves to savage barbarity, or of abandoning their lands, which they could neither cultivate nor defend. To these observations it may be added that even when cultivation has been proved, it was not, in most cases that have come before them, of such a nature as to bring them strictly within the full meaning of actual improvement and cultivation, by which Congress seems to have meant the necessary work to support a family; this, under the circumstances above related, but very few were able to do. Consequently, the line of distinction between improvements attended with or without cultivation, is too minute to distinguish them from each other in as satisfactory a manner as could be wished.

The improvements and cultivation made on those few spots where forts or stations had been erected, and where the harassed inhabitants were obliged to take shelter, are almost the only ones that can come within the full meaning of the act: thus, besides the advantages the owners of those places obtained in point of security, they derived from the labors of their less fortunate neighbors a better claim to their respective lands.

In one instance alone have they departed from the general principle which has governed them in their decisions; namely, that of William Shannon, assignee of John Howell, wherein the land claimed has been confirmed (for want of a regular chain of transfers being exhibited) to the heirs or assigns of John Howell, the original claimant, on proof being made of the building of a house, actual residence, and establishment of a tan yard.

They considered the importance of those improvements, though not attended with cultivation, as bringing their case within the equitable powers vested in them by law.

Some few notices were filed with the register, by the representatives of deceased persons, who claimed militia donations under the act of 1791. On examining the evidence, it appeared that the persons under whose rights the claims were made, were dead before 1st August, 1790, although they were of full age at the time of their death, and duly enrolled in the militia. Even some instances may be cited of persons having been killed by Indians in defence of the country, and have never received any donation of land from the United States. The commissioners, had it been in their power, would have confirmed 100 acres to each of those claimants, but as the law is positive that they must have been enrolled on the 1st of August, 1790, they were obliged to reject their claims.

All which is respectfully submitted, by your obedient servants,

JOHN BADOLLET,
NATH'L EWING,
Commissioners.

The Hon. ALBERT GALLATIN, Secretary of the Treasury.

A list of the donations of four hundred acres of land, given to the heads of families in Vincennes, in the year 1783, with the names of the present claimants and the number of the lot drawn by each, as laid off by order of the governors.

RIGHTS CONFIRMED BY GOVERNORS.

The first column of the following table contains the names of the several persons to whom donations of four hundred acres each, of land, were given by the resolve and act of Congress of the 29th August, 1788, and 3d of March, 1791, as heads of families in Vincennes, on or before the year 1783; and which, conformably to the directions of the said resolve, have, by the different governors, been allotted and laid out to each of them. The second column contains the number of the tract so allotted to each; and the third column contains the names of the several persons who have entered the same in the register's office, as present claimants.

List of militia donations of 100 acres granted by the governors to the militiamen, in Vincennes, on 1*st August,* 1790.

The first column of the following table contains the names of the several persons to whom donations, of one hundred acres of land each, were granted by the different governors, conformably to the act of Congress of 3d March, 1791, as militia men duly enrolled in the militia at Vincennes, on 1st August, 1790, and had done militia duty; the second column, the number of the tract allotted to such of the claimants as have had their donations laid out in the general donation tract, on the south side of White river; and the third, the names of those who have entered their claims thereto in the register's office, as assignees or otherwise.

The several tracts owned by those persons to whose names no number is affixed in the second column, have, by permission of the governors, had the same laid, either on their improvements, or are not yet surveyed.

A report on land claims rejected on their merits.

Vital Boucher, brother, and heir of Joseph Boucher's claim to a donation of 400 acres, as head of a family in Vincennes, in the year 1783.

It appears from the depositions of Charles Delisle, Pierre Querré, and Joseph Chartier, that Joseph Boucher, in the year 1783, lived with his two brothers in Vincennes, and that Charles and not Joseph Boucher was the head of that family.

Wherefore, the commissioners reject this claim.

Daniel Smith claims 200 acres in addition to 200 acres granted him by the governor, in right of his own improvement, and 100 acres in addition to 300 acres granted him by Governor Harrison, assignee of John Murphy, in right of improvement.

It appears to the board that these two claims have been acted upon by Governor Harrison, who granted the several quantities of land mentioned in the notice of claims; and being of opinion that the governor's decisions thereon are conclusive, they do therefore reject both these claims.

Jeremiah Mayes claims 200 acres of land, in addition to 200 acres granted to him by the governor, in right of improvement.

This claim is, in every respect, circumstanced like those above laid in by Daniel Smith, and is, for the reasons therein mentioned, rejected by the commissioners.

Antoine Petit Dit Lalumiere and wife, sister and heir of Jean Baptiste Villeray, deceased, claims 50 acres of land, a sugar camp right.

The deposition of Josette Page, widow, taken in support of this claim, is as follows: "That Jean Baptiste Villeray was her son; that he occupied a sugar camp below the village, before the Americans took this country, and that he was at that time eighteen years old;" but the commissioners find, on examining the church records, that he was but thirteen years old, and at the time this country became a part of the State of Virginia. If, therefore, he was but eighteen when he first established the sugar camp, it must have been in the year 1784, and too late to come under the ancient customs.

Wherefore, they reject this claim.

Antoine Petit Dit Lalumiere claims 400 acres of land, near Racoon creek, in right of improvement.

Josette Page, who was the only evidence produced to support this claim, proves nothing more than that she heard it said that the claimant made an improvement near Racoon creek; but she never saw the improvement, nor does she know, of her own knowledge, that any was made.

The claim, for want of proof, is rejected.

Antoine Petit Lalumiere claims a donation of 400 acres as head of a family in Vincennes, 1783.

The claimant did not produce any evidence to prove that he was the head of a family in 1783, but acknowledged that he was that year a resident of Canada, and did not come to Vincennes until the year 1784; consequently he is not entitled to a donation under the act of Congress, and therefore his claim is rejected.

The heirs of Jean Baptiste Constant, deceased, claim 50 acres of land, in right of a sugar camp.

It is proved by Pierre Querré, that, in the year 1784, said Constant took up a sugar camp, near Fort Apparent, and cultivated it.

The commissioners being of opinion that this claim cannot be considered as coming under the description of an ancient title, the country being then part of the United States, do therefore reject it.

René Goder claims a donation of 400 acres, as head of a family in Vincennes, in 1783.

It is proved by Pierre Querré and Amable Bolon, that René Goder was not married until the year 1786, and that he lived with his father until that time. The commissioners being of opinion he does not come under the description of those entitled to a donation under the act of Congress, reject this claim.

John Decker claims 400 acres of land, in right of improvement.

It is proved by the oath of Moses Decker and Joseph Decker, that the said Moses Decker, father of the said John Decker, in the year 1786, took up a tract of land for the said John, his son, who was then but one year old, and laid the foundation of a cabin on the land. The commissioners are of opinion, that it was not the intention of the legislature to grant lands in right of improvement to persons who were too young to make any; and no cultivation having been proved, they do, for both these reasons, reject this claim.

Moses Decker, jr., claims 400 acres of land, in right of improvement.

It is proved by the oaths of Moses Decker and Joseph Decker that the said Moses Decker, father of the said Moses Decker, jr., took up this tract of land for his son, the claimant (in the year 1786,) who was then seven years old, and that he laid the foundation of a cabin thereon. The commissioners, for the reasons given for rejecting the preceding claims, do reject this one.

The heirs of Jacob Decker, deceased, claim 400 acres, in right of improvement.

It is proved by the oaths of Moses Decker and Joseph Decker, that, in the year 178–, the father of the said Jacob Decker, (who was then between eight and eleven years old,) took up this tract of land, for the said Jacob Decker, his son, but that no improvement was made thereon. The commissioners reject this claim, for the reasons given for rejecting the two preceding ones.

Jacob Minor, assignee of Luke Mattson, claims 400 acres in right of improvement on the waters of White river.

It is proved by Jonathan Conger, that he went with Ralph, over White river, to hunt horses; that, on their return, the said Mattson deadened some trees on the tract claimed, and told the deponent, it was an improvement for his son Luke. The commissioners are of opinion, that this cannot be considered as an improvement and cultivation. And therefore reject this claim.

John Small, assignee of Nicholas Baillajon, claims 300 acres at the Black grounds, on the river Embearas, by a court deed, dated 14th February, 1782.

Josette Page proves that, about the year 1783 or 1784, Nicholas Baillarjon went with her husband to make improvements on lands severally granted to them; that they staid some days, and on their return informed her that they had built good cabins on their lands; but that she never saw the improvement. John Baptiste Barrois proves, that he saw a cabin and less than an arpent cleared on the land claimed by Nicholas Baillarjon, but does not know who did the work. The commissioners are of opinion that the first deposition is but hearsay evidence, and that the second does not prove any cultivation.

Wherefore, they reject the claim.

Michael Bordeleau claims a tract of 136 acres at the Little Village, in right of improvement.

An affidavit of Louis Sequin, deceased, has been filed and recorded, stating that Michael Bordeleau cleared, cultivated, and settled on a piece of land at the Little Village, in the year 1768. The claimant acknowledged, in presence of the commissioners, that he is now but thirty-eight years old, and that the said clearing was made by his father Antoine. A mistake in the christian name is here evident; and as Antoine Bordeleau has claimed and obtained a confirmation of the same land from the commissioners, they therefore reject this claim of the son.

René Campeau claims a donation as head of a family in Vincennes in 1783.

Antoine Lefevre proves that the claimant was married in 1788, or 1789, and cannot recollect that he was the head of a family in 1783. As it is not proven that he was the head of a family in 1783, the commissioners reject his claim.

The heirs of Abnor Prior, as assignee of Jean Baptiste Constant, claim a donation as the head of a family in 1783.

It is proved by Pierre Querré, that Jean Baptiste Constant was a head of a family at Ouitattanon, and Vincennes, before and after the year 1783. That he was an Indian trader, and came to settle for goods in Vincennes in the year 1785; his wife having till then remained at Ouitattanon. The ambiguity of that part of the above testimony which states Jean Baptiste Constant to have been head of a family both at Ouitattanon and Vincennes before 1783, is removed by the statement which follows, viz: That his wife remained at Ouitattanon until the year 1785, whereby it sufficiently appears that he was the head of a family at Ouitattanon, and not at Vincennes. The commissioners are of opinion, that this case is not embraced by the acts of Congress; therefore reject the claim of the said Abner Prior's heirs.

François Campagnotte claims 400 acres of land, near the dry wood swamp, in right of improvement.

Louis Delaurier proves that claimant twenty years ago marked some trees, on a piece of land adjoining James Johnston's tract, that he neither built nor cultivated, and does not know of its ever having been granted by the court.

Here appears neither improvement nor cultivation; the claim is therefore rejected by the commissioners.

François Campagnotte claims 136 acres of land, below Racoon creek, in right of improvement.

Louis Delaurier proves that claimant eighteen or twenty years ago, took up a piece of land below Racoon creek, built a cabin and planted some fruit trees, but could not stay there on account of the Indians. Neither improvement of the land nor cultivation is here proved; the claim is therefore rejected.

Daniel Sullivan's heir, who was assignee of Pierre Cartier, claims 170 acres on Mile creek, in right of improvement.

Four hundred acres of land have already been granted by the governor to John Small, as assignee of Pierre Cartier, in right of his improvement, which by subsequent sales have come into the possession of Henry Vanderburgh, and James Ledgewood, as will appear by the statement of claims heretofore confirmed (document A,) and as no one person can be entitled to two different tracts of land by improvement right, this claim is therefore rejected.

Michael Bordeleau, in right of his wife, only heir of François Duquointe, deceased, claims fifty acres of land in right of a sugar camp.

By the deposition of Joseph Chartier, it is proved that François Duquointe occupied a sugar camp, thirty-eight or nine years ago. That Jean Chabot, who married said Duquointe's widow, kept possession of it, and continued make sugar thereon, until his (Jean Chabot's) death.

By reference to document A, it will appear, that this sugar camp has been granted by the governor of the territory, and is now claimed by Alexander Vallé, as assignee of the heirs of the said Jean Chabot. From those circumstances, the present claim must be considered as having been heretofore decided on and satisfied; and is rejected on that ground.

Thomas Jones, legatee of Charlotte Du Charme, widow and heir of Joseph Du Charme, deceased, claims 100 acres of land in virtue of a verbal grant from St. Marie, British commandant, to said Joseph Du Charme, and improvement made thereon.

The commissioners observe, that this tract has already been granted by the governor of the northwest territory to the above named Joseph Du Charme, and is now claimed by the heirs of Col. J. Francis Hamtramck as his assignee (see document A); they therefore reject this claim.

Abraham Decker claims 400 acres of land in right of improvement.

As this claim has been already decided on by the governor of the northwestern territory, who granted the said Decker 200 acres, therefore (see document A,) it must be rejected.

The heirs of Jacob Drennin, deceased, claim 400 acres in the forks of the river Embarras, by a grant of the court, dated April 10, 1786, and improvement.

Jonathan Congor proves that, in the year 1786, he went with Jacob Drennin to show him land on the waters of White river; that he, Drennin, built the foundation of a cabin, deadened the timber of about three-fourths of an acre, and planted some corn; he continued about forty days in the country, and then went off. The deponent adds, that he was informed the said Drennin was killed on his return home.

Jacob Drennin's short residence repels the idea of an intended permanent settlement; moreover, the small improvement, such as it was, was made on a different tract from the one supposed to have been granted by court deed; the former being on the east, and the latter several miles on the west side of the river Wabash. From the above considerations, the commissioners are induced to reject this claim.

The heirs of Jean Baptiste Du Chesne, deceased, claim 50 acres of land, a sugar camp right.

The commissioners observe, that a tract of 50 acres has (see document A,) already been granted by the governor to the said Jean Baptiste Du Chesne in right of a sugar camp, and is now claimed by Abraham Kuykendale, as assignee. This claim must therefore be rejected.

James Fernsley claims 340 acres on Wilson's creek, by a deed from the court, dated August 1st, 1785, and an improvement.

It is proved by John Martin, that James Fernsley, in 1785, cleared about an acre of land on Wilson's creek, partly built a cabin, sowed timothy and turnip seeds, and planted corn thereon; he had no family, never resided on the land, and left the country. The deponent adds that the claimant on his return to this place in the spring following, with his family, was forced back by the Indians.

An actual improvement and cultivation being required by the act of March 3d, 1791, in order to be entitled to the confirmation of a supposed grant, must, in the opinion of the commissioners, imply a permanent residence, not a transient one of a few days, evidently for the purpose of making an improvement. The commissioners, therefore, for want of such actual residence, reject this claim.

Abraham F. Snapp, assignee of Thomas Foreman, claims 400 acres in right of improvement.

It is proved by an affidavit of Philip Devorce, that Thomas Foreman had liberty from the French commandant in the year 1785, to improve 400 acres of land; that the Indians prevented the making any improvement on the land. That said Foreman remained in the country, living on and improving the land of others, for several seasons.

Foreman having been a resident in the country, for some seasons, and employed in improving the lands of others, cannot, in the opinion of the commissioners, entitle him to a tract of land, which it is admitted he not only neither improved nor cultivated, but did not so much as designate the situation or position of. For these reasons, this claim is rejected.

Pierre Grimarre claims 136 acres of land on the west side of the Wabash river, in right of improvement.

By François Languedoc the clearing of between half an acre and an acre on a piece of land below Racoon creek by claimant, about fifteen or twenty years ago, is proved; but it is further proved, that he neither ploughed or cultivated. The claim is therefore rejected.

Charles Grimarre claims 136 acres of land below Racoon creek, in right of improvement.

The same deposition having been made in support of this claim as in the preceding one, it is also rejected.

Laurent Bazadon, assignee of Charles Grimarre, claims a militia right of 100 acres.

René Campeau proves that Charles Grimarre is now but twenty-five years old.

As, consequently, he was but ten years old in 1790, and therefore incapable of doing militia duty, this claim is rejected.

Robert Reynolds, assignee of John Garland, claims 400 acres in right of improvement on the east of Wabash, fifteen miles above Vincennes.

The same, as assignee of Matthew Garland, for the same quantity in right of improvement, on the east side of Wabash, fifteen miles above Vincennes.

The same, as assignee of Moses Goth, for the same quantity in right of improvement, east branch of White river, fifteen miles below the trace to the falls.

The same, as assignee of Adam Orth, for a similar quantity, in right of improvement, east branch of Wabash river, fifteen miles below the trace to the falls.

In support of the four above claims, the depositions of Daniel Thorn, and Solomon Thorn, taken before John Beaird, in Randolph county, have been filed and registered, proving the improvements and cultivation respectively made in the year 1787, by John Garland, and Matthew Garland, of two tracts of land between fifteen and twenty miles above Vincennes, and the same facts respecting two other tracts lying on the east side of White river, about twenty miles below the trace leading from Vincennes to the falls of Ohio. Two depositions, signed by James Chism, taken before John Edgar, Esq., in Randolph county, have been also filed and registered, stating the same circumstances as above.

Daniel Thorn, one of the subscribers to the first deposition, being examined before the commissioners, made oath that he never knew John or Matthew Garland, Adam or Moses Orth; that he never made nor put his mark to the depositions recorded in the register's book; and on being shown the mark of his brother Solomon affixed thereto, asserted that his brother knew how to write and always used to write his own name.

From the above circumstances, and from the neglect of the claimant to have other depositions in support of his claims taken before the persons appointed by the commissioners for that purpose, as he was by them required to do, there arises, in the minds of the commissioners, an irresistible presumption that the whole is a forgery, and therefore they reject the four above claims.

Charles Guielle claims 136 acres of land, on Racoon creek, in right of improvement.

François Languedoc proves that claimant, about fifteen years ago, cleared three or four acres of the tract claimed, and that the same was never ploughed nor fenced. On the ground of want of cultivation, this claim is rejected.

James Henry claims 340 acres near river Duchis, by grant of the court, dated May 12th, 1785, and improvement.

Luke Decker, Esq., proves no more than the cutting of wild grass, by Moses Henry, on the tract claimed, and also that James Henry never was in the country. On the ground of want of residence, cultivation, and improvement, the claim is rejected.

Thomas Jordan claims 400 acres, in right of improvement, on Racoon creek.

Joseph Decker proves the cultivation of and the raising a crop of corn, on a piece of land in the lower prairie, but no kind of work done on the land claimed below Racoon creek. For want of cultivation and improvement, the claim is rejected.

N. B.—The notice of claim was entered with the register as having been confirmed by the governor, but on examining the records no such confirmation could be found.

John Johnston, heir of Richard Johnston, claims 250 acres in addition to a grant of 150 acres already made.

This claim having been acted upon by the governor, who granted 150 acres thereon, and which are now claimed by Jacob Minor, (see document A,) therefore it is rejected.

John Johnston claims 400 acres, in right of improvement, on the head of the Half Moon pond.

John Martin proves that in the fall of the year 1790, the claimant planted corn, and apple and peach trees, in an open piece of woods, near the head of the Half Moon pond.

The planting of corn in the fall with a few apple and peach trees, in the open woods, cannot bring this case within the meaning of the act of 1791, which requires actual improvement and cultivation: the claim must therefore be rejected.

Marianne Laforrest, in behalf of herself and the other heirs of Joseph Lafeuillade, deceased, claims 400 acres, a donation as head of a family.

In support of this claim, an inventory of the property of the said Joseph, left at the time of his decease, was produced, wherein it is declared that he died 12th May, 1769,—and François and Charles Languedoc prove his having died about the same time.

As Lafouillade died before this country was taken possession of by the State of Virginia, he could not be entitled to the donation made by the resolve of Congress; therefore, the claim is rejected.

George Leech claims 300 acres of land, in addition to 100 acres already confirmed to him, in right of improvement.

This claim having, as stated in the notice, been acted upon by the governor, and being of opinion that the decision made thereon is conclusive, the commissioners reject this claim.

The heirs of Nancy Levins claim 400 acres, in right of improvement, on Mattson's Spring run, the waters of White river.

The deposition of Richard Brown, now living in Brookes county, Virginia, establishes no other fact than the confessions of Nancy Levins, of her intention of going to Vincennes, from whence she had removed on account of the Indians, and the deponent's knowledge of the said Nancy's having with that view sold her possessions in Pennsylvania.

Moses Decker proves a set of house logs to have been cut by said Nancy's son, on the land claimed, that there were no other improvements made, and that her son was afterwards killed by the Indians. Luke Decker, Esqr., proves that the trees of about one acre of the same land had been deadened, that small trees and house logs had been cut, and brush heaps made, and that the same was reported to have been done by Nancy Levins. As no actual cultivation has been proved, the claim is rejected.

Paul Labreche, or Labrache, claims 400 acres, as a donation to the heads of families.

François Racine St. Marie proves that claimant, about 28 years ago, was at Vincennes, thinks he was here afterwards, but is not positive; that he never was an Indian trader and never married. As claimant was not the head of a family, his claim is rejected.

The heirs of William Perry, assignee of Joseph Lamoreux, claim 400 acres on Mill creek, in right of improvement.

Joseph Cartier proves the building of a cabin and clearing of a few acres of ground by Joseph Lamoreux on the land claimed, which is now included in the donation, and that he did not reside thereon on account of the Indians. As no actual cultivation has been proved, the claim is rejected.

The heirs of Jaque Latrimouille claim 136 acres, at the Little Village, in right of an ancient grant.

As this land has already been confirmed by the governor to the said heirs, and four-fifths whereof are now claimed by B. D. Price, as their assignee, (see document A,) this claim is rejected.

François Languedoc claims 136 acres on Racoon creek, in right of improvement.

Jean Baptiste Moise proves the clearing of about half an acre, on the land claimed, about fifteen years ago, by claimant, in company with and assisted by deponent, but no kind of cultivation. It being proved there was no kind of cultivation, the claim must be rejected.

Jeanne Cardinal, widow Montplaisir, alias Tougas, alias Lavolettei, legatee of Joseph Maville, deceased, claims 400 acres, donation as head of a family.

Pierre Querrè proves that Joseph Meville dit Duchesne died in the year 1775, or 1776. As Meville died some years before this country passed into the possession of the State of Virginia, his representative cannot be entitled to the donation by Congress; consequently, this claim is rejected.

Luke Decker, assignee of William Mason, claims 100 acres, a militia donation.

Moses Decker proves that William Mason came to this country in the fall of the year 1790, and went that same fall on the expedition against the Indians, under the command of Major Hamtramck.

As Mason did not arrive in the country until the fall of the year 1790, he came too late to be entitled to a militia donation, under the act of Congress. The claim is therefore rejected.

William McGowan claims 100 acres, a militia donation.

A certificate of Pierre Camelin, deceased, proves that claimant belonged to the regulars, under the command of Capt. McCurdy, and was discharged on the expedition against the Wabash Indians, under the command of Major Hamtramck, which expedition is proved, by Luke Decker, Esqr., to have taken place in the fall of the year 1790. McGowan being in the regular service of the U. S. in the fall of 1790, could not have been enrolled in the militia on the first day of August preceding. His claim is therefore rejected.

Abraham Johnston, assignee of Frederick Mehl, claims 347 acres, of the Old Woman's Pond, by grant of the court, dated June 9th, 1785.

The court deed grants the land to one Martin Mehl, and not to Frederick Mehl, as stated in the notice—and the said Frederick Mehl proves, that the court deed was obtained by him in the name of his brother Martin, who never was in the country, and that the transfer of the said right was also made by him, in his said brother's name, to Elias Bidle, who transferred to claimant. As the tenor of the rest of the deponent's evidence goes to prove that the land was neither cultivated nor improved, the claim is therefore rejected.

Edward Mills claims 340 acres, on the forks of the river Embarras, by court deed, dated 10th April, 1786, and an improvement.

Jonathan Conger proves that claimant, in the year 1786, laid the foundation of a cabin, deadened some trees, and planted some corn on the waters of White river, and not on the land claimed—and that claimant left the country in about forty days afterwards and never returned.

The land claimed was not attempted to be improved and cultivated, and the claimant never was or manifested an intention of becoming an actual settler. This claim is therefore rejected.

The heirs of Antoine Marie, deceased, claim 136 acres on a run above the little rock, by a court grant, dated February 4th, 1785.

Pierre Querré proves that this land was the only compensation that Antoine Marie ever received for his services as an Indian interpreter during Clarke's expedition.

As no improvement, cultivation, or settlement, is proved or even suggested, and as the court deed is dated in February, 1785, and Clarke's expedition did not set out until October, 1786, this claim is rejected.

The heirs of Margaret Bolon, wife of Antoine Marie, claim 136 acres adjoining the preceding tract, by a court grant, dated 4th February, 1785.

The same deponent states the same circumstances as above; the only difference is in the tenor of the deed, which mentions this grant to be made to her as compensation for services as an interpreter.

To Congress alone belongs the right of going into the merits of this case, and as cultivation has not been proved or suggested, the commissioners are obliged to reject this claim.

The heirs of Rachael Murdock claim 400 acres on the waters of the river Duchis, in right of improvement.

Jonathan Conger, in his deposition filed and registered, states that he, deponent, cut logs, deadened trees, laid the foundation of a cabin, and made several brush heaps for Rachael Murdock, on the lands now claimed, and could do no more on account of the Indians.

When brought before the commissioners to be examined viva voce, he stated that Rachael Murdock employed him to clear about one acre of the land claimed; that he planted it in corn and fruit trees; that he lived about four years in the country, when she went to the Illinois, where she was killed by the Indians.

The above recited depositions are so contradictory on circumstances so very material as cultivation, that they are, in the opinion of the commissioners, entitled to no credit. And therefore they reject the claim.

Charles Noise claims 136 acres below Racoon creek, in right of improvement.

Jean Baptiste Valcour proves that he was hired by Charles Noise, about fifteen years ago, to go with him to work at Racoon creek. That they cut the timber of five or six acres of ground, heaped the brush and cut logs for a cabin, but did not built it. That they worked there about fifteen days, and never returned.

In this case there appears a considerable improvement, but, as there was no actual cultivation, the commissioners must reject the claim.

William Page, devisee of Joseph Page, claims 136 acres to the northeast of the village, in right of improvement.

Augusta Tougas, in a deposition filed and rigistered, proves that in January, 1790, Joseph Page took up the tract claimed; that the improvement consisted in making perogues and sugar for seven years.

In other words, the claimant was seven years busy in injuring the lands of the United States. There appears no reason for confirming this claim, and therefore they reject it.

Auguste Tougas claims 136 acres adjoining the above tract, in right of improvement.

William Page proves exactly the same circumstances in support of this claim, as Tougas proves above in support of Page's.

This claim is rejected, for the same reason as given for rejecting the preceding one.

William Page, devisee of Joseph Page, deceased, claims 400 acres on Racoon creek, in right of improvement.

Josette Page's deposition, filed and registered, states, that she heard her husband say her son had surveyed the land claimed, and cleared a small part of it, and that her said husband had seen a small cabin and some trees deadened thereon.

This statement being only hearsay testimony, cannot be admitted as evidence. The claim must therefore be rejected.

Jean François Perrey, assignee of John Richardson, claims 340 acres, on the river Duchis, by court deed, dated 1st March, 1785. The same assignee of William Richardson claims 340 acres, on the river Duchis, by court deed, dated 1st March, 1785.

James Johnston, Esq., proves that the two tracts of land now claimed were respectively granted by the court to William and John Richardson, and surveyed; that there was not, to his knowledge, any improvement on either; that John Richardson remained eighteen months in the country, but William Richardson was never in it. These claims are rejected.

William McIntosh, assignee of the heirs of Peter Rimbault, sr., claims a donation to the heads of families.

François Langudoc proves that Pierre Rimbault moved to New Orleans, before the Americans took possession of the country, and never returned since.

Pierre Rimbault never being an American citizen, could not be entitled. His claim is therefore rejected.

The heirs of François Racine claim the donation to heads of families.

Pierre Querré proves that François Racine died in 1764. He could not then be an American citizen: the claim is therefore rejected.

The heirs of Andrew Roy claim 400 acres, in right of improvement, near the Dry Wood swamp.

Louis Delaurier proves that Andrew Roy, about 20 years ago, marked some trees on the land claimed, but that he neither built nor cultivated.

The claim is rejected.

Daniel Smith, heir of William Smith, claims 400 acres on the waters of the Wabash, in right of improvement.

John Martin proves that William Smith built a cabin and enclosed a piece of ground in the commons near Vincennes, but did not know of his having made any kind of cultivation.

William Smith's heir cannot be entitled; and moreover, the cabin built appears to have made a part of the village of Vincennes. The claim is therefore rejected.

Jacob Tivebaugh claims 400 acres, in right of improvement, on the waters of Mill creek.

Jacob, Charles, and Daniel Thorn prove that claimant cleared about two acres on the land claimed in the year 1787, cut some house logs, but made no cultivation. For want of actual cultivation, the claim is rejected.

The heirs of Samuel Wortman claim 400 acres, in right of improvement, above the Grand rapids.

Michael Thorn proves that Samuel Wortman had this land surveyed in the year 1785; that he deadened some trees on it; left the country in the spring of 1788, and was killed on his return in the spring following.

Here appears but little cultivation and no improvement. This claim is therefore rejected.

Thomas Wells claims 400 acres of land, on Mattson's spring run, by court deed, dated 20th May, 1784, and improvement.

Sebastian Frederick's deposition, filed and registered, proves that the trees of about two acres of the land claimed were deadened, some house logs cut, and that he assisted in carrying the chain in the surveying of it.

Here appears no kind of cultivation. The claim is therefore rejected.

George Wallace, assignee of the heirs of Peter Barrickman, claims 50 acres, a sugar camp right.

George Wallace has entered this claim as already confirmed by the governor, and as evidence thereof filed an order of survey, directing the public surveyor to survey for the heirs of Peter Barrickman 50 acres of land granted them by the governor in right of a sugar camp, signed by John Gibson, secretary of the Territory. The secretary, after an examination of the records of the Territory, certifies that no such grant was ever made, and that the above order of survey was given through mistake. This claim is therefore rejected.

Andrew Cearhart's heirs claim 400 acres, in right of improvement, on the head waters of the river Duchis.

Frederick Barger proves that there was an acre cleared on said land in 1787, peach and apple trees growing, and a cabin built; that the Indians having that evening killed a man in the neighborhood, he was obliged to abandon his improvement and retire to the village; that he was a single man and was afterwards drowned in the White river. Benjamin Beckes, Esq., proves that he knew Andrew Cearhart, who lived with him several months; that he showed to said Andrew, in 1785, the land on which he improved; that he, Beckes, frequently saw the improvement, which consisted of a turkey pen and three-fourths of an acre whereon the trees had been deadened; that he never saw any peach trees growing, and that he was, in 1786, drowned in the White river, on his return home.

From the circumstances of the general alarm created by the murder of a man by the Indians, before Frederick Barger saw the improvement whereon this claim rests, and the lateness of the hour, it appears that his observations must be transitory and imperfect. The deposition, then, of Benjamin Beckes, who saw the place frequently, and at his leisure, must be chiefly relied on; and nothing is therein contained that can bring the present case within the meaning of the law of 1791, requiring improvement and cultivation. The claim is therefore rejected.

Antoine Lefevre, jr., claims 400 acres as a donation to the heads of families.

Pierre Querré proves that he knows claimant from the year 1762; that he was not married until 1787; but that in the year 1783, he had a house in this town, his own property, and supported his father and mother, who lived with him.

Though, by an equitable construction of the 2d section of the act of 1791, the benefit thereof has been, by former decisions of the governors, extended to single men who kept house themselves; yet this case is by no means similar, for the father of the claimant was in fact the head of the family, of which the son made a part, and has been considered as such, for his children have received, as his heirs, the donation to which he was entitled. See document B. Two heads of a family could not exist at one and the same time. The claim is therefore rejected.

William McIntosh, assignee of Louis Pluchorn, called St. Louis, claimed the salt spring on the Saline creek, emptying into the Ohio.

The spot laid claim to by William McIntosh, does not lie within the district of Vincennes. The commissioners therefore decline expressing any opinion on this claim; and moreover, they will observe that no evidence has been adduced in support of it.

Louis Delaurier claims 50 acres, a sugar camp right.

François Campagnotte proves, that about twenty years ago, claimant had a sugar camp on land now of General Gibson, and James Johnston, Esq.; that he made sugar thereon for ten years, and until obliged to abandon by the persons living on the land.

The origin of this claim cannot be traced up to the time of the British government. It cannot therefore come under the description of an ancient grant. The claim is rejected.

Antoine Querre claims 150 acres on Muddy run, in right of improvement.

Louis Frederick proves that claimant made an improvement, in a vacancy of about 150 acres, lying between Louis Frederick, John Reed, Jeremiah Mayes, Peter Frederick and Frederick Lindy, about two years ago, of about one acre. That he built a house, wherein he has lived for these twelve months.

This improvement being made posterior to March, 1791, cannot, notwithstanding his subsequent actual settlement and residence, entitle the claimant. His claim is therefore rejected.

François Hamelin claims 136 acres on the northwest side of the Wabash, in right of improvement.

Pierre Querré proves that François Hamlin has lived on the land claimed, for the space of eight or nine years, and has cultivated it ever since.

This improvement, cultivation, and actual settlement, would have entitled the claimant to this land, if begun previous to the 3d March, 1791, but being posterior to that date, it cannot come within the purview of the act of Congress. The claim is therefore rejected.

The heirs of Jean Baptiste Racine claim 50 acres, a sugar camp right.

Charles Delisle proves Jean Baptiste Racine to have made sugar several years ago, but he cannot state when he began, above the little rock on the east side of the Wabash.

This claim is not proved to have originated either under the French or British governments, and is therefore rejected.

Christopher Wyant, assignee of Pierre Cartier, claims 50 acres, a sugar camp right, near where Abel Westfall now lives.

Alexander Valle proves, that at least twenty-five years ago, Pierre Cartier had a sugar camp at the above described place. This cannot be considered as an ancient possession, the only ground on which a sugar camp right can be confirmed. This claim is therefore rejected.

The heirs of Jean Baptiste Poteven, alias Harpins or Arpin, claim 136 acres below the lower prairie, in right of improvement.

Joseph Cartier proves, that about eighteen years ago, he cleared about an acre and a half of the land, claimed for the said Jean Baptiste Harpin, deceased. This claim, for want of proof of cultivation, is rejected.

James Gilbreath, assignee of James Strong, claims 400 acres, in right of improvement, on Mehl's run.

Daniel Thorn proves, that he knew one Strong, in 1786, who made an improvement on Mehl's creek, consisting of a cabin, built nearly to the joists, planted peach stones, sowed apple seed, made brush heaps, and planted half an acre in corn. That there was no other person in the country of the name of Strong, to deponent's knowledge. He had a family who never were here, left the country the following year and never returned.

The want of residence, although some kind of cultivation, proves that Strong never seriously intended to become a settler in the country, and to persons of that description alone can the benefits of the acts extend. The claim is therefore rejected.

Robert Buntin, assignee of Bonaventure Derozier, claims 400 acres, in right of improvement, about two leagues northeast of Vincennes.

An improvement claim of Bonaventure Derozier has already been acted upon by the governor, who granted 136 acres thereupon, and which are now claimed by Benjamin D. Price, (document A.) From every information that has been obtained on the subject, a strong presumption arises, that the improvement on which the governor made the grant, and the one now claimed, are one and the same improvement. This claim is therefore rejected.

The heirs of Joseph Lafeuillade, jr., claim 100 acres, a militia donation.

François and Charles Languedoc prove, that Joseph Lafeuillade, jr., was drowned in the year 1786, then of full age.

Though Joseph Lafeuillade was at the time of his death liable to military duty, yet the letter of the act of Congress making it necessary to have done militia duty, and to be on the roll on the 1st August, 1790, lay the commissioners under the necessity of rejecting this claim.

Alexis Adeline claims 136 acres in right of improvement, on Racoon creek.

In support of this claim an affidavit of Francois Languedoc has been filed, proving that in the year 1790, deponent saw claimant at work upon land claimed; that he had cleared about one acre and marked said land.

This claim, for want of cultivation, cannot be granted by the commissioners. It is therefore rejected.

Daniel Smith, as assignee of Alexis Adeline, and the said Alexis Adeline in his own right, each of them claims a militia donation of 100 acres for the said Alexis.

In support of this claim the deposition of François Potoin has been filed with the register, stating he saw Alexis Edeline on the parade with his arms in the month of August, 1790. The commissioners, on examining the church books, find that Alexis Edeline was at that time 13 years and four months old. No proof is adduced that he was on the roll on the first of August, 1790, or had previously done militia duty; both the said claims are therefore rejected.

Abraham Fry Snapp, assignee of Simon Spring, claims 340 acres by a court grant, dated September 17th, 1783, between the river Marie and Bosseron.

Moses Decker proves that he knew Simon Spring in 1786, that he continued here about two years. That he has heard that Spring had made an improvement at a place called the Plumb Orchard, but he never saw it. Louis Severe proves that Spring in the year 1785, showed him an improvement said by Spring to have been made by him on a tract of land between the river Marie and Bosseron belonging to him; that the improvement consisted of a cabin, more than an acre of ground cultivated, fenced with a rail fence and peach trees planted.

The first deposition can have no weight, being but hearsay evidence; the second only proves that the improvement was declared by Spring to be his own and made by him, which he might have said of any other spot, and this deposition is still less conclusive than the first, being only the assertions of an interested person. The claim is therefore rejected.

Louis Delaurier claims 136 acres in right of improvement, on the western bank of the Wabash, below Racoon creek.

Francois Campagnotte proves that eighteen or twenty years ago, claimant took up 4 by 40 arpents (136 acres) built a cabin and planted fruit trees. No cultivation being proved, the claim is rejected.

Cases not embraced by any act of Congress.

No. 1.

The United Wabash and Illinois Land Companies claim a tract of land lying between the mouth of a rivulet emptying into the Wabash river, about thirty-two leagues above Vincennes, and a place called Point Coupee, about twelve leagues above the said village, extending forty leagues eastward, and thirty leagues westward of the Wabash.

Another tract of the same dimensions from east to west, between the mouth of White river and the mouth of the Wabash; both said tracts conveyed to Louis Vivat for himself and associates, by deed signed by a number of Piankashaw Indians, therein called chiefs and sachems of Piankashaw nation of Indians, dated 18th October, 1785.

As a small part of the aforesaid tract lies within the district of Vincennes, the commissioners are under the necessity of taking notice of the claim.

It appears to the commissioners that this purchase was a private transaction between the Indians and an individual, in direct violation of the proclamation of the King of Great Britain, dated 7th October, 1763, and consequently illegal. And as no provisions are made in any of the laws of the United States for claims of this nature, the commissioners reject them.

No. 2.

The French inhabitants of Vincennes claim a tract of twenty-four leagues square, joining the tracts claimed by the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies.

The only evidence in support of this claim, is a reservation contained in the above-mentioned deed from the Indians, of the intermediate space between the above two tracts, for the use of the inhabitants of Vincennes. This reservation can be no more than the manifestation of the intention of the Indians to make the grant, and cannot be considered as a real transfer, but, admitting it was, the deed itself being illegal and void, this claim must be rejected.

No. 3.

Upper prairie.

The several persons to whom or to whose assigns the several tracts of the Upper prairie have been confirmed, (as will more fully appear by reference to a map of the prairie, document I, wherein the names of the respective claimants are inserted,) having claimed the several tracts contained within lines A, B, B, C, the Elm road C, D, D, K, the line K, I, and the Wabash, known by the denomination of continuation, held under Indian deeds, and in quiet possession of the several owners thereof, for at least twenty-five years.

The original titles to the several tracts here alluded to, being derived from Indian purchases unauthorized by law, the governors have refused to act upon such claims, under the impression that those cases did not come within the power delegated to them, and the commissioners being of the same opinion with regard to the authority vested in them, refer the whole to Congress, the only competent tribunal to decide thereon.

They will, however, observe, that the present claimants may plead the same length of the possession, by which Congress was induced to grant by section 3d, of the act of March, 1791, the Indian fields to the several possessors thereof, and beg leave to suggest the propriety of legislative interference.

N. B.—The contents of the several tracts alluded to above, and claimed as continuations, amount in the whole to two hundred and forty-three acres, and one hundred and one perches.

No. 4.

The heirs of François Bosseron and Ambroise Dagenet claim an uncertain quantity of land by a grant from the court to François Bosseron and Ambroise Dagenet, dated November 20, 1783, beginning on the northwest side of the Wabash, opposite to Point Coupeé, about three miles from the Wabash, thence running at right angles with the Wabash, until it strikes the river Embarras, thence down the said river Embarras, to within three miles west of the Wabash, thence up the said Wabash, and parallel with the several courses thereof at the distance of three miles therefrom to the place of beginning, granted by order of Nicholas Parrot, Pierre Gamelin, and Pierre Querré, magistrates, and signed by Gabriel Legrand, clerk of the court.

Thomas Flower claims an undivided third part of an undivided seventh part of the above entire grant, as assignee of the heirs of the aforesaid François Bosseron.

Thomas Flower, assignee of Ambroise Dagenet and Bosseron, claims an uncertain quantity, part of the aforesaid grant.

Thomas Flower claims an undivided third part of an undivided fourth part of a grant, made by the court to Pierre Querré, father, and Pierre Querré, son, of a tract beginning at the river Marié to White river, and about ten leagues deep, excluding from the said grant any land they may have been already granted, as assignee of Pierre Querré, father.

The heirs of Isaac Decker, assignee of Pierre Querré, father, claim 2,000 acres, part of the preceding grant.

Jonathan Purcell, assignee of Pierre Querré, claims 5,000 acres, part of same grant.

Thomas Flower, assignee of Pierre Querré, claims 20,000 acres, part of the same grant.

Thomas Flower claims an uncertain quantity, as assignee of the said Pierre Querré.

Thomas Flower claims an undivided third part of an undivided moiety of an entire grant from the court to Pierre Gamelin and Nicholas Parrot, dated 20th November, 1783, lying between Point Coupeé and river Marié, ten leagues deep, excluding from the said grant any land that may have been already granted, as assignee of Pierre Gamelin.

Thomas Flower, as assignee of Pierre Gamelin, claims 41,000 acres, part of the preceding grant.

Jonathan Purcell, assignee of Pierre Gamelin and Nicholas Parrott, claims 27,500 acres, part of the foregoing grant.

William Purcell, assignee of Pierre Gamelin and Nicholas Parrot, claims 1,000 acres, part of the same grant.

Andrew Purcell, assignee of Pierre Gamelin and Nicholas Parrott, claims 1,000 acres, part of the same grant.

Without dwelling on the extraordinary circumstances of the above recited supposed grants, wherein the members of a court of justice have made to each other such unusual donations, and appropriated to themselves such a large and valuable part of the country, the commissioners will observe that the State of Virginia never authorized the courts to grant lands; that, after the cession, Congress, taking into consideration the hard case of a number of inhabitants, who, under the impression that these grants were good, had moved into Vincennes and the Illinois country, benevolently stepped in, by the act of 1791, and directed the governors of the Territory to confirm claims of that description, provided the land claimed had been actually improved and cultivated, not exceeding 400 acres to any one person.

Considering, therefore, the present claims as grounded upon a transaction fraudulent ab initio, entirely unusual, (the same court never having before granted more than 400 arpents, or 340 acres, with a clause of actual settlement thereto annexed,) and not contemplated by the act of 1791, reject in toto all the foregoing claims.

Special cases.

H.—No. 1.

The two following cases being so peculiarly confused and blended together, put the commissioners under the necessity of making a special report thereon, giving therein a circumstantial history of the whole; stating the inferences they draw therefrom, and, finally, suggested their own decision.

A.

Amongst the claims contained in Judge Vanderburg's notice, entered on the first day of January, 1804, as settled and written in his own hand, is to be found the following, viz: [28,] one other tract of 160 arpents, joining the two last-mentioned tracts confirmed and ordered to be surveyed by order of the governor of the Territory for Angelique Racine, only heir of Jean Baptiste Racine, called Beauchain, her father, and by the said Angelique and L. Denoyon, her husband, assigned to the said Henry Vanderburgh.

To which is annexed the following general certificate, written in the same hand, and signed by the secretary of the Indiana Territory.

B.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE, December 31, 1804.

I, John Gibson, secretary of the Indiana Territory, do certify that I have carefully examined the foregoing claims to land, from number one to number thirty-four inclusive, the property of Henry Vanderburg, Esquire, and that they have all been confirmed and ordered to be surveyed by the different governors of the Territory, as appears of record in the said office. Given under my hand at Vincennes the day and date above written.

JOHN GIBSON, Secretary Indiana Territory.

C.

The same Henry Vanderburgh entered on the same day a notice written and signed by him with the name of Angelique Racine, in the words following, viz:

Notice to, &c., of the land claimed by Angelique Racine, as heir to her father, Jean Baptiste Racine dit Beauxchain.

A tract of 160 arpents confirmed and ordered to be surveyed by the governor of the Territory, a certified copy of which is herewith delivered. Here follows the location.

Enclosed in the above notice, and in support of the last and foregoing claims, was the following certificate in the same Henry Vanderburgh's handwriting, except the words alias Beauxchain, and signed by the secretary of the Territory.

D.

I certify that there is an order of the governor of the Territory, in my office, to survey for Angelique Racine, as heir of her father Jean Baptiste Racine, one hundred and sixty arpents of land, also one other tract for 160 arpents of land to the said Angelique Racine, as heir to her father Jean Baptiste Racine, alias Beauxchain.

JOHN GIBSON, Secretary Indiana Territory.

Underneath the above certificate is written in the same hand as follows, viz: one of the above tracts has been conveyed to Henry Vanderburgh, and is entire with his claims.

In the record of Winthrop Sergeant's entries of claims to land made in 1797, book B, are found the following entries respectively numbered by number 51, and 129, in the handwriting of the said Henry Vanderburgh.

Angelique Racine 4 arpents by 40, at the big hill, which was granted and allotted to her father, François Racine, upwards of thirty years ago.

Pierre Cartier and Jean Baptiste Potovin prove the grant, allotment, and cultivation, in which they aided, in company with the said Racine. The land is three miles east of the village, or thereabout. Decotteaux also proves the above.

F.

The heirs of Jean Baptiste Beauxchain, one of the first settlers of this country, claim 160 arpents of land joining the donation.

The land has been called for more than forty years Beauxchain's cote, after the owner's name. This land, from the best information, though not positively proven, seems to have been assigned him by the governor of this place upwards of forty years ago.

The claim, therefore, appears to have gained strength from its great antiquity, and from this consideration we are induced to recommend it to your particular attention. Beauxchain died in the country and never owned any other land.

When these claims were exhibited, Henry Vanderburgh was acting with others as commissioner to receive land claims, by appointment from Col. Sergeant.

In consequence of the foregoing entries, the following orders of survey were issued, as recorded in Winthrop Sergeant's book C, containing warrants of survey, pages 24 and 34.

G.

Angelique Racine, 4 arpents by 40, at the big hill, granted and allotted to her father, François Racine, upwards of thirty years ago, about three miles eastward of Vincennes.

H.

The heirs of Jean Baptiste Beauxchain, one hundred and sixty arpents of land joining the donation survey, the same agreeably to ancient boundaries, it appearing to have been very early in the family.

The first order of survey, marked G, is not executed; the land being included in the donation tract, is located on the west side of the Wabash, and is alluded to in the entry C, of Angelique Racine, who therein calls her father Jean Baptiste Racine, and not François.

The second order of survey, H, has been executed; the land surveyed in consequence thereof lies at some distance south of the donation tract, and is alluded to in the entry A, of Henry Vanderburgh, the present claimant, wherein he is called Angelique Denoyons, father of Jean Baptiste Racine, alias Beauxchain. That the father of Angelique Racine should be named by the same person, in one place, A and C, Jean Baptiste Racine dit Beauxchain, in another, G, François Racine, and in a third, H and F, Jean Baptiste Beauxchain, were circumstances calculated to awaken suspicion, inasmuch as Henry Vanderburgh is son-in-law of Angelique Racine, formerly Mrs. Cornover, now Mrs. Denoyer, and could not be supposed to mistake the name of the father of his wife's mother.

The secretary of the Territory, to whom these suspicions were communicated, went into the examination of the books of Col. Sergeant, and sent to the commissioners the following letter, to which were prefixed the two orders of survey marked G and H, verbatim, as they stand on Col. Sergeant's record, properly certified and subscribed by him to the commissioners of the land office for the district of Vincennes:

"GENTLEMEN: On the 26th of December, 1804, I signed a certificate of which the following is a copy, viz: [here follows the certificate alluded to, inserted above, and marked D.] This certificate was given at the solicitation of Judge Vanderburgh, who assisted me, as secretary of the Territory, to compare the contents thereof with the original record in my office. I have since found that it was not conformable to the record, but that the confirmation to the two tracts of land therein mentioned, made by Col. Sergeant, were in the words and figures first above written. See G, and H. As the former certificate is erroneous and done through mistake, I beg you will make the necessary alterations therein so as it may comport with the original record.

"I am, gentlemen, &c.,

"JOHN GIBSON, Secretary Indiana Territory."

With a view to throw some light on a subject involved in such obscurity, the commissioners examined François Racine, son of the late commandant, who, upon his oath, made the following answers to a series of questions put to him by the commissioner, page 1.

That the name of Angelique Racine's father was François Racine, called Beauchene.

That the name of his own father is Jean Baptiste Racine, called of distinction sake St. Marie, formerly commandant under the British government at this place. That François Racine was never called Jean Baptiste.

That the hill above Abraham F. Snapp's mill was called the grand cote and cote à Beauchene, and was one and the same place; that he never knew a man by the name of Jean Baptiste Beauchene, from which it appears evident that a grant of one hundred and thirty-six acres (one hundred and thirty-six arpents) was made to Angelique Racine, in right of her father François, at the grand cote, the big hill; that the union of the christian name of Jean Baptiste Racine, alias St Marie, the ancient commandant at this place, with Beauchene, the additional name of François Racine, and making the big hill and cote à Beauchene, which are one and the same spot, two different places, a second grant has been obtained for a person who never had an existence. That the two notices entered by Judge Vanderburgh for himself, as assignee of Angelique Connoyer or Donnoyere, in right of her father, Jean Baptiste Racine, alias Beauchene, for one hundred and thirty-six acres, and by himself for the same Angelique, in the same right for a similar quantity, with the certificate, was surreptitiously obtained from General Gibson, and not with the record of Winthrop Sergeant, mentioned above.

The commissioners are therefore of opinion that the grant made to Angelique Racine, as heir to her father François, ought to be confirmed, although her notice is incorrect in claiming in the name of Jean Baptiste instead of François, her real father, and it is entered as such in the list of confirmed claims.

That the governor's grant to the heirs of Jean Baptiste Beauchene ought to be considered a nullity, as having been made to an ideal person, under a feigned name, made use of for the purpose of deceiving the governor. That Henry Vanderburgh, the present claimant, cannot be considered as an innocent purchaser, as the whole transaction, from the beginning, has been conducted by him and in his own handwriting, and that the land surveyed for the heirs of Jean Baptiste Beauchene still belongs to the United States.

No. 2.

Judge Vanderburgh entered his claim to one hundred acres of land, part of a donation tract, as assignee of Joseph Hamelin, to whom claimant says the same was granted as head of a family at Vincennes, before the year 1783. John Harbin has laid claim to the remaining three hundred acres, as assignee of the said Joseph Hamelin.

In the records of the Territory is found the grant of four hundred acres to one Joseph Hamelin, to whom No. 88 of said donation tract was allotted, now claimed by Richard Pollard as assignee, (document B,) and but one Joseph Hamelin is to be found on the record. The only support of the present claim is an order of survey from Arthur St. Clair, directed to Robert Bunton, surveyor of the public lands, found amongst the papers, whereof the following is a copy (see book B, page 250).

Survey for Joseph Hamelin four hundred acres of land, a donation as head of a family, contiguous to the donation tract, it having been proven to me that he is entitled as head of a family in 1783, but his name omitted when the list was made out; and this shall be your warrant.

ARTHUR ST. CLAIR.

ROBERT BUNTON, Surveyor of Knox.

DECEMBER 21, 1799.

The fact stated in the above order of survey, namely, that Joseph Hamelin's name had been omitted when the list was made out, is evidently a mistake, since, from the records of the Territory, it appears that a donation tract was in fact granted to one Joseph Hamelin, who drew No. 88.

They therefore reject these claims, as founded on the above order of survey. It remained then for the commissioners to consider this case as unsettled, on the presumption that there existed another man of the same name who might have been entitled, but of this they have obtained no evidence.

No. 3.

James Legerwood, assignee of William Page, 340 acres, by grant of the court, dated March 10, 1782.

The only support of this claim which has been entered and considered by claimant as settled, is an authenticated copy of the deed of court to William Page of the above-mentioned number of acres on the Mill creek, with the following words, evidently in governor St. Clair's handwriting, viz: "To be surveyed," endorsed on the back thereof, which copy was forwarded to governor Harrison, in the fall of 1804, together with sundry other papers and petitions, with annotations in the same handwriting, appearing to have been memoranda of said governor's decision thereon. Those papers were handed by governor Harrison to the register. No confirmation of the same claim appears in the records of the Territory. In addition to the above, it is to be observed that the land herein claimed has been two or three years in possession of the claimant, a bona fide purchaser, who lives and has made valuable improvements thereon.

The commissioners, without any evidence of cultivation and improvement, would have rejected this claim, but being induced to believe that it had been confirmed by governor St. Clair, although by him neglected to be entered in the territorial records, have come to a determination to consider this claim as confirmed, and have entered the same on their books accordingly.

No. 4.

François Hamelin and Pierre Cabasier have entered in the register's office their respective claims to donation rights, as heads of families at Cahokia, and have exhibited affidavits in support thereof.

The above claims may have been entered with the register of the Kaskaskia district; that consideration alone would justify the commissioners in declining to take them up.

But they are convinced that they have no power to enter into the investigation of claims which do not belong to their district, and therefore decline expressing any opinion on their merits.

COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE, Vincennes, May 27, 1812.

SIR: The commissioners for examining claimants' lands in the district of Vincennes, in pursuance of the act of Congress of the 30th day of April, 1810, entitled "An act providing for the sale of certain lands in the Indiana Territory, and for other purposes," beg leave to report:

That their examination being by the provision of the said act strictly confined to donations or gratuitous grants made by resolutions or acts of Congress, they have not gone into the merit of claims founded upon French or British grants, or supposed rights derived from concessions of courts and commandants, as not coming within the purview of the said act, and have therefore rejected them.

Document marked A is a list of such description of claims.

Document marked B is a list of claims coming within the purview of the law, but rejected for want of evidence in support thereof.

Document marked C is a list of claims exhibited to the former board of commissioners, and on which they had made their decisions, which are rejected as not entitled to the benefits of the said act.

Document marked D contains the claims, (and evidence in support thereof,) which, in the opinion of the commissioners, ought to be confirmed had they not been excluded by the provisions of the said act, confirming the benefits thereof to those who were minors, or absent at the time formerly appointed by law for registering claims to land.

Document marked E contains a list of claims which in the opinion of the commissioners ought to be confirmed, arranged conformably to the method adopted in their former reports, and exhibiting the original, the present claimants, and the persons to whom they ought to be respectively confirmed.

Document marked F contains a list of claims rejected on the merits, and the substance of evidence adduced in support thereof. And document marked G contains some special cases.

The imperious duties of the land office, the unavoidable interruptions arising therefrom, and the negligence of claimants in bringing their testimony, have been the principal causes which have protracted the conclusion of this business.

We are, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

JOHN BADOLLET.
NATHANIEL EWING.

ALBERT GALLATIN, Esq., Secretary of the Treasury.

D.

A transcript of rejected claims which, in the opinion of the commissioners, ought to have been confirmed had they not been barred by the 4th section of the act of Congress, entitled "An Act providing for the sale of certain lands in the Indiana Territory, and for other purposes."

The claim of the heirs of François Pettier for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that François Pettier, father of the claimant, lived at Vincennes before and after the country was taken possession of by the Americans; that he kept house, and died about 20 years ago; that Pierre Pettier is the only surviving child, and has always lived at Vincennes. By reference to the records of the Catholic church, it further appears, that Pierre, the only surviving child and heir, was born in February, 1783, and was of course of age when the register office was first opened for receiving notices of claims. The opinion of the commissioners is, that the claim is just, but as the claimant was neither a minor, or an absentee during the time allowed by law for registering claims to land, it is rejected on that ground only.

The claim of Rene Campeau for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant was on the militia roll at Vincennes, from the year 1786, until the year 1795. By the act of 3d of March, 1791, claimant would be entitled; but his absence from the Territory during the time allowed by law for registering claims to land, not being proved, the claim is rejected on that ground.

The claim of François Cardinal for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant did militia duty at Vincennes under deponent for two years previous to the marching of Col. Hamtramck up the Wabash, (that is to say the fall of the year 1790,) and that he was ordered to march with said expedition. He, therefore, would be entitled under the above recited act; but it not being established that he was absent from the Territory during the time allowed by law for registering claims to land, the claim is rejected on that ground only.

The claim of the heirs of Bernice Lefevre for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Bernice Lefevre was married and kept at Vincennes when Captain Helms took possession of the country, that he died in the year 1779, or 1780, that he left no children, but left two nieces and one nephew living in Vincennes. No evidence being adduced of the existence of any other legal representatives, under age or absent at the time fixed by law for registering claims to land, the present claim, which would under other circumstances be confirmed, is rejected for the want of such evidence.

The claim of the heirs of Jean Baptiste Valcour for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that the father of the claimant was at Vincennes when the Americans took possession of the country, that he had a family, lived and kept house therein, until about twenty-seven years ago, when he died; that his eldest son, who is now the only heir, according to one witness, is twenty-six or twenty-seven years old, and according to another witness forty-two years old, and has always lived in Vincennes. He, therefore, was neither a minor, nor an absentee, during the time allowed by law for registering claims to land. The claim, otherwise just, is rejected on the same ground as the preceding

F.

A transcript of claims which have been rejected on their merits.

The claim of the heirs of Pierre Borgne, alias Belfin, for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Pierre Borgne came to Vincennes a soldier under Gen. Clark in the year 1779, that he was a single man, rented deponent's house for a year, wherein he worked at his trade in partnership with one Cantara, for about nine months, after which, he went and lived with one Lavislitte, about three months, at the end of which, he left the country, and has never lived in it since; of the circumstances stated, not one is of such a nature as to bring this case under the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1791. The claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Charles Bonneau for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant's father came to Vincennes before the Americans took possession of the country; that he kept house; but no evidence being adduced to establish the precise time of his death, whether before or since the expedition of Gen. Clark, the claim is rejected.

The claim of Samuel Bradley for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant came to Vincennes, in the year 1785, lived and did militia duty therein until 1788, went to Illinois and returned in 1789, that he then went to Kentucky to join his family, whom he moved to Vienna on Grand river. That he came to Vincennes on business, in July or August 1790, when he was detained until October waiting for company to return home with; it is further proved that he was ordered to go on Col. Hamtramck's expedition, (in that year) was seen on the parade with a gun on his shoulder, but did not go. From the circumstances stated it appears that claimant was not a settled inhabitant of Vincennes, but a traveler, whose place of residence was Kentucky, that he was accidentally detained by apprehension of the Indians, and waited for company.

The opinion of the commissioners is, that the benefit of the act of 1796, in relation to militiamen, applies only to the inhabitants and not to sojourners. The claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of John Balis or Bayless, for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant came to Vincennes as an officer under general Clark; that he married in the winter of 1780, or 1786, and went to live in a house with his wife in the back part of the town, but whether he resigned his commission is not known; that he went away about the time the troops of general Clark left Vincennes. but did not go with them; they went by water and claimant by land. From the above statement it appears that claimant can be viewed in no other light than that of an officer of general Clark's, to whom, no more than the privates, the act of 1791, in relation to heads of families, can by any means apply; it may also be observed, that the officers and privates of the Illinois regiment have been provided for elsewhere. The claim is rejected.

The claim of Pierre Beaupre, for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant came to Vincennes about 20 years ago; (that is, 1785) kept house therein by himself for two years, when he went away; claimant having come two years subsequent to the year 1783, does not come within the purview of the act 1791. The claim is rejected.

The claim of Jean Baptiste Chicotte for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant lived in Vincennes before and after the Americans took possession of the country, was a single man and lived with his brother; claimant cannot be considered as the head of a family. The claim is rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Victal Caron for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Victal Caron lived at Vincennes and kept house, but died before the Americans took possession of the country. The claim is rejected.

The claim of the heir of François Dumay for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant's father lived in Vincennes and was about twelve years old when the country was taken possession of by the Americans. Claimant's father could not have been the head of a family on and before the year of 1783. The claim is rejected.

The claim of Pierre Dumay for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant was on the militia roll, and did militia duty at Vincennes, but it is uncertain at what time; that he left Vincennes four or five years before colonel Hamtramck's expedition against the Indians (in the year 1790.) The claim is rejected, as not coming within the purview of the act 1791.

The claim of the heirs of Joseph Dumay for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Joseph Dumay came to Vincennes about thirty-eight years ago, and lived there until about nine years ago, when he died; that he acted as an interpreter at the United States garrison at Vincennes, and at Greenville in 1795, but it is not known whether he was enrolled in the militia, and it is believed by deponent that he was exempted by being interpreter; the benefit of the act 1791 cannot be extended to Joseph Dumay without a forced construction. The claim is rejected.

The claim of Isaac T. Decker for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that the claimant did militia duty, in the summer of 1790, at the river Duchis station, about six miles from Vincennes; that claimant is older than deponent's son Moses, who was born in the year 1780, and who has received a militia donation, (from the governor when acting as commissioner.) It does not appear that claimant was enrolled on the first of August, 1790, but on the contrary was not of sufficient age to be enrolled, or to do militia duty. The claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Josette Fauvelle for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Josette Fauvelle was the wife of Jean Baptiste Ravelet, who left Vincennes about the year 1777, leaving his wife and family behind, and has never returned; that she left Vincennes before captain Holmes took possession of the country, (that is, June, 1778.) The claim is rejected.

The claim of Charles Finley for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant came to Vincennes in the year 1786, staid about six months and went away, returned to Vincennes with the Kentucky militia who went with colonel Hamtramck against the Indians up the Wabash, in the year 1790, from which facts it appears that claimant was not a resident at Vincennes. The provisions of the act 1791, in behalf of militiamen at Vincennes, cannot apply to him. The claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Jean Baptiste Frizy for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Jean Baptiste Frizy lived in Vincennes, in the year 1786, did militia duty therein, went with general Clark against the Indians in the same year; that he left the country in the year 1787, and has never returned. He cannot come under the law of 1791. The claim is rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Vital Goyoux for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Vital Goyoux lived at Vincennes when the country was taken possession of by the Americans; that he was a single man, and it is not known (to deponent) that he kept house, or when he went away. The claim is rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Antoine Goyoux for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Antoine Goyoux lived in Vincennes when the country was taken possession of by the Americans; that he was a single man; that about thirty-three years ago, he, deponent, and a certain Mr. Larsh, lived together and kept house for one year; he cannot be viewed as the head of a family. The claim is rejected.

The claim of Charles Lognon for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant was a trader and kept store at Vincennes when the country was taken possession of by the Americans; was a single man and lived with his brother; that he married about twenty years ago, and remained at Vincennes until about ten years ago, when he went away; he cannot be viewed as the head of a family between the years of 1779, or 1783. The claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of Vincent Lafoy for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant lived at Vincennes, before and after the Americans took possession of the country, was a single man, had cattle, and kept house in company with a certain doctor Oliver, who was also a single man, but whether before or after the country was taken, deponent does not recollect; that after leaving Oliver, he lived with Angelique Mallet and a Mr. Cartier. From this statement claimant cannot be viewed as the head of a family. Therefore the claim is rejected.

The claim of Jean Baptiste Langlois for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved claimant did militia duty at Vincennes, twenty-one years ago next September (to wit September, 1790), in captain Edelin's company, wherein he remained as a private until about fourteen or fifteen years ago; that he has continued in the country ever since. It not appearing by any testimony adduced, that claimant did militia duty previous to and on the first of August, 1790, the claim is rejected.

The claim of Luke Matson for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant did militia duty in the summer of the year 1790, at the river Duchis station (about six miles from Vincennes); that he is perhaps two years older than deponent's son Moses (who was born in the year 1780.) At such a tender age the claimant's services as a militiaman could not be of any real importance, and the act of 1791 cannot be understood to apply to children, but to effective militiamen. The claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of François Pepin for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that there was a voyager of that name in Vincennes; the time of his arrival or departure is not known, nor any other circumstance concerning him. The claim is rejected.

The claim of Alexis Roubaux for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that claimant lived at Vincennes before and after the Americans took possession of the country; that he was a blacksmith and kept a shop of his own; was a single man, and lived with one Cornoyer; he cannot be considered the head of a family. Therefore the claim is rejected.

The claim of Jacob Pea for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant did militia duty at Vincennes, in the years 1785, 1786 and 1787, and then went away; that it is not known whether he was at Vincennes in the year 1790. By the usual construction of the act of 1791, in favor of militiamen, those only who having done militia duty and were found on the roll on the first of August, 1790, are entitled to the grant of one hundred acres; the claimant in this case being absent long before and at that time, cannot be entitled. The claim is rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Joseph Patterson for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Joseph Patterson was an effective militiaman at Vincennes in the year 1786, was wounded by the Indians at the battle on Embarras creek, in the same year, staid at Vincennes some time, and went away to have his wounds cured, and has since died. This case cannot be considered as embraced by the law of 1791, for reasons assigned in the foregoing case. The claim is rejected.

The claim of John Richardson for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant lived in and did militia duty at Vincennes in the years 1785 and 1786, and went away in 1787. This case cannot be considered as coming within the purview of the act 1791, for the reasons assigned in the aforesaid case. The claim is rejected.

The claim of Edmund Hogen for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant came to Vincennes in the year 1786, did militia duty therein for about a year, and then went away. This case not being considered as embraced by the law of 1791, for the reasons assigned in the foregoing case, the claim is rejected.

The claim of the heirs of John Glass for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that John Glass came to Vincennes in the year 1785; that he was in the battle on Embarras creek with the Indians; that he piloted general Harmer from the mouth of Pidgeon on the Ohio to Vincennes, and died in the latter end of the year 1788. The claim is rejected for the foregoing reasons.

The claim of the heirs of Joel Baker for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Joel Baker came to Vincennes in the year 1785, and did militia duty therein; was in the battle of Embarras in 1786; sometime afterwards he went on a hunting party with some Indians, and was heard of no more; common report says he was killed by the Indians. The claim is rejected for the same reasons as above.

The claim of the heirs of Antoine Rimbeault for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Antoine Rimbeault was living with his father in Vincennes when the Americans took possession of the country; that his said father left Vincennes before that event; that he continued to live with the rest of the children in the father's house after the said father had went away; that Pierre, the eldest brother, was married, but whether he lived with Antoine is not known; that Pierre was killed by the Indians; that Antoine afterwards went on La Balmis' expedition against Detroit (in the fall of the year 1789), and was also killed by the Indians. From which statement no circumstance appears which could constitute Antoine Rimbeault the head of a family; the claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Jean Baptiste Trudell for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Jean Baptiste Trudell came to Vincennes with general Clark, from the Illinois, when he came to take possession of the country, but had lived there before; that he remained in Vincennes many years after the country was taken; that he was not married, nor did he own a house of his own, though sometimes he lived by himself, and sometimes boarded with others. The claim is rejected.

The claim of James Talbert for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that claimant did militia duty at the river Duchis station, (about six miles from Vincennes,) in the year 1790, but whether he was enrolled is not known; that he stood his draft when colonel Hamtramck marched up the Wabash in the fall of that year. No evidence is adduced to prove that claimant did militia duty before or on the 1st of August, 1790. For the want of such evidence the claim is rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Jean Marie Barrois for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Jean M. Barrois lived at Vincennes before and after the Americans took possession of the country; was a single man and kept house by himself; the same witness being re-examined, said that he sometimes lived by himself and sometimes with his brother; that he never had a family.

By a liberal construction of the section of the act of Congress of 1791, relating to donations, former commissioners have granted 400 acres of land to such unmarried men as kept house with working people, or servants, viewing them as real heads of families, but, in the opinion of the present commissioners, such a departure from the letter, if not the spirit of the law, which seems to have had in view husbands and fathers only, cannot be justified, without the aforesaid circumstances being clearly established. In the present case no such thing is made apparent, and the vague expression of the witness, that Jean M. Barrois kept house (tenoit menage) which is even explained away by these words "he lived sometimes by himself and sometimes with his brother," repels the idea of a permanent mode of life, and can hardly mean anything else, than that Jean M. Barrois boarded himself, and does not constitute him the head of a family, either in a strict or an enlarged sense. The claim is therefore rejected.

The claim of the heirs of Jean Moise Malbouef for a donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Jean Moise Malbouef was in Vincennes 36 or 37 years ago, that he had a house and lot, and was the head a family and lived therein, until about the year 1787 or 1788, when he went away and has never returned; another witness proves that he married in the year 1785 and was a hunter; another that he was a day laborer and sometimes hunted; that he had a house and lot of his own, on and before the year 1783, wherein he lived by himself; but had no family until the year 1785, when he married at the falls of the Ohio. The general and vague expression that Jean Moise Malbouef was a head of a family on and before the year 1783, used by one witness, is explained away by the circumstantial evidence of the other two, who state facts not to be mistaken. The commissioners cannot see that Jean Moise Malbouef was head of a family within the meaning of the act of 1791: the claim is rejected for reasons assigned in the preceding case.

The claim of the heirs of Joseph St. Marie Racine for a donation of 400 acres.

One witness proves that Joseph St. Marie Racine lived at Vincennes before the Americans took possession of the country; but he does not know whether he was alive when that event took place; that he was never married but kept house; another states the same circumstance with this difference only, that he believes he was alive when the country was taken by the Americans. The want of positive proof that Joseph St. Marie Racine was living when the country came unto the possession of the Americans, for the vague expression of one of the witnesses that he believes he was, is far from establishing that fact, would be a reasonable ground of rejection; but the fact well established, that he was a single man, and the total want of evidence of every circumstance which would induce a belief that he lived at the head of working people or other dependents, forbids the liberal extension of the law to this case. The claim is therefore rejected for the same reasons as in the preceding case.

G.

Special cases.

The claim of the heirs of Joseph Pancake for a militia donation of 400 acres.

It is proved that Joseph Pancake was an effective militiaman at Vincennes in the year 1786; that he was with and under deponent's (John Small,) command in the same year the engagement with the Indians on Embarras, where he was killed.

The claim of the heirs of Jacob Howell for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Jacob Howell was an effective militiaman at Vincennes, in the year 1786; that he commanded a party at the engagement with the Indians on Embarras, wherein he was killed.

The claim of the heirs of Alexander Wilson for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Alexander Wilson came to Vincennes in the year 1784; that he lived and did militia duty therein, until the year 1786, when he was killed by the Indians in the Embarras engagement.

The claim of the heirs of Daniel Sullivan for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Daniel Sullivan came to Vincennes in the year 1785, when he did militia duty until 1790, in the month of April of which year he was killed by the Indians.

The claim of the heirs of Jacob Tevebaugh, for a militia donation of 100 acres.

It is proved that Jacob Tevebaugh came to Vincennes in the year 1785, did militia duty therein until the year 1790, and that in the month of April of the same year he was killed by the Indians, with Daniel Sullivan.

Preceding commissioners have construed the provision of the act of 1791, relating to militia grants, strictly, rejecting the claim of those who had left the country before the first of August, 1790, and although they had done militia duty for years before, and granted one hundred acres to such as, however recently arrived in the country, happened to be on the militia roll on that day. The present commissioners entertained some doubts on the correctness of that construction, and were inclined to believe that more liberality would accord better with the intentions of Congress; they could not entirely reject the idea, that the clause of the act of 1791, in favor of militiamen, went to provide a reward of one hundred acres of land for every man who, having not received the donation allotted to the heads of families, had done militia duty during their residence in the country, since it had come under the American government, and that the enrollment, on the first day of August, 1790, was required as evidence of the performance of that duty rather than a condition indispensable for obtaining the bounty. Fully sensible, however, of the importance and necessity of an uniform system of decisions, they have hitherto made no innovations therein in relation to militia claims, and rejected those which were predicated upon performance of militia duty not extending to the first of August, 1790. But the foregoing claims present themselves under a very different aspect. The several persons in whose right the bounty of one hundred acres is demanded by their representatives, not only did militia duty, but lost their lives, some in the actual performance of that duty, and all by the hands of the common enemy. To have peremptorily rejected them, would have savored of injustice; to have confirmed them, would have been perhaps too great a deviation from the letter if not the spirit of the law and mode hitherto adopted in the decision of land claims. Under these circumstances, the commissioners, under a strong impression of the equity of the claims alluded to, have deemed it proper to lay the whole in the form of a special report, under the view of Congress, who alone can grant the relief which the law puts, (perhaps,) out of the power of the commissioners to award; and feel no hesitation in expressing their opinion, that the respective claimants ought to receive the bounty of one hundred acres earned at the expense of the blood of their fathers and relatives.

23D CONGRESS.] No. 1334. [2D SESSION.

OPINION OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 25, 1835.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, JANUARY TERM, 1835.

CH. D. DELASSUS
vs.
THE UNITED STATES.

Opinion of the Court, delivered by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall.

This is an appeal from a decree pronounced by the court of the United States for the district of Missouri, by which the claim and title of the petitioner, Charles Dehault Delassus, to a tract of land in his petition mentioned, under a concession alleged to be authorized by the laws of Spain, and protected by the treaty ceding Louisiana to the United States, was declared to be invalid.

The suit was instituted under the act of the 25th of May, 1824, "enabling the claimants to lands within the limits of the State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas, to institute proceedings to try the validity of their claims."

The petition, which is the institution of the suit, states that, on the 3d of March, 1795, Don Pedro Dechault Delassus Deluzieres, the father of the petitioner, addressed his petition to Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of the province of Upper Louisiana, praying that a concession or grant should be made to him and his heirs, of a tract of land containing seven thousand and fifty-six arpens, French measure, being a league square. That said lieutenant governor, in compliance with said petition, and in obedience to an official instruction addressed to him by the governor general of the province of Louisiana, the Baron de Carondelet, did, by decree bearing date the 1st of April, in the year 1795, grant to said Deluzieres and his heirs, forever, a tract of a square league, situated on a branch of the river St. Francis, called Gabouri; and, by said decree, ordered François Vallé the captain commandant of the post of St. Genevieve, to put Deluzieres forthwith in possession of the said tract of land, which was done on the 15th of the same month. A delay in the appointment of a surveyor for the province prevented the survey from being immediately made. It was made on the 14th of December, 1799. The petition proceeds to state that the requisites of the laws for the preservation of his rights had been observed, that his father is dead, and the title is vested in the petitioner. He prays that his title and claim be confirmed.

The answer of the district attorney professes ignorance of the facts, and insists that the petitioner be required to prove the validity of his claim.

The petition of Pierre Charles Dehault Delassus Deluzieres, presented to Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of the western part of Illinois, &c., states that, in May, 1793, he resolved to come to Illinois, on the assurance of his lordship, the Baron de Carondelet, governor general of Louisiana, that he would order and authorize him, the said Don Zenon Trudeau, the lieutenant governor, &c., to grant him, the petitioner, a tract of land for the exclusive exploration of lead mines, &c., which assurance is fully expressed in a letter annexed to the petition, which, he adds, conforms to a letter addressed to the lieutenant governor on the same subject. The petition then ascribes the delay in its presentation to long and severe illness, and to the difficulty of finding a tract of land adapted to the object. This being at length accomplished, and having found a spot indicating that it contains lead mineral on one of the branches of the river St. Francis, called Gabouri, the petitioner prays a concession thereof to the extent of a league square.

The letter of the Baron de Carondelet is in these words: "The knight Don Pierre Dehault Delassus has entered into contract with this intendancy to deliver, yearly, during the term of five years, thirty thousand pounds of lead, in balls or bars. In order that he may comply with his contract, your worship will put him in possession of the land he may solicit for the exploration, benefit and enjoyment of the mines; for which purpose, he is to present a memorial directed to me, and which your worship will transmit, that I may give him the corresponding decree of concession, being understood, in the meantime, your worship will put him in possession. God preserve your worship many years. New Orleans, May 7, 1793.

"EL BARON DE CARONDELET.

"To ZENON TRUDEAU."

Other letters from the Baron de Carondelet, sustaining that above recited, were annexed to this petition; and on the 1st of April, 1795, Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of the province, granted the required concession.

The regular documents to prove the survey and the possession of the premises by Delassus were also laid before the district court.

The act of the 26th of May, 1824, gives the district court authority to hear and determine all questions arising in any cause brought before it by the petition of any person claiming lands within the State of Missouri, "by virtue of any French or Spanish grant, concession, warrant or order of survey, legally made, granted or issued, before the 10th day of March, 1804, by the proper authorities, to any person or persons resident in the province of Louisiana at the date thereof, or on or before the 10th day of March, 1804, and which was protected or secured by the treaty between the United States of America and the French republic, of the 30th day of April, 1803, and which might have been perfected into a complete title, under and in conformity to the laws, usages and customs of the government under which the same originated, had not the sovereignty of the country been transferred to the United States."

In the first article of the treaty referred to, the Consul of the French republic ceded to the United States, in full sovereignty, the province of Louisiana, with all its rights and appurtenances. The second article declares that in this cession "are included the adjacent islands belonging to Louisiana, all public lots and squares, vacant lands, and all public buildings, fortifications, barracks and other edifices which are not private property." The third article stipulates "that the inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States, and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the federal Constitution, to the enjoyments of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States; and, in the meantime, they shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty, property, and the religion which they profess."

These are the stipulations which afford that protection or security to claims to land under the French or Spanish government, to which the act of Congress refers. They extend to all property until Louisiana shall become a member of the Union, into which the inhabitants are to be incorporated as soon as possible, "and admitted to all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States." That the perfect inviolability and security of property is among these rights, all will assert and maintain.

The right of property, then, is protected and secured by the treaty, and no principle is better settled in this country than that an inchoate title to lands is property.

Independent of treaty stipulation, this right would be held sacred. The sovereign who acquires an inhabited territory, acquires full dominion over it; but this dominion is never supposed to divest the vested right of individuals to property. The language of the treaty ceding Louisiana excludes every idea of interfering with private property—of transferring lands which had been severed from the royal domain. The people change their sovereign. Their right to property remains unaffected by this change.

The inquiry, then, is, whether this concession "was legally made by the proper authorities," "and might have been perfected into a complete title, under and in conformity to the laws, usages, and customs of the government under which the same originated, had not the sovereignty of the country been transferred to the United States."

The concession was made in regular form, on the first of April, 1795, by Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of the western part of Illinois, in which the land lay, by special order of the Baron de Carondelet, governor general of the province, given in consequence of a contract entered into by Deluzieres with the government for the supply of lead.

By the royal order of 1774, the power of granting lands, which had been invested in the intendants by an order of 1768, was revested in the civil and military governors of provinces, who retained it until 1798. (See White's compilation, 208.) In the execution of this power, the lieutenant governors, or commandants of posts, as is fully shown by the proceedings before the various tribunals appointed under the authority of the United States, were employed to make the original concession and order of survey, and to put the grantee into possession. In 1795, then, when these acts were performed by the lieutenant governor, under the authority and by the special order of the governor general, those officers were the "proper authorities," and had full power to make the concessions, and to perfect it by a complete title. Who can doubt that it would have been so perfected "in conformity to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish government, had not the sovereignty of the country been transferred to the United States?"

A grant or a concession made by that officer who is by law authorized to make it, carries with it prima facie evidence that it is within his powers. No excess of them, or departure from them, is to be presumed. He violates his duty by such excess, and is responsible for it. He who alleges that an officer entrusted with an important duty has violated his instructions, must show it.

This subject was fully discussed in the United States vs. Arredondo, 6th Peters, Percheman vs. the United States, 7th Peters, and the United States vs. Clarke, 8th Peters. It is unnecessary to repeat the arguments contained in the opinions given by the court in those cases.

The concession is unconditional, the land was regularly surveyed, and the party put into possession.

The objection made to this plain title is, that the concession is not made in pursuance of the regulations of O'Reilly.

This objection was considered in the cases heretofore decided by this court, and especially in 8th Peters, 455. It is apparent that those regulations were intended for the general government of subordinate officers, not to control and limit the power of the person from whose will they emanated. The Baron de Carondelet we must suppose possessed all the powers which had been vested in Don O'Reilly, and a concession ordered by him is as valid as a similar concession directed by governor O'Reilly would have been. Had governor O'Reilly made such a grant, could it have been alleged that he had disabled himself, by his instructions for the regulation of the conduct of his subordinate officers—instructions which the person that created must have been capable of varying or annulling—from exercising the power vested in him by the crown?

The lead mine has been mentioned; but the act of Congress on which the case depends, contains no reservation of lead mines. It extends the jurisdiction of the court to all claims "by virtue of any French or Spanish grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey," legally made, &c., by the proper authorities, &c. This is such a concession.

The court is of opinion that the claim of the appellant is valid, and ought to be confirmed. The decree of the district court is reversed and annulled; and this court, proceeding to pronounce such decree as the district court ought to have given, doth declare the claim of the petitioners to be valid, and doth confirm their title to the tract of land in their petition mentioned, according to the boundaries thereof, as described in the survey made by Antonio Soulard, principal deputy surveyor of Upper Louisiana, on the 14th day of December, 1799, and his certificate of the said survey, dated the 5th of March, 1800, and appearing in the record of the proceedings of this cause.

I, Richard Peters, reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the opinion of the court, delivered by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, at January term, 1835.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, JANUARY TERM, 1835.

CHOTEAU ET AL.
vs.
THE UNITED STATES.

Opinion of the Court, delivered by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall.

Auguste A. Choteau and others, devisees of Auguste Choteau, presented their petition to the court of the United States for the district of Missouri, praying that their title to twelve hundred and eighty-one arpens of land near the town of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, which they claim under the following circumstances, be confirmed.

The late Auguste Choteau applied to the then exisiting governor of Upper Louisiana for permission to establish a distillery in or near the town of St. Louis; which permission was granted on the 3d of January, 1800.

He then petitioned for a concession for twelve hundred and eighty-one superficial arpens of land, to furnish firewood for his distillery; which was granted in the following words:

"ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 5, 1800.

"Being satisfied that the applicant has sufficient means to make available, in the term of the regulation of this province, the lands which he demands, the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, Mr. Anthony Soulard, will put him in possession of the twelve hundred and eighty-one arpens of land, in the place where he asks it; and afterwards, the applicant will have to solicit the formal title of concession of the intendant general of these provinces, to whom belongs, by order of his Majesty, the disposing and conceding every kind of vacant lands of the royal domains.

"CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS."

The permission of the governor general to erect the distillery is alluded to in the following letter from him to the claimant:

"NEW ORLEANS, May 20, 1799.

"MY DEAR FRIEND: Wishing to testify to you my esteem, by every opportunity, I merely assure you of my esteem, promising to answer your letter by the boat that just arrived, and which will leave here next week. In my instructions to Mr. Delassus, I recommend him particularly to favor all your undertakings, &c., &c.

"Adieu: I am in such a hurry that I have but the time to tell you that I am your sincere friend, and most humble servant,

"MANUEL GAYOSO DE LEMOS."

The order of survey was executed on the 10th of April, 1801, and the petitioner put in possession, which he retained till his death, having first made his last will, in which he devised it to the petitioners, who have taken all the steps required by law to preserve their claim.

The petition prays for a confirmation of the title. The answer of the district attorney admits nothing, and submits the case to the court, on the proof to be made by the petitioners. The erection of the distillery, and the manufacture of spirits, to a considerable extent, the apparent motive to the grant, are fully proved.

The distinction between the case of Choteau and others, and that of Delassus whose title has been confirmed, consists in this: The concession to Delassus was made by the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, by direction of the governor general, at a time when the power of granting land was vested in the governors of provinces. This power was transferred to the intendant general in 1779, after which transfer, in January, 1800, the order of survey under which Choteau claimed was made by the lieutenant governor. The validity of the order depends on the authority of the lieutenant governor to make it. Choteau alleges, in support of this authority, that the lieutenant governor was also sub-delegate, in which character he was empowered to grant incomplete titles.

Several documents have been laid before the court, which satisfy us that the lieutenant governors were, by virtue of their office, sub-delegates. In the record in Soulard's case, which, we understand, is to be considered as an exhibit in this, a letter from the lieutenant governor Delassus to the surveyor general is introduced, in which he recites a letter of Morales, the intendant general, to him, dated the 1st of December, 1802, informing him that, in consequence of the death of the assessor, he had closed the tribunal of affairs and causes relating to grants and compositions of royal lands. The letter adds, "I make this communication, in order that, apprised of this providence, you may not receive, frame, or transmit memorials soliciting lands until further orders."

In a letter of the 26th of August, 1799, addressed by Morales to Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, in which he notices instructions given by Delassus to Roberto McKay, in his character of sub-delegate, he observes, "I must say that it being contrary to law that one sub-delegate should transfer his powers to another," "the instructions given by you cannot, nor ought to, have effect, and the more so as the sub-delegation of the intendancy is local." In a certificate given by Don Gilberto Leonard, treasurer of the army, and Don Manuel Gonzales Armirez, minister of the royal treasury, &c., of the province of Louisiana, they certify that, in pursuance of a decree of the senior intendant general ad interim, the senior colonel, Charles Dehault Delassus, formerly commandant of the post of New Madrid, and lieutenant governor of St. Louis of the Illinois, with the sub-delegation of the royal treasury in both situations," &c.

In the claims laid before the commissioners, and confirmed, are several which originated with Delassus, after the power of granting lands was transferred from the governor to the intendant general. This very order of survey was executed by the surveyor general in 1801; possession was delivered to Choteau, which was retained by him during his life, and appears to have remained with his devisees since his death.

On this point the report made by the recorder and commissioners to Congress, under the acts of the 9th of July, 1832, and the 2d of March, 1833, cannot be disregarded. They speak of the union of the two offices of lieutenant governor and sub-delegate as being universally understood and admitted.

Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, whose deposition appears to be annexed to the report of the commissioners, deposes, "that all the lieutenant governors of Upper Louisiana were, in virtue of their offices as lieutenant governors, likewise sub-delegate; that the offices of lieutenant governor and sub-delegate were inseparable." Morales, who, immediately after the sale of the royal lands, had been transferred to his intendancy, assigns as one reason for issuing his regulations, "that the commandants, as sub-delegates of the intendancy, may be informed what they ought to observe."

If, as we think must be admitted, Delassus was sub-delegate as well as lieutenant governor, the transfer of the power of granting lands, belonging to the royal domain, from the governer to the intendant general, did not affect his power to give the order of survey, on which the title of the petitioner depends. That order is the foundation of title, and is, according to the acts of Congress, and the general understanding and usage of Louisiana and Missouri, capable of being perfected into a complete title. It is property capable of being alienated, of being subjected to debts, and is, as such, to be held as sacred and inviolate as other property.

The power of lieutenant governor Delassus, in his character of sub-delegate, to make his order of survey, being established, all the principles settled in the preceding cases apply to this. No objection to the claim is perceived, and we think it ought to have been declared valid.

The decree of the district court is reversed and annulled; and this court, proceeding to give such decree as the district court ought to have given, doth declare the claim of the petitioners, to the tract of land in their petition mentioned, to be valid, and doth confirm their title to the same, according to the boundaries thereof, as described in the survey made by Antonio Soulard, principal deputy surveyor of Upper Louisiana, on the 5th day of March, 1801, a certificate of which appears in the record, dated the 10th day of April, 1801.

I, Richard Peters, reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the opnion of the court, delivered by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, at January term, 1835.

RICH'D PETERS. [L. S.]

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, JANUARY TERM, 1835.

THE DEVISEES OF AUGUSTE CHOTEAU vs. THE UNITED STATES. } Opinion of the Court, delivered by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall.

This is an appeal from a decree of the district court of Missouri, sitting under the act of the 26th of May, 1824.

The devisees of Auguste Choteau, a citizen of Missouri, presented their petition to the district court, in which they state that their testator, on the 8th day of January, 1798, being then a resident of Upper Louisiana, obtained from Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of that province, a decree directing Don Antonio Soulard, the surveyor general of the province, to put the said Choteau in possession of the land prayed for, and to survey the same, and make a plat and certificate thereof, to enable the said Choteau to solicit a complete title thereon from the governor general, who, by the said decree, was informed that the said petitioner's circumstances were such as to entitle him to that favor. In pursuance of this decree, the survey was executed on the 20th of December, 1803, and the said Choteau put into possession of the tract surveyed, amounting to one league square, which he retained till his death, when he devised it to the petitioners, who have remained in possession ever since.

All the steps required by law, for the preservation of the title acquired by the decree of the lieutenant governor, have been taken.

The petitioners pray that their right and title to the land they claim may be confirmed.

The answer of the district attorney admits nothing, and refers the claim to the court.

Some testimony was taken, to show that the said Auguste Choteau was, at the time of his petition, and of the decree of the lieutenant governor, and at the date of the said survey, possessed of at least one hundred head of tame cattle, from two to three hundred hogs, from one hundred and forty to one hundred and fifty horses, about forty sheep, and from fifty to sixty slaves.

The United States gave, in evidence, a petition of the said Auguste Choteau, presented on the 24th day of January, 1798, to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, praying for a concession of seven thousand and fifty-six arpens of land, situated on the north bank of the Missouri, about two hundred and five miles from its mouth, which petition was granted on the succeeding day. A survey of this tract was executed on the 17th of March, 1801; and it appears to have been conveyed by Auguste Choteau to Daniel Clarke, by deed, bearing date the 8th of September, 1804. This claim was offered to the board of commissioners, but being "unsupported by actual inhabitation and cultivation," was rejected. The board, at the same time, observed that the said concession is not duly registered.

The only objection which can be made to the validity of this concession, is, that the petitioner did not possess as many tame cattle as the regulations of O'Reilly required. The eighth article of those regulations declares that no grant in the Opelousas, Attakapas, and Natchitoches, shall exceed one league in front, by one league in depth. The ninth is in these words: "To obtain in the Opelousas, Attakapas, and Natchitoches, a grant of forty-two arpens in depth, the applicant must make appear that he is possessed of one hundred head of tame cattle, some horses and sheep, and two slaves to look after them—a proportion which shall always be observed for the grants to be made of greater extent than that declared in the preceding article.

There is some confusion in these two articles, which would lead to a suspicion that the translation may not be accurate. The eighth article declares that no grant shall exceed a league square; and the ninth, if to be understood literally, professes to prescribe the property which the applicant must possess, to entitle him to a larger quantity than a league square. It is also observable that this article is limited to the three districts mentioned, which are not in Upper Louisiana, and that they are peculiarly adapted to a grazing country, and to a grazing country only. There could be no motive for apportioning one hundred head of cattle to two slaves in an agricultural country. It is probable that if the regulations of O'Reilly were extended to Upper Louisiana, they were extended with modifications, at least of the ninth article, so as to adapt the proportions of property required to the country to which the article was extended.

This supposition derives great strength from the fact that the lieutenant governor, who must have understood his orders, certifies to the governor, in his decree, "that the said applicant is in the circumstances that merit this favor." The applicant is proved to have possessed more slaves than were required by the ninth article of O'Reilly's regulations, though not so many tame cattle.

We think also that, in the spirit of the decisions which have been heretofore made by this court, and of the acts of confirmation passed by Congress, the fact, that the applicant possessed the requisite amount of property to entitle him to the land he solicited, was submitted to the officer who decided on the application, and that he is not bound to prove it to the court which passes on the validity of the grant. These incomplete titles were transferable, and the assignee might not possess the means of proving the exact number of cattle in possession of the petitioner when the concession was made.

It is remarkable that, if we may trust the best information we have on the subject, neither the governor nor intendant general has ever refused to perfect incomplete title granted by a deputy governor or sub-delegate. We cannot allow this objection to prevail.

The objection drawn by the United States from the concession made on the 24th January, 1798, is not, we think, entitled to more weight. The eighth regulation, made by O'Reilly, is not that no individual shall receive grants for more land than one league square, but that no grant shall exceed one league square. The words of the regulation do not forbid different grants to the same person, and, so far as our information goes, it has never been so construed. Neither of these grants, so far as we understand the geography of the country, lies in Opelousas, Attakapas, or Natchitoches. It does not appear that the grant made on the 24th of January has been established, and the record shows that it was rejected by the board of commissioners for reasons on the sufficiency of which we do not now decide. But it is conclusive that the concession of the 24th of January was subsequent to that of the 8th, and consequently could not affect it.

We are of opinion that the district court erred in declaring the concession made to Auguste Choteau, on the 8th of January, 1798, to be invalid, and that the same ought to be confirmed.

The decree of the district court is reversed and annulled; and this court, proceeding to give such decree as the district court ought to have given, doth declare the claim of the petitioners, to the tract of land in their petition mentioned, to be valid, and doth confirm their title to the same, according to the boundaries thereof, as described in the survey made by James Rankin, deputy surveyor, and certified by Anthony Soulard, principal deputy surveyor of Upper Louisiana, as appears by his certificate of the 29th of December, 1803, contained in the record.

I, Richard Peters, reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the opinion of the court, delivered by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, at January term, 1835.

FRAUDS IN THE SALE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 3, 1835.

Mr. POINDEXTER, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred sundry resolutions of the Senate, instructing said committee to inquire whether any fraudulent practices had taken place in the sales of the public lands by means of combinations or companies of individuals, reported:

That the great extent of country over which the public lands are spread, and the numerous districts into which it has been divided by law, for the convenience of the purchasers thereof at public or private sale, rendered the investigations which the committee were instructed to make tedious and difficult, and in some cases impracticable; but everything has been done which vigilance and industry could effect to overcome these obstacles, and a volume of testimony has been obtained, which is herewith presented to the Senate, subject to such order as the Senate may think proper to adopt in relation to it. It appears by the reports of the commissioners appointed to take depositions in several land districts, that most of the persons who have been large purchasers of the public lands, in connection with combinations or companies of speculators, who were summoned to give testimony concerning the frauds practiced by such companies, have either declined or positively refused to appear before the commissioners and testify. Hence the evidence is much more imperfect than it would have been if these persons could have been compelled to obey the summons issued under the authority of the Senate. Many of the speculators were persons filling high offices in the States in which the public lands purchased by them are situated, and others possessing wealth and influence, all of whom naturally united to render this investigation odious among the people; and in this manner influenced numerous witnesses to refuse their testimony to facts within their knowledge, touching the matters into which the committee have been instructed to inquire.

In some instances the commissioners were threatened with personal violence, to deter them from the performance of their duties; and all who testified were denounced and put in fear by the powerful combinations whose conduct was the subject of scrutiny. In the district of lands subject to sale at Chocchuma, in Mississippi, the life of a person, acting as commissioner, was attempted; which, however, failed, and the assailant fell a victim to his own rash act. The committee have adverted to these circumstances to show the causes which have produced the delays in closing the examination of the witnesses, and the means employed to prevent a full development of the frauds which have so extensively prevailed in certain quarters in the sales of the public lands, which have resulted to the great injury of the public interests, and of the poor emigrant who desired to purchase a home for himself and family. The committee have withheld their report to the latest period of the session, in the hope that all the evidence might be received, to enable them to bring the investigation to a final determination; but in this they have been disappointed.

Many of the commissioners have not returned the depositions taken by them, and therefore the report must necessarily leave the subject open to the action of the next Congress. The committee do not propose to enter into a tedious detail of the evidence before them, as it will accompany their report, and may be read and understood by all who desire to inform themselves of the frauds which it discloses. They will barely present a summary of the general character of these frauds, and recommend such remedies as may be seen to be best adapted to the correction of them in future. It appears to the committee that the present system of laws for the disposal of the lands of the United States is fully adequate to the protection of the public interests and of private rights; and the only medium through which frauds of any kind can be practiced, is in the maladministration of the laws by the officers who are entrusted with the superintendence of the sales of these lands. That all the mischiefs which have been so loudly complained of are to be traced to those whose duty it is to execute the laws, the volume of evidence now submitted to the Senate fully proves. The first step necessary to the success of every scheme of speculation in the public lands, is to corrupt the land officers, by a secret understanding between the parties that they are to receive a certain proportion of the profits, and that point being gained, every difficulty to the consummation of their plan of operations may be removed, without the hazard of detection.

These officers hold their commissions at the will of the President of the United States; and for causes such as have existed for several years past, and are believed now to exist, they ought in many districts to be removed from office; but the facility with which they may participate in frauds of the greatest enormity without detection, acting ostensibly under the name of another, and binding their associates to secrecy, and also the undue confidence often reposed in a political favorite or personal friend by the chief magistrate, too frequently protect officers who violate the laws from punishment, and thereby the public interests sustain injuries to an extent which cannot be accurately estimated. All these things have occurred for the last three or four years in districts where the most atrocious and outrageous frauds have been committed, as will abundantly appear by the testimony which accompanies this report. No officer has been removed for these causes; but the most guilty among them have been reappointed from time to time, until they have become bold and fearless in their course, well knowing how to retain their places and speculate on the public property. These defects are not in the law, but in its administration; and the remedy, if any, must be found in future legislation, applicable to the existing state of things.

The committee have received but little evidence of frauds committed or tolerated by the land offices northwest of the river Ohio. These may nevertheless exist; but as no strong representations have been made on the subject, commissions for taking testimony have been sent only into the district of Zanesville, in Ohio. The evidence from that quarter shows a few cases of favoritism in the entry of public lands at private sale; and, at one time, the practice pretty generally prevailed of making the land offices depositories of scrip, receivable in payment of the public lands, in which a system of speculation was carried on by the several registers and receivers, in a manner and under circumstances deserving the severest censure of the government and the people. The late register at Zanesville was most deeply implicated in these speculations and other malpractices. He was rebuked by the Senate by the rejection of his nomination for reappointment; and, with this exception, it is believed that the sales of the public lands in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, and the Territory of Michigan, are fairly made according to law. The states of Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana have been the principal theatre of speculations and frauds in buying up the public lands, and dividing the most enormous profits between the members of the different companies of speculators. The committee refer to the depositions of numerous respectable witnesses to attest the various ramifications of these speculations and frauds, and the means by which they have been carried into effect. That these depositions fall far short of the whole truth, on the subjects to which they relate, the committee cannot doubt, from the refusal of the parties concerned to appear and testify before the commissioners, or to answer interrogatories. From Alabama the testimony is yet incomplete, and much more may be expected prior to the next session of Congress. It appears, however, that an organized band of speculators has been formed in that State, with a large capital, on which immense purchases have been made of the public lands and Indian reservations in the tracts of country lately ceded to the United States by the Creek, Choctaw, and Chickasaw tribes of Indians. The first proclamation of the President of the United States for the sale of the lands acquired from the Creek Indians, by the late treaty with that tribe, was promulgated only four weeks before the sales took place; and, consequently, the inhabitants of that country had no opportunity of procuring the necessary funds to purchase the small tracts of lands which they had settled and cultivated; nor, indeed, did they know, with a few exceptions, when or where the sales took place.

It appears from the testimony of —— Magruder, one of the commissioners for locating the Indian reservations in that country, that none but speculators attended those sales and made purchases, and that so great were the sacrifices made in the sales for the want of bidders, that a single section was bid off at about eight hundred dollars by the agent of a company, and sold off the next day for as many thousand dollars as it had cost the purchaser hundreds. This case is selected as an example of what had occurred at these sales. The committee at the last session reported a bill to prohibit sales under these short notices, which was passed into a law, and therefore a like proceeding in favor of speculators cannot again occur. In Mississippi the most extensive speculations and frauds have been practiced, and the committee proceed to state the character of them under general heads, referring to the testimony for more enlarged specifications.

I. THE MOUNT SALUS LAND OFFICERS.

The register and receiver at this land office, Samuel Gwin and George P. Dameron, were notoriously engaged in extensive speculations in the lands of the United States. In order to secure the most valuable tracts of land, of which they became possessed of accurate information by their official stations, they marked every such tract with the letter S, so that if any person wishing to purchase should apply for either of the tracts thus marked, the applicant was informed that the tract was previously entered, and in this manner it remained unsold until they, or either of them, could make a suitable profit by private sale, or found it convenient to pay the minimum price and obtain a final certificate of purchase. The same practice was likewise adopted to favor particular individuals who were the friends or favorites of those officers, and who had not the means to make prompt payment. It appears by the deposition of the present receiver in the said district, —— Summeral, who is shown by the evidence to be an honest, upright man, and a faithful public officer, that at the time he took possession of his office there were numerous tracts of land marked on the map with the letter S, which had not been sold, and which have since been opened to entry at private sale. The number of tracts so marked is stated at about two hundred.

2. These officers were in the constant habit of selling the public lands to applicants on a credit, exacting from the purchasers a separate note as a bonus or interest on the nominal amount of the purchase money, which they appropriated to their own use, and signed a receipt to the purchaser only when the money and interest were paid, and in the meantime the tract thus fraudulently sold was marked with the letter S, to prevent persons from making application to enter it. The law requires that the lands of the United States shall be sold for ready money only.

3. These officers appear on the sale books to have become the purchasers of lands in their own names, contrary to the express provisions of law.

4. They stand charged, by the testimony of many witnesses, with gross partiality and favoritism between applicants for the same tract of land, and with other devices highly vexatious to individuals who might incur their displeasure, and injurious to the interests of the government. How far these or like derelictions of duty, in violation of law, have taken place in other districts in that State or elsewhere, will more fully appear by an inspection of the evidence. The committee, however, deem it due to justice to state, that the present land officers at the Mount Salus district have done much to reform the abuses previously existing there, and these offices are now conducted with strict honesty and legal propriety.

II. THE CHOCCHUMA DISTRICT.

Samuel Gwin was transferred to this office, as register, from Mount Salus. The committee will not enter into the detail of the profligate scenes which took place in this district at the sales which opened in October, 1833, and which have continued to characterize the conduct of the register who controls the sales at private entry up to the present time. The evidence portrays greater enormities at this office than is believed to have occurred at any time in any land district of the United States. To this evidence the committee beg leave to refer the Senate. It appears that three or more extensive companies of speculators met at these sales, who in a very short time after the sales opened united for the purpose of monopolizing all the good lands then offered at public sale, of overawing bidders, and driving all competition out of the market. These objects were fully accomplished by certain articles of agreement entered into between the respective companies, a part of which have been published by a principal partner and agent of these companies. Among the extraordinary facts which the testimony discloses in relation to this combination are the following:

1. That the agents of the company undertook to dictate terms to the actual settlers, and claim to themselves great credit for having permitted each occupant to purchase, or to purchase themselves for him, on certain conditions, a tract not exceeding one quarter section, at the minimum price of the government, to include his improvements, provided each settler should not bid at public sale for any other land. This privilege was granted by permission of the company of speculators, and the agents were employed to carry the same into effect, which they accordingly did. All who refused to enter into this arrangement, and they were but few, had no other alternative but to bid against the large capitalists of which the company was composed, and purchase his land at a high price; but the instant he submitted to the authority of the company, his improvements were secured to him at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. One of the agents boasted that he had passed a pre-emption law in effect which had been rejected by Congress.

Thus it will be seen that the laws were set at defiance; and a body of men, combined for the avowed purpose of speculating on the government, were permitted by the officers superintending these sales to dictate terms to bidders, to break down all competition, and even to arrogate to themselves the power of granting pre-emptions to actual settlers. These facts are well calculated to excite the indignant feelings of the people of these States, and ought to claim the serious consideration of Congress. The evidence further demonstrates that three-fourths of the valuable cotton lands sold at Chocchuma in October, 1833, were purchased by the agents of the speculators at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, with the exception of a few tracts which were purchased at a higher rate. It further appears that the company established an office in the vicinity of the register's office, at which they opened on each day a regular sale of the lands purchased by them at public sale, and at this company sale all were permitted to bid who thought proper; but at the public sales the company claimed and actually enforced a complete monopoly. All this was done in open day, and could not be unknown to the officers of government, who superintended the sales, and who either connived at or participated in these fraudulent transactions. For a specification of particular cases of violation of the law, or manifest partiality on the part of the officers charged with the solemn duty of guarding and protecting the interests of the United States, the committee refer to the depositions on the files of the Senate.

The committee perceive by the evidence that the same scenes were acted over at the sales which took place at Columbus in the same year, and therefore decline entering into a detailed account of them. The Commissioner of the General Land Office, in reply to a call of the Senate, made a report, by which it will be seen that all the lands sold in that year at the offices of Chocchuma and Columbus were monopolized by the speculators, generally at the minimum price of the government; and by the same report it appears that in one year the President of the United States caused to be offered at public sale, in Mississippi alone, between seven and eight millions of acres, comprising the best lands in that great cotton region. The committee are of opinion that this quantity of land thrown into the market within so short a period of time, is unprecedented in the history of this government, and is highly prejudicial to the public interests.

It must be obvious to every one acquainted with the progress which has been made in the sales of the public lands, that the tide of emigration into any one of the new States, and especially the southern States, would not require the quantity of land for cultivation which has been put in market by order of the President, in Mississippi, for the period of fifteen or twenty years. The result is inevitable. A small portion of the lands thus offered will be sold at public sale, where competition might be expected; and immediately after the sales are closed, this vast body of land, consisting of millions of acres, will become subject to entry at the minimum price. Companies of speculators, with an almost unbounded capital, will forthwith employ agents to explore the lands remaining unsold, and every valuable spot will be entered, at the very inadequate price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. The sterile lands alone will remain subject to entry by the emigrating population at the land offices, while all the good lands will be held by companies, who cannot be induced to part with them, except at a price at least equivalent to their actual value. In this manner the government has already sustained heavy losses, the extent of which it is difficult to ascertain; the emigrant is thrown on the mercy of the speculator, and the actual cultivation of the waste lands retarded to an indefinite period of time. The committee forbear to enlarge on the numerous interesting facts brought to light by the investigation with which they have been charged; they content themselves with having made the foregoing summary, and herewith report a bill, providing, as far as practicable, against a recurrence of similar frauds and combinations in the sales of the public lands. The committee, furthermore, deeming the conduct of the officers charged with superintending the sales of the public lands a fit subject for the consideration and action of the chief magistrate, beg leave to submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the evidence taken under the authority of the Senate, by the Committee on Public Lands, in relation to the conduct of registers and receivers, and frauds alleged to have been committed in the sales of the public lands, be respectfully referred to the President of the United States.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

At the office of George D. Hooper, a justice of the peace in and for said county, on the 24th January, 1835, appeared Nathaniel H. Greer, Esq., a commissioner appointed by a Committee of Public Lands of the Senate of the United States, to take depositions concerning frauds in the sales of the public lands, and the conduct of the officers authorized by law to superintend these sales; and also concerning the matters referred to in a resolution of the Senate, of June 30th, 1834, instructing said committee; who proceeded (in pursuance of said commission) to propound interrogatories and take depositions in an alleged case of fraud in the location of public lands within the county of Chambers.

The case of See-tar-ne, an Indian girl, alleged to have been fraudulently located on the south half of section twenty-four, and township twenty-three, and range twenty-seven, of the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery; location made by Dr. Magruder.

Interrogatories propounded to Micajah Williamson, a material witness in the above case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the parties?

Answer. I know See-tar-ne; not Magruder.

Interrogatory second. Relate what you know concerning See-tar-ne's location, tending to show any fraud in the same at the time of the treaty.

Answer. See-tar-ne, she was to all appearance about twelve years of age only, without a family, and living with her parents, and unmarried, and the only child, as far as I know, of her parents.

MICAJAH WILLIAMSON.

Sworn to and subscribed before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER,
Justice of the Peace in and for Chambers County aforesaid.

Interrogatories propounded to Joseph Irwin, a witness in the same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know See-tar-ne?

Answer. I do.

Interrogatory second. Do you know Dr. Magruder?

Answer. I have seen him.

Interrogatory third. Do you know anything tending to show fraud in See-tar-ne's location by the said Magruder? If yea, relate what you know.

Answer. I do not know that; what I know tends that way. I have known See-tar-nefrom the latter part of the year 1831 till this time. I would not suppose her to be more than eleven or twelve years of age at the time of the treaty. She was certainly then childless and unmarried. I had a conversation with See-tar-ne's father, an Indian, named Ziki, (sometimes called Old Jack,) in the summer of 1833; and he in that conversation told me, that in consequence of a suggestion of old Nimrod Doyle, an Indian countryman, made after the treaty, she (his daughter) had taken up with a white man named Pannel as a husband, in order to become entitled under the treaty as a head of a family. She is still childless. I do not know certainly that Magruder located her. I suppose so from my recollection, and was present at the location.

GEORGE D. HOOPER,
Justice of the Peace in and for Chambers County.

Interrogatories propounded to Ezekiel Taylor, a witness in the same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the parties?

Answer. I know See-tar-ne, and have seen Magruder acting as locating agent.

Interrogatory second. Do you know anything tending to show fraud in See-tar-ne's location? If yea, relate what you know.

Answer. I suppose the facts I know tend that way. She was living with her parents at the time of the treaty, childless, unmarried, and according to the best of my observation about twelve or thirteen years old only. I know that Magruder located her, being an eye-witness of the fact.

EZEKIEL TAYLOR.

Sworn to and subscribed before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER,
A Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

Interrogatories propounded to Leroy McCoy, a witness in the same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the parties?

Answer. I know See-tar-ne only.

Interrogatory second. Do you know any circumstances showing fraud in her location? If yea, relate what you know.

Answer. I could only say that I knew her some months after the treaty, and think she must have been under the age of twenty-one, and was without a family, and her father's only child.

Two of the purchasers said to me they had no doubt the location was a fraud, but they did not think that that would injure them; they had nothing to fear in the matter, being purchasers. These were Ethan Stroud and Doyle.

Doyle told me that he told Meigs, who professed to be the agent, that he had purchased a number of locations fraudulently made, but had no fear of consequences.

At the office of George D. Hooper, on the 24th January, 1835, Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., continuing his investigation of frauds, proceeded to (No. 2) the case of Poeth Hadjo, an Indian, located on the west half of section thirteen, township twenty-three, and range twenty-seven, and alleged to have been located fraudulently by Dr. Magruder.

Interrogatories propounded to Ezekiel Taylor, a witness in the above case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the Indian Chocolicho, or Augusta, or Poeth Hadjo?

Answer. I know Augusta. I suppose Chocolicho and Poeth Hadjo to be his Indian names.

Interrogatory second. Do you know any circumstances showing fraud in this location? If yea, relate what they are.

Answer. At the time of the Creek treaty Augusta lived on Osalija creek, three or four miles from where he was located; he farmed it, and lived on this place of residence on Osalija, and had a house thereon. If there was any other family living thereon, I do not know.

EZEKIEL TAYLOR.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, a Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

Interrogatories propounded to Obadiah Harriss, a witness in same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know Augusta, and his Indian names?

Answer. I do know him; but only by his English name, Augusta.

Interrogatory second. Were you present at a conversation with him in which he was asked his Indian names?

Answer. I was present when Joseph Irwin asked him his Indian names; but I do not recollect what he said were his Indian names.

Interrogatorg third. Do you know where he lived at the time of the treaty?

Answer. He lived on section (6) six of township twenty-three, and range twenty-seven, where he lives now.

Interrogatory fourth. Did ever you have any conversation with the purchaser of the located land—Augusta's reservation?

Answer. I had a conversation with Maddox, the purchaser. He observed that when he bought the reserve he expected to get the place Augusta had formerly lived on, on the Weadka, where Augus creek runs into it; but on looking on it and finding it poor he would not have it; and having bought it from both Augusta and his son, and finding that all the good land at his then place of residence (on No. 6) could be embraced by one half section properly run, said he, the son will take that, and the old man Augus will float.

Interrogatory fifth. What was the age and name of the son?

Answer. At the time of the treaty, from his looks, he was about between 12 and 16, and has no family yet. He says his name is To-messa.

OBADIAH HARRISS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, a Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

Interrogatories propounded to Joseph Irwin, a witness in the same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know Augusta and his names?

Answer. I do know him. I asked him if his name was not Poeth Hadjo. He said he had been called so; but had given it up, because a Tallapoosa Indian had the same name, and had taken the name Chocolicho.

Interrogatory second. What know you of any fraud by his location?

Answer. He lived on number six spoken of in Obadiah Harriss' testimony, and was located on the west half of thirteen, spoken of in the same testimony.

JOSEPH IRWIN.

The examination being continued January 26th, 1834, Benjamin Posey appeared and gave evidence as follows, in the case of Augusta, alias Chocolicho, or Poeth Hadjo:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the Indian Augusta, or Chocolicho or Hadjo?

Answer. I do know him by two of the above names, Augusta and Poeth Hadjo.

Interrogatory second. Do you know by whom he was located?

Answer. He was located by Blake and Magruder.

Interrogatory third. Relate what you know going to show fraud in the above case.

Answer. I have known said Indian for the last seven years, or thereabouts; and at the time of the treaty he was living on number six, in township twenty-three, and range twenty-seven, and there was no other Indian living on said section but his own family; and the above-named Indian Augusta, alias Chocolicho, or Poeth Hadjo, was located on section No. 13, in the township and range aforesaid, and his son To-misse, located on No. 6 aforesaid, who cannot be more than 14 or 16 years old at this time; he has no family now, nor ever has had.

I, William H. House, clerk of the circuit court in and for the county of Chambers aforesaid, do hereby certify that Ezekiel Taylor, Obadiah Harriss, Joseph Irwin, and Benjamin Posey, witnesses aforementioned, are respectable and creditable members of the community in which they live. Given under my hand and private seal, there being no seal of office yet provided, this 26th day of January, 1835.

WILLIAM H. HOUSE. [L. S.]

JANUARY 26.

The examination being continued, Frederick T. Boazman appeared, and after being duly sworn true answers to make to such interrogatories as should be propounded to him by Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, answers as follows, in a case (No. 3) of alleged fraud by the location of a certain Indian called Sucie or Jack, on the south half of section twenty-seven, in township twenty-three, and range twenty-eight:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the said Indian Sucie or Jack?

Answer. I do.

Interrogatory second. What do you know going to show the illegality of said location?

Answer. I do not know of his having any family, or ever had; I now live within half a mile of him, and have for the last twelve months and upwards, and if he had had any family I should certainly have known it.

Interrogatory third. What has been the course pursued by the locating agents generally, in the discharge of their duties in the Creek purchase?

Answer. From what part of their duties that has come under my personal observation, I believe their proceedings to have been corrupt.

F. T. BOAZMAN.

The above witness being duly sworn, deposes to the truth of the above answers, and subscribes before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

Interrogatories propounded to Mark Hudspeth, in the same:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the statements made by Frederick T. Boazman to be correct?

Answer. I do.

Interrogatory second. Do you know anything further going to show fraud in said location?

Answer. I, at the request of Gideon Arthur, a white man, having an Indian family, examined the locating agent's list for the name of the said Indian Sucie or Jack, and it was not to be found on said list; and on my informing him of those facts, he stated that he should have to give them names, as it was the only chance to get them land, and that other persons pursued that course. The witness further states that the said Arthur told him that if he could obtain land for said Indian he was to have half of it.

Interrogatories propounded to Benjamin F. Brooks in the same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the said Indian Sucie or Jack, located on the aforementioned half section, and do you know the persons that located him?

Answer. I do know Sucie or Jack, and I also know the persons who located him.

Interrogatory second. What do you know in relation to said location going to show fraud?

Answer. I was present when the location was made by Blake and Dr. Magruder, and if he has any family it is unknown to me; and I live in a mile and a half or two miles of him, the said Indian, and I have frequently been in his company and at his place of residence.

Interrogatories propounded to Jackson Jones in the same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know the said Indian Sucie or Jack, and do you know by whom he was located?

Answer. I do know the Indian, but I do not know by whom he was located.

Interrogatory second. What do you know going to show that the said Indian was not entitled to land, or to that particular place under the Creek treaty of March, 1832?

Answer. I live in one mile of said Indian, and if he has any family I do not know it; the said Indian came to where he now lives in the latter part of the year 1832, or the fore part of the year 1833; and Gideon Arthur, the white man living with said Indian, informed me that he was an Uchee, and came from the river Oakmulgee, in Georgia.

Interrogatory third. What do you believe, from your personal knowledge, has been the course pursued by the agents locating this part of the Creek purchase?

Answer. I believe the course they have pursued to have been an improper one.

JACKSON JONES.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

At G. D. Hooper's office, on the 29th January, 1835, the commissioner proceeded to the examination of John Patteson, a witness in the case of the alleged fraud in the location of Sucie or Jack.

Interrogatories propounded to the said John Patteson, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you of any circumstances tending to show fraud in this location? If yea, please to relate them.

Answer. If he had been in the Creek nation at the time of the treaty I should have known it, and I am confident he was not; nor have I any idea he ever had been in the nation before; and my reason is that Gideon Arthur, (before Jack came,) about a year after the treaty, told me he was going to get Indians, not living in the nation, but in Pulaski county, Georgia, where he said his Indians lived. He said he was going to get them in order to have them located under the Creek treaty. It is understood that he profits by his Indians; but he did not tell me so. After this conversation he brought Jack and others, sure enough, all of the Uchee tribe as said, and tried to establish them on my land, but I would not allow him.

Interrogatory second. Does any pre-emption right exist on this land, or part of it, supposing no location?

Answer. There does. Mr. Rhodes has a right of pre-emption thereon.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

At George D. Hooper's office, this 27th January, 1835, Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., continuing his investigation, proceeded to an alleged fraud in (No. 4) the case of Thomas N. Berryhill, a citizen of Georgia, as alleged, located on the east half of section thirty, township twenty-three, and range twenty-seven of the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery. Magruder the supposed locating agent.

Interrogatories propounded to colonel William Towles, formerly a member of the house of representatives of the general assembly of Georgia, a witness in the above case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Are you acquainted with any circumstances tending to show fraud in the above location? If yea, please relate them particularly.

Answer. I am acquainted with Berryhill and his reputed mother, and have been these ten years. His reputed mother is a native of Georgia, and so is Berryhill. I have no more doubt of the relation of mother and son existing in this than in the cases of my ordinary acquaintancy. The mother removed into this State about two years ago. Berryhill is not the head of an Indian family. He drew, as a citizen of Georgia, a gold lot in her lottery. At an election in Stewart county, Georgia, last October, (1834,) where he was voting as a citizen of Georgia, I conversed with him, and he told me that he knew he was not entitled to a location under the Creek treaty, being the son of a white woman and the husband of another, and the father of white children, and his family then living in that county.

Interrogatory second. State, if you know, whether any pre-emption right exists on Berryhill's reserve?

Answer. There does, agreeably to law. I myself would certainly have been entitled but for the above fraud, as I can fully prove.

Interrogatory third. What is the general course, from your personal knowledge, by locating agents?

Answer. I feel obliged to say, that in the best of my judgment the provisions of the treaty have frequently been violated.

W. TOWLES.

Sworn to and subscribed before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, a Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

Interrogatories propounded to Wm. H. House, a witness in the above case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Do you know any circumstances tending to show fraud in this case? If yea, please to state them.

Answer. He is not now, nor was at the time of the Creek treaty, the head of a family in this county or State. He has been in this county but as a transient person apparently. His mother apparently is a white woman. He came into the Creek nation some time after the treaty—some months afterwards—and remained until a week or ten days after his location was certified, and then returned to his Georgia family, where I understand he now lives. I was present on one occasion in this county when Whitaker refused him a location, sometime early in January last (1834.) I understand Magruder afterwards located him.

Interrogatory second. What has been the general course, from your personal observation, of the locating agents?

Answer. I feel confident that there have been numerous violations of the treaty.

WILLIAM H. HOUSE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

I do certify that I am acquainted with Col. William Towles, and William H. House, clerk of the circuit court of this county, and feel no hesitancy in stating that every credibility should be given to their testimony to which any individual should be entitled in this State, this 27th January, 1835.

NATHANIEL H. GREER, Commissioner.

I do certify that I am acquainted with Col. William Towles, and William H. House, clerk of the circuit court of this county, and feel no hesitancy in stating that every credibility should be given to their testimony, to which any individual should be entitled in this State, this 27th January, 1835.

JOSEPH NEEL, Assessor and Collector of Taxes.

The commissioner then proceeded to the investigation of an alleged fraud in the (No. 5) case of Jackson Doyle, a Creek Indian, (half-breed,) alleged to have been fraudulently located on the east half of section twenty-one, township twenty-three, and range twenty-seven, of the district of lands subjected to sale at Montgomery.

Interrogatories propounded to William H. House, a witness in the above case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you of any circumstances tending to show fraud in the above case? If yea, please to state what they are with particularity.

Answer. I know that he could not have been more than sixteen, or at the utmost seventeen, years of age at the time of the treaty, having known him nine or ten years; and he had not then, nor has he now, any family, being unmarried then, and now, and living with his father then and now. He was not the head of a family at the period of the treaty.

WILLIAM H. HOUSE.

GEO. D. HOOPER, Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

Interrogatories propounded to Col. Wm. Towles, a witness in this case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you of any circumstances tending to show fraud in the above case? If yea, state what they are.

Answer. I knew Jackson Doyle some few months after the treaty; from my knowledge of him, I think he could not have been at the time of the treaty more than seventeen years of age. He was not, when I became acquainted with him, nor is he now, the head of a family.

WM. TOWLES.

Sworn to and subscribed before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

I do certify that I have been acquainted with the above-named Indian, Jackson Doyle, for the last six or seven years, and know the above statements made by Wm. H. House and Wm. Towles to be true. January 27th, 1835.

NATHANIEL H. GREER, Commissioner.

Wm. Towles and Wm. H. House being the witnesses in the case of Berryhill, additional certificates of character are deemed unnecessary.

The commissioner next proceeded to the (No. 6) case of Muscoge, a Creek Indian girl, alleged to have been fraudulently located on the east half of section thirteen, township twenty-three, and range twenty-seven, of the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery.

Interrogatories propounded to Wm. H. House, a witness in the above case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you of any circumstances showing fraud in this case? If yea, state them.

Answer. Muscoge Doyle, (daughter of Nimrod Doyle, and sister of Jackson Doyle,) has been known to me nine or ten years; and at the time of the treaty could not have been more than eleven or twelve years old, according to my observation; was without children, and was not, at the passage of the treaty, nor is she now the head of a family. She still lives with her father.

WILLIAM H. HOUSE.

FEBRUARY 5, 1835.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

Interrogatory propounded to John Free, in the same case:

Interrogatory. Know you of any circumstances going to show fraud in this case?

Answer. I know that she, Muscoge Doyle, is manifestly a minor, lived with her father at the time of the treaty, and lives with him yet. Witness further states that John A. Hurst is deprived of the right of pre-emption by this alleged fraud.

JOHN S. FREE.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

At the town of Lafayette, in said county, January the 28th, 1834, the examination being continued by Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, who proceeded to receive testimony in relation to an alleged fraud in the location of section (6) six, in township (21) twenty-one, and range (27) twenty-seven, of the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery.

Interrogatories propounded to Thomas K. Smith, a witness in the above-stated case, (7,) and his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you of any circumstances concerning the above-stated case going to show fraud? If yea, please state what they are.

Answer. On the 17th day of December, 1833, I was present at a collection of Indians by John Broadnax, locating agent, for the purpose of locating them, when Neaththlocco appeared as the claimant of the west half of the above-described section, and was located on it by the said John Broadnax. Witness further states that the said Neaththlocco was all the Indian having a hut on said half section, and he further states that at this time the section appears to be divided differently, say east and west, and an Indian located on each half; and the said Neaththlocco removed to a place much inferior, and the said 17th day above alluded to was all the day that he (the agent) was ever known by me to be publicly locating in that town, Tuckebatchehargos.

Interrogatory second. What further do you know going to show improper conduct by the said John H. Broadnax?

Answer. I know that he located Arteshargo and Arpekartustenugga on section 12, in township 21, and range 26, in the district of land subject to sale at Montgomery, and in his return it was shown to be public land; and on my arrival at Montgomery, at the land sales, was informed by colonel William Dougherty that Broadnax had given him the number of said section, and advised him to purchase it.

Interrogatory third. Please relate the conversation that took place between yourself and colonel Abert, at Montgomery, at the above-stated time.

Answer. I entered into a conversation with colonel Abert, and stated to him that his sub-agents had acted corruptly, or Broadnax had, and that I had the evidence in my pocket to prove the fact, and dared him to go into an investigation of his conduct. I then named the section of land above alluded to, and the half section first mentioned, and stated to him that the section had been returned as public land, and the legal location removed off the half section. He stated that Arteshargo and Arpekartustenugga was located on section 15, for he himself had put them there. This conversation took place in the evening, and on the next morning when the office opened I went in and found it was not the fact. I stated to the officer that section 12 was located on, for I saw it done; he stated that it was not so returned by colonel Abert, and that when he came to it he should proceed to sell it. I left the office, and soon after come in conversation with some gentlemen that had heard the conversation the other evening between myself and Colonel Abert, and stated to them the facts, and was speaking quite loud when the colonel made his appearance, but appeared disposed to pass on without an interview, when I pursued him and stated to him what was the result of my inquiry. He stated that if it was not returned as located it should be. I stated to him I should not believe it until I saw it. He went into the office, and I pursued him, and he made the alteration. The witness further stated, that since the time of this proceeding, he, John H. Broadnax, acknowledged that he was then a partner of Nat. M. Thornton & Co., who were the purchasers of said land, section twelve; but had found Nat. M. Thornton to be such a rascal that he had withdrawn from the company.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, a Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

Interrogatories propounded to Caleb Hallaway, in the same case, with the answers thereto annexed:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show fraud in relation to the location on No. 6, in township 21, and range 27?

Answer. I was present sometime in December, when John H. Broadnax was locating the Indians belonging to the town of Tuckebatchehargos; and there was an investigation gone into relative to the place Neaththlocco was entitled to, and it was made to appear that he was entitled to the west half of No. 6, in township 21, and range 27, and was located on it by the said John H. Broadnax; and he is now removed on the west half of No. 1, in township 21, and range 26, and his first location is now assigned to other Indians, and located to N. M. Thornton & Co.

Interrogatory second. Relate what you know in relation to the location on No. 12, in township 21, and range 26.

Answer. I know, that at the time above referred to, Arteshargo and Arpekartustenugga was located by John H. Broadnax on section 12, in township 21, and range 26.

G. D. HOOPER, J. P.

Interrogatory propounded to William T. Moss, this 2d February, 1835, in the above case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory. What know you showing fraud in this case?

Answer. Why, Neathlocco before the location, claimed the half section on which I lived last year, and said he built the house. I moved this house in 1832. This half section was the west half of section six, township twenty-one, and range twenty-seven.

WILLIAM T. MOSS.

GEORGE D. HOOPER, a Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

JANUARY 29, 1835.

I, Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, continuing to investigate the frauds practiced by the locating agents, proceeded to examine William Morris in the location (No. 8) of Kissy or Kizy, located on the west half of section 10, in township 22, and range 27:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show fraud in relation to the above-stated case?

Answer. General report says, that she is one of the wives of Peter Reid, and I know that Peter Reid is located himself from the locating officers' books, as I have seen the map whereon was his location; and she, the said Kissy or Kizy, at the time of the treaty, lived with her mother and had no children.

Interrogatory second. Is there any person, in case of a removal of said location, entitled to a pre-emption on said land?

Answer. Greenberry Gresham was the settler on said location whom the pre-emption act would embrace.

WILLIAM MORRIS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me.

GEORGE D. HOOPER,
A Justice of the Peace in and for said County of Chambers, Ala.

Interrogatories propounded to Joseph Neel, a witness in the above case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you any circumstances showing fraud in the above case? If yea, please state them.

Answer. I knew Kissy at the time of the treaty. She was then one of the wives of Peter Reid, but without a child or children. Peter Reid had a reserve assigned to him. Kissy, at the time of the treaty, was living with her mother. Reid had another wife by whom he had children.

Interrogatory second. Does any pre-emption right exist to this land, supposing this location not to have been made?

Answer. Yes; Greenberry Gresham would be entitled.

Interrogatory third. State, if you please, your opinion of the course of the locating agents generally, so far as that opinion is derived from personal knowledge.

Answer. I consider that the treaty has been frequently violated by them.

Interrogatory fourth. Was the half section on which Kissy was located bought previous to the location; and by whom?

Answer. It was; and by Williams and Phipps, for the Columbus company.

Interrogatory fifth. What mean you by the half section being bought previously to the location? Was this particular half section bought?

Answer. I mean that a contract was made for her land. When the agreement was made she expected another half section; having, after the treaty, built a house and resided in it on the east of seventeen. She resided in it some weeks or days, I don't recollect exactly how long.

The examination being continued, Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., proceeded to take testimony in case of an alleged fraud located by Orrin Whitaker, on the west half of section 10, in township 22, and range 27, in the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery.

Interrogatories propounded to Baxter Taylor, and his answers thereunto annexed:

Interrogatory first. Relate what you know in relation to the above location, going to show fraud, or any acts of the agent contrary to the treaty with the Creeks, of March, 1832.

Answer. I call the name of the woman located there Kissy. She was said to be the wife of Peter Reid—one of them at least. She was located on the west half of 10 above spoken of. I can say further thas she was located on the tract on which Greenberry Gresham lived, and to which he had a pre-emption right but for this location, and that Gresham interfered with no man. I mean that he settled where his claim was not likely to conflict with any other person, Indian or white. This woman, Kissy, has had no children. I know she was certified to this place. Peter Reid had another wife. He and his two wives were all located; each had a reserve.

STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

The examinations being continued by Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., in the case (No. 9) of an alleged fraud practiced by Dr. Magruder, on fractional section 31, in township 22, and range 29, assigned to Mary, an Indian girl, alias Somihicky, this 29th day of January, 1835.

Interrogatories propounded to Elisha Ray, a witness in the above case:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show fraud in the above case? If any, please state what it is, and by whom practiced.

Answer. I can't say by whom located, as I was not present at the time her place was assigned her, but I saw her name on the list of Dr. Magruder.

The witness further states, that at the time of the treaty the said Mary, alias Somihicky, was living with William More, an Indian countryman, and said by him to be an orphan girl, and had no family at the time of the treaty, and I supposed was between seventeen and twenty years of age; I would most reasonably suppose seventeen years old. The witness further states that she had no separate or established home, save that of the house of William More. The witness further states, that he made an affidavit with others, and handed it out of his own hands to Dr. Magruder, stating that the above-named girl was not entitled agreeably to the treaty. Dr. Magruder stated that he had a distinct recollection of a conversation with him on this subject, and that he would bear the papers to colonel Abert and have it attended to.

Interrogatory second. Do you believe, agreeably to your own personal knowledge of the conduct of the locating agents, that they have acted in accordance with the treaty?

Answer. I do not.

ELISHA RAY.

STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

I, James Thompson, judge of the county court of said county, do certify that Elisha Ray did this day personally appear before me, and subscribe and swear that the facts set forth in the foregoing page are true, to the best of his knowledge. Given under my hand and seal this 29th day of January, 1835.

JAMES THOMPSON. [SEAL.]

Interrogatory propounded to Sandford Thornton, Esq., a witness in the same case:

Interrogatory first. Do you know anything in relation to this case going to show fraud, or any management in relation to it not in strict compliance with the treaty?

Answer. To the best of my knowledge the said girl, Mary, alias Somihicky, at the time of the treaty was living with William More, and had no family.

The witness further states, that he is of opinion that she was located by Dr. Magruder. The witness further states, that Captain Ray, Mr. John Howard, and George Harper, made affidavits before me, then an acting justice of the peace for said county, to the illegality of the said location; and witness further states that he was present when the above affidavits were received by colonel Abert, together with another, setting forth the illegality of a location allowed to William More's little son; probably he might not have received them all at the same time; and he observed that he did not know what the devil the white people need to care, for the government in the treaty had gave them so much land, and he did not see why the white people should interfere.

SANDFORD THORNTON.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 29th January, 1835.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County.

On this 29th day of January, 1835, Sandford Thornton personally appeared before me, James Thompson, judge of the county court of said county, and subscribed the above page, and made oath that the facts therein stated are true, to the best of his knowledge.

Given under my hand and seal. JAMES THOMPSON. [SEAL.]

Interrogatory further propounded to captain Elisha Ray, in the same case:

Interrogatory third. Did you ever have a conversation with Dr. McHenry, the certifying agent in the above case? If yea, please relate what it was.

Answer. I did have a conversation with him, and asked him if I was to file the affidavit of some five or six witnesses in his office, setting forth the illegality of the location, if he would certify to it; and he told me that he would; that he had received no instructions not to do so.

ELISHA RAY.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County.

I, James Thompson, judge of the county court of said county, do certify that captain Elisha Ray did this day personally appear before me and subscribe his name as above, and did swear that the facts set forth in the foregoing two parts of pages are true, to the best of his knowledge.

Given under my hand and seal this 29th day of January, 1835.

JAMES THOMPSON. [SEAL.]

Interrogatory propounded to John Howard, in the same case, to wit, the location on fractional section 31, in township 22, and range 29, in the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery:

Interrogatory. What do you know going to show fraud in relation to the above case?

Answer. I know that the said girl, Mary, alias Somihicky, who was located on the above-named place at the time of the treaty, was living with William More, and had no family or home for by the house of said More.

The witness further states that he filed an affidavit before Sandford Thornton, Esq., setting forth the illegality in the above case of the same testimony alluded to by Capt. Ray, the first witness in this case.

JOHN HOWARD.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

I, James Thompson, judge of the county court of said county, do certify that on this 29th day of January, 1835, John Howard did sign his name to the foregoing part of page, and swear that the facts therein stated are true to the best of his knowledge.

Given under my hand and seal. JAMES THOMPSON. [SEAL.]

Interrogatory propounded to George Harper, a witness in the same case of Mary:

Interrogatory. Did you call on Dr. McHenry, the certifying agent in this case, for the name of the Indian located?

Answer. I did call on him for the name, and he refused to give it to me, and stated to me that his books were not convenient, although it was at his place of residence, and the place at which he generally does business.

JAMES THOMPSON. [SEAL.]

Interrogatories propounded to John Patterson, a witness in the case (No. 10) of an alleged fraud in relation to a location on the east half of section No. 3, in township 22, and range 28, located to Sowieka or Peggy, said to be an Uchee woman:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show fraud in the above location?

Answer. I know that she, Sowieka or Peggy, came into the settlement in which she was located between the 8th and 10th of January, 1833, said to have come from the Oakmulgee river, in Georgia, by the white man, Gideon Arthur, who brought her here, and she has no children that I know of, and she has lived in the house with the said Arthur since she has been in this settlement, so far as I know.

Interrogatory second. By this location will any person lose the right of pre-emption?

Answer. They will.

JOHN PATTERSON.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

I, James Thompson, Judge of the county court of said county, do certify that on this 29th day of January, 1835, John Patterson did sign his name above and swear that the facts contained in the foregoing two parts of pages are true, to the best of his knowledge.

Given under my hand and seal.

JAMES THOMPSON. [SEAL.]

Interrogatory propounded to David Neel in the same case:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show any fraudulent transactions in this case?

Answer. That I do not know so well how to answer the question as to the instructions of the locating agents that were shown to me at West Point, Georgia, on which I had a conversation with Dr. Magruder, stating to him that those instructions and the treaty seemed to me not to corroborate; he stated that they were going by the instructions. But it was then my opinion, and is yet, that the instructions and the treaty do differ. But in relation to the above case, I know her as Peggy, or Sowieka, and the first time that I ever saw her in this settlement or county was in the last of December, 1832, or first of January, 1833. She had a child, which she appeared to claim, but whether it was hers or not I cannot say; and Arthur, a white man, who appeared to have the control of her and others, said that they were Uchee Indians, and that he had brought them from the other side of the Oakmulgee river, in Georgia, for the purpose of getting land for them.

DAVID NEEL.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

I, James Thompson, judge of the county court of said county, do certify that on this 29th day of January, 1835, David Neel did sign his name to the foregoing part of a page, and swear that the facts therein set forth are true, to the best of his knowledge.

Given under my hand and seal this 29th day of January, 1835.

JAMES THOMPSON. [SEAL.]

Interrogatories propounded to Mark Hudspeth, in the same case, say the alleged fraud on the east half of section 3, in township 22, and range 28:

Interrogatory first. Please state anything you know going to show fraud in the above locations; and please state if this alleged fraud was removed, whether would any person be entitled to a pre-emption or not?

Answer. I know that she was said to be an Uchee Indian, and came to the settlement in which she was located some time in the latter part of the year 1832, or the first part of the year 1833, in company with a white man by the name of Gideon Arthur, who seemed to have the control of her and others; and the said Arthur frequently told me that he brought her with others from the Oakmulgee river, Georgia, for the purpose of getting land for them; and he further stated that he was to have half the land if he succeeded in obtaining it for them. Witness further states that soon after her arrival here she became disheartened as to getting land, and returned to Georgia, and was not here till after she was located. When the locating agents arrived at West Point, the said Arthur sent for me, and I went on to examine to see if they were enrolled for location in the Horse-path-town, and I found none of the names enrolled for location but the name of Gideon Arthur. I was also present when Orrin Whitaker went to Arthur's to locate, and there was no names found suiting his Indians save one, which is the above Sowieka, or Peggy; and the said agent, Orrin Whitaker, stated that he would locate her on the said half section, but if he found a Creek Indian of the proper town claiming that name, he should remove the location and give it to the said Creek Indian. Said Arthur stated to me that there appeared to be a difficulty about his Indians getting land, and he stated that all of the other speculators in such cases made names, and that he should do the same. Two days after this transaction, I saw Mr. Whitaker, and asked him if he had found a Creek name to suit the above, and he said that he had, and had made the alteration. In answer to that part of the interrogatory asking if any person would be deprived of the right of pre-emption, I can state that Mr. F. T. Boazman and F. Pearson would be deprived of that right.

Interrogatory second. What do you believe has been the course pursued by the locating agents; and do you know of any of the locating agents being concerned with speculating companies?

Answer. I do not know that Orrin Whittaker and John H. Broadnax are both concerned in the speculation in lands where they have been appointed to locate the reservations.

MARK HUDSPETH.

GEORGE D. HOOPER,
Justice of the Peace in and for said County of Chambers, Ala.

Interrogatories propounded to John Howard, a witness in this case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you of any circumstances showing fraud in this case? If yea, please state them.

Answer. I know nothing of this case except Arthur's propositions to me about the Indians. May be two months after the treaty he proposed to me to get the neighbors about me to join him in getting some Indians located. He said they were his Indians, living in Georgia on the Oakmulgee. He proposed that we should let them come in and settle among us, and share with him the profits of the lands, by feeding them, and in one way or other. I told him I would not give an answer until I consulted my neighbors. About ten days afterwards I told him neither I nor my neighbors would have anything to do in the matter; and he said that we injured ourselves by not agreeing. He said in this conversation that these Indians lived in Georgia, and unless he could get them slipped in without a fuss he would be disappointed.

Interrogatory second. From your personal knowledge do you or not think the locations have been made according to the treaty by the government agents?

Answer. Why, I think there were a great many frauds, and I think they knew it.

JOHN HOWARD.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

At the office of George D. Hooper, Esq., the examination being continued by Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., this 30th January, 1835, in the case (No. 11) of an alleged fraud practiced by Dr. Magruder, by locating Anna or Luezer on the east half of section 1, in township 21, and range 28.

Interrogatories propounded to John Howard, and their answers thereto annexed:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show fraud in the above-stated case?

Answer. I know that the above-named Anna or Luezer, at the time of the treaty, was living at the house of William Moore, an Indian countryman; had no family, lives there yet, and still has none; and at the time of the treaty was not more than twelve or thirteen years old, at farthest; and Moore stated to me that she was a relation to his wife, that he had raising. And I heard Dr. Lyons or Capt. Ray once say to Dr. Magruder that the above case was a fraud; he stated that it did not come before him; that he should locate all that he found on the list.

Interrogatory second. Please state if this alleged fraud deprived any person of the right of pre-emption?

Answer. It did deprive two settlers.

Interrogatory third. Do you know of any of the locating agents being attached to companies of speculators?

Answer. I do know that John H. Broadnax, Orrin Whittaker and William More, all deputy locating agents, were concerned in the speculation with companies.

JOHN HOWARD.

Interrogatories propounded to Joseph L. Howard, a witness in the same case of Anna or Luezer:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show fraud in this case?

Answer. I know at the time of the treaty the above-named girl was living in the house of William More, and could not have exceeded twelve or thirteen years of age, and had no family; neither has she any family yet, and still lives at the house of the said More.

Interrogatory second. Will the above-alleged fraudulent location deprive any person or persons of the right of pre-emption?

Answer. It will deprive two persons of that right.

Interrogatory third. Do you know of any of the locating agents, or their deputies, being attached to speculating companies who were buying up the Indian reservations? If yea, please state who they were.

Answer. I know that John H. Broadnax and Orrin Whitaker, locating agents, appointed by Col. Abert, were concerned with speculating companies, and I further know that William More, a white man, having an Indian family, was appointed to locate, and did locate, and was purchasing the reservations at the same time.

THE STATE ALABAMA, Chambers County:

At the office of George D. Hooper, Esq., in said county, the examination being continued by Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., in the case (No. 12) of an alleged fraud practiced at the land office at Montgomery, by granting the right of pre-emption to the southwest quarter section eighteen, in township twenty-four, and range twenty-seven, in the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery, this 2d day of February, 1835.

Interrogatory propounded to William Menefee in the above case, and the answers thereunto annexed:

Interrogatory. What do you know in relation to the above-stated case going to show improper conduct by the register of the land office at Montgomery?

Answer. I called at the land office above referred to, for the purpose of getting a certificate of pre-emption for the person whom I conceived was entitled according to the last instructions received; and on examination, I found they had issued the certificate to another individual without his witnesses giving their answers as full as they should have done, as their evidence only states that no other person except the one to whom the certificate issued cultivated in 1833, who had possession the 19th June, 1834, which was the fact: but one individual cultivated in 1833, and sold to another, who had possession the 19th June, 1834, and was the first settler on the place, and was entitled from the instructions; and I explained those facts to the register or receiver, but received no satisfaction from him. I offered him conclusive testimony as to these facts; but he would not attend to it, nor grant the pre-emption, he said, on the ground that a certificate had been already issued.

I, Nathaniel H. Greer, continuing to receive testimony in relation to the frauds practiced by certain United States officers, proceeded to the case (No. 13) of an alleged fraud on east half section twenty-six, in township 23, and range 27, whereon was located Tiffy, an Indian woman.

Interrogatories propounded to Micajah Williamson, a witness in the above-stated case, and the answers thereunto annexed:

Interrogatory first. What do you know going to show fraud in the above-stated case, or what course has been pursued not in compliance with the treaty made by the government with the Creeks?

Answer. I know that the above-named Indian woman had no family at the time of the treaty, nor has she any family yet, and some time in the fall of the year after the treaty of March, 1832, she took some of the children of an Indian called Noati, and moved into the house of a white man, or house built by a white man, which was the half section on which William D. Greer had settled before the treaty, and was there located by Orrin Whitaker as a settler, and there was no settlement on it, save that of William D. Greer, for I threw the roof off the cabin, and some person burned it up.

Interrogatory second. Do you know whether or not any person will be deprived of the right of pre-emption by this alleged fraudulent location?

Answer. There will be two persons deprived of this privilege.

Interrogatory third. What do you believe from your own personal knowledge has been the course pursued by the locating agents appointed to locate the Creek country?

Answer. I believe their course to have been more corrupt than that of any men entrusted with public business that I ever knew. And the witness further states, that he was present when James Taylor charged Orrin Whitaker with acting improperly, and being interested in the speculation; and he, Whitaker, acknowledged at this time, which was the time he was locating, that he was concerned in the speculation.

Answer. I know that the said woman was not entitled to a location, as she had no family, and got some children, and took possession of the house built by the white man spoken of by Micajah Williamson, the witness first examined.

Interrogatory second. What do you believe, from your own personal knowledge, has been the course pursued by the locating agents appointed to locate the Indian reservations in the Creek country?

Answer. I believe it to be a very corrupt one.

The examination further continued by Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., in the case of an alleged fraud in section 23, in township 24, and range 26.

Interrogatories propounded to Quincy R. Boring, a witness in the above-stated case:

Interrogatory first. Please state what you know going to show fraud or improper management in the above-stated case?

Answer. Some time in the month of January, 1834, Jackson Doyle, a half-breed lad, appeared in the settlement in which I live, as locating agent, and said that he had received his appointment from Orrin Whittaker, and he proceeded to locate several Indians while I was present; and after he had finished his duties as locating agent, the section on which I lived together with Mr. David Patterson was not located; and on the next day I saw Ethan Stroud, one of the company of speculators composed of N. Doyle, Stroud and company, and I informed him that my place, say section 23, in township 24, and range 26, was not located, and he stated that if it was desirable he would have the locations shifted, and have my place located; and that he was sorry that I had not arrived sooner, as Jackson Doyle had just left to see Whitaker, and make his return. Stroud, Mr. Patterson, and myself, made an arrangement to have the locations changed so as to cover my place, and at his request I pursued Jackson Doyle, and he made the alteration; and he, Jackson Doyle, made the statement to Whitaker, and he said that the distance removed was too great, say four miles; but after some reflection, he said that Dr. Magruder had set the example of moving of them, and he would let it stand, as it was removed by Jackson Doyle, the half-breed lad above referred to.

Interrogatory second. Will any person be deprived the right of pre-emption by the above alleged fraud?

WILLIAM H. HOUSE,
NATHANIEL H. GREER.

STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

At George D. Hooper's office, on the 3d of February, 1835, Nathaniel H. Greer, commissioner, &c., continuing his investigations, proceeded to the case, (No. 14,) of an alleged fraud in the location of Yomotchekae, a Creek Indian, located on south half of section 12, of township 22, and range 26, of the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery.

Alleged fraud in the location of Yomotchekae.

Interrogatories propounded to Spencer J. McMorris, a witness in this case, with his answers thereto:

Interrogatory first. Know you of any circumstances showing fraud in this case? If yea, relate them.

Answer. I do not know whether the circumstances coming under my observation have this tendency. Ten or twelve miles south of Lafayette, before the locations were made, riding with Mr. Francis Irwin, we approached an Indian habitation where a young girl, calling herself Yomotchekae, came forward and offered to Irwin her land for sale. She was apparently under the age of puberty, and so manifestly so that Irwin hesitated to purchase at first. I told him, however, that I had understood that all were entitled that gave in their names, and he accordingly purchased. I was a witness of the bond. The conversation was through the medium of an interpreter. The girl was, I suppose, about thirteen years old, not over, at least. She has been located about thirteen miles distant from this place of meeting her, which place was apparently her home. These circumstances came under my observation. How far they indicate misconduct, I do not decide. I was present, I will add, at the certifying of this contract; saw the girl receive the money; received the money myself, from a boy named Harry, partly negro, partly Indian, who brought it back to me after this payment, which was the second or third time that I had received the money in that way on that day, which was as regularly returned to Irwin, who had previously borrowed it from me. I knew the bills to be the identical bank notes so lent and so paid, having paid particular attention to them. I was in no manner personally concerned in this contract, beneficially or otherwise, except as I have related, and except that I was promised an interest in the lands purchased. What I state, is elicited by your interrogatory alone, and the circumstances to which you call my attention.

Interrogatory second. So far as you know or believe, does this location preclude from the enjoyment of a pre-emption right any person entitled thereto?

Answer. I believe Wm. H. House to have been thus entitled. I know that he resided on the tract allotted to the girl Yomotchekae, about the time of the location in 1833, and certifying in 1834.

Interrogatory third. From your personal knowledge of the conduct of the locators of Indian reserves, what is your opinion of the conduct of these officers?

Answer. I think they did not observe the provisions of the treaty with any great care, or their trust with any great fidelity.

Interrogatory fourth. Relate any instance of this disregard, as a specimen of your observations?

Answer. Irwin and Williams were contending for a reserve located to Peggy, or Soweki. It appeared that there were two Indians of that name, an Uchee and a Creek. Irwin, the purchaser from one; from the other, Williams. Several examinations were had, and the case seemed to me doubtful. During the controversy, the locating agent, Whitaker, came to me and remarked "that the case might be easily settled; that Irwin had only to give him an interest in the tract, and that his, (Irwin's,) claims should be established." He requested me to communicate this conversation to Irwin. "Keep dark, McMorris," said he. The controversy was concerning the certifying of the tract. I have understood since, that Irwin failed in it. The controversy was commenced in March, 1834, and was carried on before McHenry, the certifying agent. I was utterly astonished at this conversation of Whitaker's, having formed a favorable opinion of him.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Chambers County:

Interrogatory propounded to Wm. H. House, a witness in this case, with his answer thereto:

Interrogatory. State what you know in this case.

Answer. A few days since I went to see the girl located on my place of residence, with an interpreter well known, by name Sam. McIntosh. On arriving at her mother's house my interpreter pointed out the girl—a girl apparently about 14 years old. I asked her name; I understood her answer to be Mishoye. I remarked that that was not the name by which she was located. She said the location was made in the name of her brother, pointing to a little boy about seven years old, whose name she said was Yomotchekae; that she and her brother had been put together in the location. I had previously asked her if she had been located, and on her saying that she had been, and had sold, followed my inquiry concerning her name. I had examined McHenry's books, and found this tract (south half of twelve) sold and certified in the name of Yomotchekae. The girl acknowledged that she had sold and answered in her brother's name. She had never had children.

Interrogatory. Relate what you know going to show fraud in the above transaction, or any acts of the locating agents not in conformity with the treaty with the Creeks of March, 1832.

Answer. I know the Indian Sofootka, who is said to have been located on the above-described land, which was the improvement made by Malcolm McBride, on which there was no Indian settlement, and the Indian located on the place was said to have lived five miles from this place, and other public land between his place of residence and the improvement of Malcolm McBride, who would have been entitled to a pre-emption on the said land had it not been for this alleged fraud.

Interrogatories propounded to Leroy McCoy, Esq., and the answers thereunto annexed:

Interrogatory first. Relate what you know going to show fraud in the above location, or any transactions relative thereto not in compliance with the treaty.

Answer. I saw Orrin Whitaker locate the said Timoke on the above land, the wife of Seakiska, who was located on the other half of said section, as one of the company of speculators told me, and it is so said by the neighbors, but the agent's books I have not examined since the said Seakiska was located; and if the wife and the husband both being located does not show fraud, I do not know as there is any.

Interrogatory second. Will there be any person deprived of the right of pre-emption by this alleged fraud?

Answer. There will.

Interrogatories propounded to Mark Hudspeth, in the case of an alleged fraud by locating Tatefee or George on the south half of section 28, in township 23, and range 28, of the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery:

Interrogatory first. Please relate what you know going to show fraud in the above case, or any circumstances connected therewith not in conformity with the treaty of March, 1832.

Answer. I know that the above-named Indian came into the settlement in which he was located in the latter part of the year 1832 or the first part of the year 1833, with one Gideon Arthur, a white man, who seemed to have the control of him and others; and he, the said Arthur, told me that he had brought them from Pulaski county, Georgia, for the purpose of getting land for them.

The witness further states that there is government land equally good between the place on which the said Indian stopped, and that on which he was located, save the improvement of Willis Johnson on the said land on which he was located.

Interrogatory second. Will any person be deprived of the right of pre-emption by this alleged fraud?

Interrogatory first. Relate what you know going to show fraud in the above case, or any transactions not in compliance with the treaty.

Answer. I know that this Indian came into the settlement in which he was located some time in the latter part of the year 1832, or the first part of the year 1833, with one Gideon Arthur, a white man, who seemed to have the control of him; and he, the said Arthur, told me, that he had brought this Indian, with others, from Pulaski county, Georgia, for the purpose of getting land; and he proffered me one of his Indians to put on my improvement. I told him I did not want his Indian, as he could not be located, as he was a citizen of Georgia at the time of the treaty, and my improvement being some distance from any Indian settlement; and I know not yet what authority those agents had to locate on my improvement, as there is public land between my improvement and other Indian locations.

The witness further states that on his settlement here he had no disposition to trespass on the rights of any; and he does believe that every principle of justice and every legal principle has been violated, in thus locating on his place and depriving him of the right of pre-emption.

WILLIS JOHNSON.

I, Nathaniel H. Greer, continuing to receive testimony in relation to the frauds practiced by certain officers of the government, took the following testimony.

Interrogatories propounded to William Gideon, and his answers thereunto annexed, in the case of an alleged fraud practiced by Orrin Whitaker, on north half section 11, in township 22, and range 28, of the district of lands subject to sale at Montgomery:

Interrogatory first. Relate what you know going to show fraud in the above case, or any circumstances not in compliance with the treaty of March, 1832.

Answer. I know that Gideon Arthur, a white man, who is located on the north half of section 11, in township 22, and in range 28, came to the plantation on which I lived in October or November, 1832, and said that he came from Pulaski county, Georgia, and some days thereafter he took up his board at my house in Alabama, near the Georgia line; and some time after he came to my house, he told me that he had the control of some Uchee Indians that he designed to bring out for the purpose of trying to get them land; and in two or three months afterwards he brought his Indians out to Alabama, and accordingly got the land; and he, the said Arthur, claimed one of those Indians as a wife, and got the above-described land, say north half of section 11, in township 22, and range 28:

Interrogatory propounded to Frederick T. Boazman in the same case, say the location of Gideon Arthur, a white man, by Orrin Whitaker, the locating agent, on the north half of section 11, in township 22, and range 28:

Interrogatory. Relate what you know going to show fraud in relation to the above location, or any circumstances connected therewith not in compliance with the treaty of March, 1832.

Answer. I know, from Gideon Arthur's own statement, that he came to this country after the treaty, for the purpose of getting land; and that he came from Pulaski county, Georgia, as he said, and was located on the above-described land.

Interrogatory propounded to Mark Hudspeth in the above case, and his answers thereunto annexed:

Interrogatory. Relate what you know going to show fraud in the above case, or any circumstances connected therewith not in accordance with the treaty of March, 1832, with the Creeks.

Answer. Orrin Whitaker, a locating agent, informed me that he could not locate on a fractional section that had no Indian improvement on it; and I saw plat of locations returned to the office at Montgomery, at the sales of land in January or February, 1834, and this place, which is the place I improved, was not located; since that time, I am informed by Dr. M'Henry, the certifying agent, that it is located on by an Indian 30 miles from said fractional section, passing over other valuable lands for the purpose of covering my improvement, to which I consider I was legally entitled to the right of pre-emption.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day personally appeared before me, Anthony B. Shelby, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State, Avery Nolen, who, first being duly sworn, says the following are true and faithful answers to the interrogatories propounded to him by the commissioner appointed by the Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands.

Answer to interrogatories. Some time in the fall or winter, (in November or December) 1832, I made application to Mr. Dameron to enter me some land. He said he did not know till he saw Mr. Gwin. We waited some time for Mr. Gwin to come, but he did not, and I went after him. When he came, he and Mr. Dameron went out in the yard, and talked together. They then came back into the house, and I asked them if they were going to do it. They both of them sat down to the table, and I think Mr. Dameron asked Mr. Gwin the amount. Mr. Gwin said the land came to one hundred and fifty dollars, and the interest put on to it made two hundred and twenty-five dollars. Mr. Gwin said, "You can pay it on the first of March next." I told them it was too much interest to pay till the first of March; I ought to have twelve months at fifty per cent. He then said, "Pay it as soon as you can; if you will pay it before then we will curtail the interest." I said, "I will pay it, if I have to borrow the money." Mr. Dameron (I think) wrote the note for two hundred and twenty-five dollars, and it was my understanding that I was to have twelve months for fifty per cent, and if I paid it sooner the interest was to be curtailed. I think the note was due 1st of March afterwards; I had to make affidavit before a magistrate for the forty acre piece; the certificates for the forty acre piece and for the eighth were both folded up with the note. While Mr. Dameron was writing the note, Mr. Gwin looked on the maps for the land, and he (Gwin) told me that when I paid the money he would give me up the note and the certificates for the land. I thought the land was entered, and went home quite well satisfied. Some time afterwards I sold the land, and one eighth besides, for twelve hundred dollars, and gave a bond to make a deed for the whole of it. A short time before Mr. Gwin left here I went to the office to see Mr. Gwin: I asked him if he recollected about the land scrape. He appeared to be very obstinate about it, and seemed not to know me. I made myself known to him. He then said, "Mr. Dameron wants to close his business." Says he, "I am going to leave here shortly;" and implied that the business must be closed. I told him, "Just as quick as possible." I told him it was rumored the land was not entered. Some people were coming in at the door at that time, and he turned round and made me no reply. About October last I found out the land was not entered. There was then no receiver. I deposited the money for the entry of said land when the receiver came. When the office opened again, Patrick Shackey entered one eighth of it, and as I had sold it before that time, believing it was entered for me, I was compelled to buy the eighth of land from Shackey, and also one other eighth from him, for which I had to give six hundred dollars. I have never heard anything of my notes. Mr. Gwin was register, and Mr. Dameron was receiver, when they both agreed to enter the land for me, which they did not do, and I lost four hundred dollars by their not doing it.

A. B. SHELBY, J. P.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

Interrogatories to be propounded to Joseph Dunbar, Esq., of Jefferson county, State aforesaid, touching any malconduct on the part of the several registers and receivers of the several land offices in the State aforesaid, by virtue of a commission from the honorable Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands:

Interrogatory first. Were you ever allowed by the register of the Mt. Salus land office to put a mark upon any vacant land which you did not then enter, or did said register put said mark upon land that was vacant? If so, state what kind of a mark it was, what was the intention of it, and what effect it could have; what representation said register made relative to said land thus marked when applied for by inquirers for vacant land; or what representation was he to make, or what representation did you ever understand he had made, when land thus marked was inquired after? State every particular of said mark.

Interrogatory second. Did you ever instruct the register and receiver, or either of them, and which one, to take out applications for you individually or jointly with another or others, and to hold said applications up; but if the land thus applied for were applied for by any other person, that said register or receiver, or any other person in the office, should close the entry of the land thus applied for? If so, state whether there was any understanding, expressed or implied, that if you did not have the money on deposit in said office at the time, what was in that case to be done by said register or receiver, or any other person; and also whether you know or have reason to believe any land was ever represented by said register or receiver to inquirers for vacant land as sold, when in truth said land, or the amount of the purchase money of it, had not been placed to the credit of government. Also state what particular tract or tracts of land was entered for you, under the arrangement inquired for in the first part of this second interrogatory.

Interrogatory third. Do you know of any instance in which the register of said office permitted any person to enter land marked sold upon the maps of survey, but the sale of which could not be traced to any other book in the office, without waiting to receive instructions from the department permitting the entry of said land thus marked?

Interrogatory fourth. Do you know, or have you reason to believe there has been any malconduct on the part of either the receiver or register of said Mount Salus land office? If of your own knowledge, state the case or cases; if only reasons, state the cause of your belief. This sweeping interrogatory is made to you on account of your being well acquainted with the respective duties required of each or either of said officers.

Interrogatory fifth. Do you know, or have you reasons to believe either said register or receiver ever evinced any favoritism or partiality of any kind in their official character, or anything affecting the duties of their office, which can be or cannot be styled malconduct, yet shows that they did not act towards every man alike in the discharge of their duties? State every particular of any such case or cases.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State, Alexander M'Kay, who, first being duly sworn, deposeth and saith he will true and faithful answers make to the interrogatories that may be made to him by virtue of a commission from the honorable Senate of the United States through their Committee on Public Lands.

Answer to first interrogatory. About the month of April, 1833, after Samuel Gwin had ceased being register of the Mount Salus land office, and some time before Mr. Summeral came into office, I examined the maps of said office with a view of entering west half of the southeast quarter section 10, township 5, range 2 west, which tract was marked with the letter S on said maps. I then examined the tract book, and found said land was not sold. I mentioned to colonel Samuel Gwin that I wanted said land, and that it was not sold though it was marked sold. He said he knew it was vacant, but that he himself had marked it sold; that it ran into Mr. Millon's field, and he (Gwin) wanted it, and that it was a pretty good piece of land. I told him I wanted it. He then said I might have it if I would examine and tell him what was the quantity of some land that lay west of it. I told him I did not then have the money to pay for said land. He asked my prospects for getting it; I told him I thought I could get the money of William S. Jones of this place (Clinton). He advised me to wait, that the percentage was too high, and that he would get it for me. He then spoke to Mr. Dameron; they had some conversation together. Samuel Gwin then gave or ordered to be given me an application, not signed by any register, for said land, which was left with Mr. Dameron. Gwin then stated it could lie so one or two months, and that the land could then be saved for me. From my understanding of what he said, I thought he intended to pay for said land for me if any one else applied for it, rather than that I should lose it. He did not say positively he would do so, but that impression was made on my mind. At the election in May he told me I had better come and enter said land, or I might lose it, as he had heard it talked of. In a few days (two or three days) after that, I came to the office to enter it; it had the mark of S. I then inquired of Mr. Summeral, the register, if it was vacant; he told me the steam-mill company had entered it. I then thought the steam-mill belonged to John B. Pittman and William Cage, but I afterwards found Samuel Gwin had a few days before bought Cage's part of said mill; I inquired very particularly if the money was actually paid. The receiver said it was so arranged I could not have the land. I also asked Mr. Summeral, the register, if said land was paid for. He said he believed it was, but did not give a positive answer; at least I could not get the land. Things remained in this situation till within a few days before Samuel W. Dickson came into office as receiver, in November last. I again examined the maps of survey of said office, and found that the above eighth of land on the map had had S or mark of sold scratched off, and the letter S on one other eighth joining at the corners, which was on this other eighth when I applied, a few days after the election in May, 1833. This other eighth had been represented as the other piece belonging to said steam-mill company. Some time during the summer of 1833, and when I believed said two eighths of land as above described belonged to said Pittman and Gwin, I mentioned to said Gwin I could not well do without said two eighths of land, as I wanted them for the timber for my saw-mill, and that there was a plenty of pine lands west of his mill, and that I would pay for as much for their mill, but this was near my mill and I could not do without it.

He told me to go to Pittman, and whatever he did he (Gwin) would be satisfied. I went to Pittman, and in September or October, 1833, we went and looked at the land. He proposed swapping me some land in section 15 for some that some of my children owned near to his and Gwin's mill; he claimed three eighths, viz., east half, northeast one-quarter, section 15, township 5, range 2 west; the west one-half, southeast one-fourth, section 10, same township and range. The other eighth I do not know the numbers of. All these three eighths I think were marked sold; any how Pittman claimed the land for himself and Samuel Gwin, and he proposed swapping me any part of it. At the time he claimed these three eighths and offered to swap them to me, and they marked, (I think,) all of them were unpaid for, I know. A few days before Samuel W. Dickson came into office as above mentioned, I examined the maps again, and found the letter S, marked on these three eighths, (two of which Samuel Gwin promised to save for me,) all of which had been represented as sold, had been scratched off, and were in fact vacant; and that the steam saw-mill company had in fact only paid for three forty acre pieces. When the office opened again under Samuel W. Dickson as receiver, I applied for four eighths. Pittman applied for the same four eighths in his name and Samuel Gwin's. He spoke to me, and said he would bid pretty high for some of it, particularly the two eighths I first wanted. I knew I was not able to bid against him, not having money enough to come in competition with him and Samuel Gwin, who, I believed, had a considerable amount of money. I was compelled to let him take that which he was determined to have, and he let me have two eighths which were worth much less than those I first wanted.

Answer to second interrogatory. The letter S upon a tract of land, or writing the name of the purchaser on the tract, but more frequently the letter S, is used upon the maps of said office to designate land that has been sold; and inquirers for vacant land, seeing land on said maps marked in either manner, would be induced to believe land so marked was sold.

Answer to third interrogatory. Yes, I do; and have answered and detailed the facts in answer first. The steam saw-mill company owns the most of said land marked sold when it was not sold. I also own one eighth, which Pittman told me belonged to him and Samuel Gwin when it did not. The eighth I own comes within about 640 yards of said saw-mill.

HENRY G. JOHNSTON, J. P.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State, William S. Lindsey, who, being first duly sworn, says he will true and faithful answers make to such interrogatories as may be propounded to him by the commissioner appointed by the Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands, to take depositions of witnesses in cases of fraud on the public lands, &c., &c.

Answer to interrogatories. On or about the 31st day of December, 1832, I applied to Samuel Gwin, the register of the land office at Mount Salus, to enter the E. ½, N. E. ¼, section 20, and the W. ½, N. W. ½, section 21, township 7, range 2 east. My brother owned one eighth of land joining this, broadside to the east, and I knew that by getting these two eighths the three together would sell well. Upon looking at said two eighths, I found that both were marked with the letter S; I asked him, Gwin, who had entered said land; and to let me see the book, and know who had entered it. He said it was too much trouble, and he would not examine the book; and that after the next week he should have a room made, and would lock up the books; and when people applied for land, if it was vacant they should have it; if not, they should not have it. That miffed me a little, and I told him he could do as he pleased about it. Some time in July, 1833, Littleberry R. Stark, of Madison county, called and told me I was mistaken about the land being entered for which I had applied, and which Gwin, the register, had told me was entered, for he, Stark, had himself seen the very same land entered the evening before. The records of the said land office now show that the very same land was entered by Joseph Dunbar and David Hunt, of Jefferson county, on the 24th of July, 1833. I consider I thus lost $1,400 by not getting the land as above described, which Gwin, the register, insisted was entered when I applied for it; said land was then marked sold. There are several other persons who know the facts of this transaction. Furthermore deponent saith not.

HENRY G. JOHNSTON, J. P.

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day Jacob Williams, of the county and State aforesaid, personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State, and said Williams, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he will true and faithful answers make to such interrogatories as may be propounded to him by the commissioners appointed by the honorable Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands.

Answer to interrogatories. About the first of August, or thereabouts, 1832, I applied to Saml. Gwin, the register of the Mount Salus land office, and told him I had understood that he was in the habit of saving land for people at a small interest; that I wanted some land, but had no money, and wanted him to save it for me. He said he would see Mr. Dameron, the receiver; that they were together, and whatever they agreed on they would do. They mentioned it to each other in my presence, and agreed to do it. I told them I wanted them to save me two eighths and two forty acre pieces, making three eighths. They asked me how long I wished them to wait with me for the money. I told them if I could sell a negro girl I had for sale, I could pay them in three months. They then asked me what I was willing to give them. I told them I was willing to give them thirty dollars, and would pay them in three months, if I could sell said negro girl; but if I could not sell the girl, I should want them to wait a little longer, and I would be willing to give them a little higher interest. They agreeed to that. Then Saml. Gwin sat down to draw the writings, and said, "Well, Williams, as you and I were friends in the war, I will not be so hard with you; I will take twenty-five dollars." I then showed him the numbers of the land. He then made out the certificates for the land, and I signed my name to them. Mr. Gwin then drew two notes, both making the sum of three hundred and twenty-five dollars; three hundred dollars being for the land, and twenty-five dollars for the interest. The interest was not included in a separate note, but the amount of three hundred and twenty-five dollars was divided into two notes; the exact amount of each one separately I do not recollect, but both made the sum of three hundred and twenty-five dollars. I think the notes ran in this manner: "Three months after date I promise to pay Gwin and Dameron," &c. &c. Attached to each note, and on the same paper, was a little memorandum, if I did not pay said notes as agreed on, it was to be optional with them whether they would let me have the land or not. I one day, some time afterwards, stepped into the office, and Mr. Dameron said to me, "You are selling beef here, suppose you let me have some in the way of paying for the land for which you owe us; whenever you come in, let me have beef; and I will credit your note, which will be the same as the cash to you." I said, "Whenever I bring in beef, I will let you have some; you credit my notes, and it will answer me as well as the money." I accordingly let him have beef at several different times. I at length became suspicious, from hearing a few words spoken in my neighborhood, and thought the money for one of the eighths had been deposited in the office. In selling some beef to Mr. Hall we were speaking of the scarcity of money, and he said he could recommend me to a man from whom I could get almost any amount of money I might want, at a per cent. He told me to go to Wm. S. Jones, of Clinton. I went to him and he agreed to let me have some money. I then came down to the office, and told Mr. Dameron and Gwin I was going to pay the money, and lift one eighth and a half of the land. They then asked me if I had got any person to assist me about the land; I told them I had, and they called him doctor Jones. They then consulted together. Mr. Gwin then turned round and said, "You have paid me nothing; I do not like to give up the land till I get more interest." I then asked him how much he wanted. He said, "As crumbs are going pretty plenty, I must have some too; you must pay me sixteen dollars to-day, if I consent to let that part of the land go." I then said, "Mr. Gwin, I have not got the money in hand to-day; but," says I, "I have got Mr. Jones to take half the land, and assist me about it, and I will pay you sixteen dollars to-morrow." He said, "Well, your word is good for it; we will wait till to-morrow." "Well," says I, "I will come down in a few hours with Mr. Jones, and you shall have the money for the land." Late in the evening, Mr. Jones and myself came down; Mr Gwin was absent; I applied to Mr. Dameron for my notes and certificates. When I applied to him for them he said, "Mr. Williams I do not know anything about your papers." "Know nothing about them, Mr. Dameron! why, not long since I told you I was going to pay you the money," said I. Says he, "I don't know that you had any papers here; if you had I expect they are torn up; I know nothing about them." Said I, "Mr. Dameron, I gave you and Mr. Gwin my notes, and I signed the certificates, and you have credited my notes with what I let you have; and," says I, "you must get my notes; I must know what has become of them; they are out." Mr. Jones and myself then got up, and started out of the office. Mr. Dameron then got up and said, "Mr. Williams, come back in the morning; I will make due search, and I expect all will be right." In the morning Mr. Jones and myself, after the office had opened, came to the office again. Mr. Dameron then said to me, "Mr. Williams, all is right; here are your papers and notes." I then asked for the certificates for the land Mr. Jones was going to enter for me, and I told them to credit the notes with the amount of money Mr. Jones was going to pay. They then tore up the certificates for the land Mr. Jones was going to enter. Mr. Jones then entered one eighth in his own name, and I paid for the forty acre piece which was entered in my name, and I transferred it to him in the office. Mr. Jones and myself then went to his office, and reduced our contract to writing. I then returned back to the office, and paid them the sixteen dollars interest, as agreed on the day before. I gave them the money, and said, "Credit my note. I wish you to credit the smaller note." Mr. Dameron looked in his box and found the notes, and said to Mr. Gwin, "I have lost fifty dollars." Mr. Gwin laughed, and said, "I cannot help that." Mr. Gwin then said, "You might as well not have applied to any one else, and let us have gone on with your business;" says he, "Jones will skin you tighter than we would; he is a skinner." Mr. Dameron then said, "I would not have made the offset about the notes if Jones had not been in the office; I did not want him in." Says I "Mr. Dameron, I am sorry I got a gentleman to come into the office who injured your feelings; I got him to assist me about my land." He said he did not want Jones to know anything he was doing in the office; he did not like him, and he did not want (anything) to do with him. I then said, "Mr. Dameron, I am willing to pay you interest. If you think there is the least difficulty about your saving the balance of the land for me, I will return to Mr. Jones and get him to save it for me; I might as well pay one man interest as another." Mr. Dameron then said, "Mr. Williams, there is not the least danger on earth; we can save your land, and you can pay us along as you get the money." Before my crop came in, I handed them over twenty dollars. About the last of October last I came to Clinton and found that Mr. Dameron had died, and Mr. Gwin had left the office. I then went to Mr. Dameron's widow, to ascertain what had become of my notes and the certificates for the land. She could give me no information about it; but told me to apply to her son, who done business in the office, and perhaps knew about it. I then applied to young Mr. Dameron; he said he knew nothing about it, but when I came in the next time he would try and ascertain, and would give me an answer. He then, at the next time I saw him, told me he could tell me nothing about it. He asked me how much money I had paid his father: I told him. He said I should not lose the land, and if I did he would make it good; he said he had asked Mr. Gwin about it, and he knew nothing about it; but I should lose nothing by it. I have not yet heard anything of my notes, or the certificates; but young Mr. Dameron paid me not a great while since the twenty dollars I had paid his father. He then requested me to say nothing about it, and said he could not find either the notes or certificates, and stated he would give me a receipt against the notes. In December last I saw Mr. Jones again in Clinton; he asked me if I had got the land Mr. Gwin and Mr. Dameron had agreed to save for me. I told him I could hear nothing of the certificates or notes, but that young Mr. Dameron had told me I should not lose the land. Mr. Jones then told me it was his opinion said land was yet vacant, though it might be marked sold on the maps of the office. I then asked him if he could save it for me. He told me he thought he could. We then found said land marked sold upon the maps of the office, but its sale could not be traced to any book in the office, nor could there be found any entry of its having been paid for to the government. We then deposited money for said land (after having obtained the certificates) till the register could get instructions from the Commissioner of the General Land Office permitting its entry. The register this morning told me he had not yet found any trace of said land being entered. The eighth and a half entered for me by Mr. Jones, in January, 1833, and which Mr. Gwin and Dameron had agreed to save for me three or four months before that time, is west half, southeast quarter, section twenty, township seven, range three west; and the north half, east half, and northeast quarter, section twenty-nine, same township and range; and the other land which they agreed to save for me, and which in said January, 1833, they farther continued to save for me, but which in December, 1833, was only marked sold upon the maps, and for which Mr. Jones has deposited money, is south half, east half, and southeast quarter, section twenty-one, township seven, range three west; and the east half, and southeast quarter, section seventeen, same township and range; all subject for sale at the Mount Salus land office. G. B. Dameron was receiver of public money, and S. Gwin was register at said Mount Salus land office when I contracted with them to save said land for me, and which they did not save, though they often told me they had saved, and received some of the money, which young Mr. Dameron has paid back to me. This is about the whole of said transaction, as well as I now can remember. Given under my hand and seal, this the 10th day of June, 1834.

HENRY G. JOHNSTON, J. P.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State, Burrass Haley, who, being first duly sworn, says he will true and faithful answers make to such interrogatories as may be propounded to him by the commissioner appointed by the Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands, to take depositions in the cases of frauds on the public lands, &c., &c.

Answer to first interrogatory. About the last of October or the first of November, 1832, George B. Dameron, and Samuel Gwin, receiver and register of the land office at Mount Salus, agreed to enter two eighths of land for me, and were to wait till the first of March, 1833, and I was to give them ten dollars for delay of payment on each eighth till that time. I gave them my note for two hundred and twenty dollars, payable at said first of March, 1833; said note made payable to George B. Dameron and Samuel Gwin; and stated in it, it was given for said two eighths of land, describing them. I got the applications from the register for said land, and handed them to Mr. Dameron, the receiver. He filed (the applications) away with the notes. I asked him for the receipts for the land; he said they were not in the habit of giving receipts for land at that time, but that the land would assuredly be secured to me; and informed me, if I wanted more saved in the same manner, I could get it. The land was marked sold upon the maps. In a short time afterwards, (a week or ten days, hardly so long,) I enclosed them my note for three hundred and thirty dollars, due 1st March, 1833, and requested them to enter me three more eighths of land, and to inform me if they had done so, by acknowledging the receipt of the letter. Not hearing from them I came down in a few days, being uneasy about it, to see if they had attended to it. I found that all the eighths had not been marked sold; but Gwin, the register, did then mark the whole of it sold, by putting the letter S on each eighth in my presence. On the 28th day of February, 1833, I came down to pay the money. The first applications that had been taken out could not be found; new applications were taken out, and the receipts for the payment of the money to the receiver were dated on that day, 28th February, 1833. The following are the numbers of the land: northwest one-quarter and west one-half, northeast one-quarter, of section 33, township 7, range 2 east; and the east one-half, southeast one-fourth, and east one-half, northwest one-fourth, of section 32, same township and range. I paid them five hundred dollars for the land, and fifty dollars interest.

Answer to second interrogatory. I asked Col. Gwin, the register, on the 28th February, 1833, if said land had been returned sold to the department. He said "No." He was so far behind with his books, not being able to get a clerk, he had not come up to it. I then asked him if said land had been applied for. He said a great many people had been looking at nearly all the vacant land.

Answer to third interrogatory. I know the land was marked sold at the time I bargained for it in October or November, 1832; but what the register would have done had any one applied for it, I do not know. Furthermore deponent saith not.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day Rufus B. Powee personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State, and said Powee, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he will true and faithful answers make to such interrogatories as may be propounded to him by the commissioner appointed by the honorable Senate of the United States through their Committee on Public Lands.

Answers to interrogatories. In September, 1832, I applied to Mr. Dameron, the receiver, to enter me two forty acre pieces. He said he would enter it, provided I would give him my note for one hundred and forty dollars, payable in six months from that time. I then told him I would do it. He stepped into the register's office, which is adjoining, and brought me the applications for both forty acre pieces. I went, and was qualified to them before a justice of the peace, and returned, and handed them to Mr. Dameron. Mr. Gwin and Mr. Dameron were both in the same room at the time, and I think Samuel Gwin, the register, wrote the note. It was made payable to said Dameron and Gwin, in six months, for $140. One or the other said they would keep the receipts for the land, as a kind of security, till the money was paid. I then believed the land was made safe, and was paid for to the government. A few days after my note fell due, I came and paid one hundred dollars on said note; I then told him (Mr. Dameron,) I would pay him the balance of the money in a few weeks. He said he would wait with me till the fall for the balance. He then told me he would be down at the office after dinner. Before he came I left town, and did not see him, nor did I ever afterwards. I never knew but that said land was saved for me, and continued to think so till Mr. Summeral, the present register, came into the office. Mr. Summeral sent me word said land was marked sold, but was not sold; and if I did not come and enter it some one else would enter it. When Samuel W. Dickson came into office as receiver of said Mount Salus land office, I again applied for both the eighths in which the two forty acre pieces were situated, and obtained them. I have not yet got back the one hundred dollars paid on the land, for which very same land I had to pay again, and shall probably lose said money. The land I contracted with them to save for me was north one-half, east one-half, southeast one-quarter, section 12, township 7, range 3 west; and south one-half, west one-half, northeast one-quarter, same section, township and range; and have been twice marked on each with the letter S. Further deponent saith not.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county, Joseph D. Pubbs, a witness called forward by virtue of a commission from the honorable Senate of the United States, in relation to transactions in the land office at Mount Salus, Mississippi; and the said Pubbs, being first duly sworn to make full and true answers to the annexed interrogatories, propounded by the commissioner herein, at the land office in Clinton, answered as followeth:

Answer to first interrogatory. I know that five eighths (lots) of ground on the Mississippi river were marked sold on the register's maps at the Mount Salus land office, when they were not sold, and they remained thus marked and unsold for several months. They were marked with the letter S. Samuel Gwin was then register of said office, and did himself mark said land, as above, under circumstances that he knew it was not sold, they being intended for my use; but were subsequently entered by Wm. M. Gwin, in the name of Harry Hill, of Nashville, Tennessee. This land was entered, I think, something more than a year ago; I think in March, 1833, but I am not certain as to dates.

Answer to second interrogatory. The letter S is used on the maps of said office to denote land that is sold, and subsequent inquirers for vacant land would believe land thus marked was sold.

Answer to third and fourth interrogatories. I think Samuel Gwin, the register, was partial to his brother in entering land. Dr. Wm. M. Gwin, brother of said Samuel Gwin, and myself, visited land on the Mississippi river, for the purpose of finding valuable vacant land; and after we had found land vacant that suited us, we agreed that he was not to enter land above a certain township line; nor was I to enter any below said township line—the line between eighteen range two east, and township range eight west. I was permitted, after going with said line to a certain lake, about two miles from the Mississippi river, to enter below said township line, as the lake might run. Wm. M. Gwin and myself returned to Clinton, (where the land office is situated,) and I entered some land. After I had been to look at said land a second or a third time, Samuel Gwin, the register, marked five lots of it as sold, when it was not sold, for my benefit, till I could get the money to pay for it. Some time afterwards, when I was about to leave for New Orleans, I applied to Maj. Dameron, the receiver, to borrow the money to pay for said land thus marked, for two weeks, till I could return from New Orleans. He at first agreed to lend me the necessary sum, five hundred dollars; but he then said perhaps he might wish to make a deposit before my return, and told me to take out applications, and deposit them in his strong box, and it would do as well as paying for the land. When I returned from New Orleans I came into the office to pay for said land thus marked. Maj. Dameron asked me if there was nothing between me and Wm. M. Gwin. I told him there was not. Dameron told me then Wm. M. Gwin had entered the five eighths marked for my benefit. I then asked him if said Gwin had no applications out for land that were not paid for. His answer was, he had thirty odd; and that he had forty-five hundred dollars on deposit, in his strong box, to pay for it. I then asked him if he would take some money on deposit for me. He said he would. I then deposited twelve hundred dollars with him. I then asked him if he would bid against me for the land for which Wm. M. Gwin had taken out applications. He said he would not. In two or three days afterwards I applied to Samuel Gwin, the register, for twenty lots, for which his brother had taken out applications, which were marked sold, but not paid for. He asked me where I wanted them. I told him to turn to the maps, township eighteen, north range, two east. I then applied for the south half of section nine. He told me it was entered. I told him it was not; but the applications were only in Dameron's strong box, and the land was not paid for. He said the money was on deposit, if it was not. I then told him I had money on deposit too, and made him give me applications for it. I then applied for the south half of section six, same township and range. He also said that was sold. I told him it was not; and he wrote three applications of it, and commenced the fourth, and stopped, and told me if I would not enter these lands, that he would burn the receipts for the five lots his brother had entered in the name of Harry Hill, of Nashville, Tennessee, as above mentioned. I told him I only wanted what was right; that I would put up with the three lower lots of the land entered in said Hill's name. He then went with me to Dameron's box, and got the receipts out, and three of them, for the lower lots I wanted, he burnt, and I then entered said three lots, and got the receipts in my own name. This is about all I know.

HENRY G. JOHNSTON, J. P.

To Nathaniel Reed, Esq., of Hinds County, Mississippi, greeting:

By virtue of the power in me vested by the Senate of the Congress of the United States of America, I hereby authorize and command you to summon Thomas C. Nelson to be and personally appear before me on the 16th day of June, 1834, at the land office in the town of Clinton, State and county aforesaid, then and there to discover on oath, in answer to interrogatories to be propounded, all such facts as he may know touching any malpractice of any officers of any of the land offices in the State aforesaid; also touching any fraud or corruption that may have been practiced at the recent sale of public lands in the State aforesaid; and that he bring with him all writings of any description, showing any combination of persons to purchase land at the recent public sale of lands at Chocchuma; also, all writings, memorandums, &c., showing the proceedings of said combination, and all papers of any kind whatever relating or in anywise appertaining thereto.

Given under my hand and seal this the 13th day of June, 1834.

WM. J. JONES, Commissioner. [L. S.]

THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County, sct:

This day Robert Matthews, of said county and State aforesaid, personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State aforesaid. Said Robert Mathews, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he will true and faithful answers make to such interrogatories as may be propounded to him by commissioners appointed by the honorable Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands.

Answer to first interrogatory. Yes, I have. Samuel Gwin, the late register of the land office at Mount Salus, was the officer who made the refusal to me and my brother John Mathews. That on the 11th of October, 1832, my brother John first came to the office in company with Ethelwin Sadler, who he got to assist him, to prevent him from making mistakes, as we were no scholars; he returned and told me that he applied to enter south one-half, east one-half, southwest one-quarter, of section No. 36, township No. 6, of range 2 west, and said Gwin had refused to let him enter said land; he wanted to enter it himself. My brother said he insisted to enter the land, and then Gwin proposed to him to bid for it, and he told him he could not do it—he only had money enough to pay for it at government price, and he thought he ought to have it, as it was unentered; but Gwin would not consent for him to enter it. My brother then returned and told me the circumstance; then I went up and proposed to enter it; he still urged me to bid for the land. I then commenced pleading with him to permit me to enter it—that we had commenced getting land there for a settlement, and it lay joining some land we had saved, and within two or three hundred yards of where we were building. He still refused, and I complained, and at length he proposed for me to take one-half of the eighth, to which proposition I consented, if he would let me have the half joining my former entry, which he refused, but told me I could take the other half. I concluded to take it rather than lose all.

Answer to the second interrogatory. I think it was in August, 1833, it was hinted to us that the land we applied for had not been sold, but the land on the map had the word "Gwin" written on it, when we got some friend to examine the map for us, and we found out that the land had no record of its having been paid for. I again went to the office about the 28th of August, 1833, to ascertain the date of the receipt of the money for the north half of said eighth, and was told in the land office that the receipt to said Gwin for the purchase of said north half was dated on the 10th of August, 1833. And further this deponent saith not.

ROBERT MATTHEWS.

HENRY G. JOHNSTON, J. P.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

This day personally appeared before me, Henry G. Johnston, an acting justice of the peace for said county and State, Ramsay M. Cox, who, being first duly sworn, saith he will true and faithful answers make to such interrogatories as may be propounded to him by the commissioner appointed by the Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands, to take depositions of witnesses in cases of frauds on the public lands, &c.

Answer to first interrogatory. A gentleman informed me that Messrs. Dameron and Gwin owned some valuable land lying near some he (Mr. Harper) owned, and they (Dameron and Gwin) had requested him to sell it for them. I went up and looked at the land, and came down to purchase it. I asked Messrs. Dameron and Gwin, the receiver and register of the Mount Salus land office, if they owned southeast quarter of section 27, township 10, range 4 east; and the northeast quarter of section 34, same township and range. This was about the 15th of December, 1832. They said they owned said land. I asked them what they would take for said land. They said seven hundred dollars. I asked them about the time of payment. They offered to take one hundred and fifty dollars in cash, and the balance in equal payments, half in three months and half in six months: I agreed to do it. I paid them one hundred and fifty dollars down. They did not take my notes, but gave me their joint bond, and both of them signed their own names to it; and in said bond it was agreed that when I paid the amount that would be due in three months, and also the amount that would be due in six months, they, their heirs, executors, &c., were to make me a title to said land above described. I then told them I wanted to enter a half eighth adjoining. They told me to go and make affidavit before Esquire Bond before I could enter it. I did so; and when I came back I asked them for the certificate for it. They said it did not matter about that; they would include it in the bond, and could so arrange it that the patents would come out in my name. I agreed to that; it was included in the bond, and I paid them in cash fifty dollars, the government price of said half eighth. I did not examine the maps, and do not know whether said half section above described was marked sold upon the maps of the office or not. I did not meet the first payment as it fell due; and when the last payment was about due I sent them my note, endorsed by Goosey and Bryant, payable in the United States Bank at Natchez, at four months, for five hundred and seventy dollars, for which I received a receipt signed by George C. Dameron. Some time afterwards, I saw Samuel Gwin on his way to Chocchuma, and he told me the note I had sent them was not discounted. I told him I would make some arrangements, and would pay it in a short time. He said Mr. Geo. C. Dameron attended to his father's business since his death, and told me to arrange it with George C. Dameron. The first time I came down I did not see George C. Dameron. He was from home. I saw him on the 29th February, 1834, and told him I wanted a title to the land I had bought of his father and Gwin, and showed him their bond for title, and told him I was then ready to pay the balance for said land. He said his father and Gwin did not enter it, but that he himself had entered the land in his own name. He said if I would pay him, he would make me a title to the four eighths, but he could do nothing with the half eighth. I then came to the office with Geo. C. Dameron, and he said the half eighth had been entered by Thomas Griffin. Geo. C. Dameron then deducted the fifty dollars for said half eighth from what I was to have paid, and I paid the balance, and he gave me a memorandum that he would make me a title to said four eighths. Said forty acre piece, which he said belonged to Mr. Griffin, was maked sold on the maps of the office at that time, 20th February, 1834, but no trace of its entry can be found in any other book of the office; and Mr. Griffin some time in April last deposited the money for said land.

Answer to second interrogatory. Said land did not belong to said Geo. B. Dameron and Samuel Gwin, receiver and register of the Mount Salus land office, at the time they sold me said land, which was about the 15th of December, 1832; for in fact George C. Dameron entered the very same land on the 11th September, 1833, in his own name, and I have not yet got a deed from any person for said land. I gave up the bond from said Dameron and Gwin to Geo. C. Dameron, and he gave me a receipt for the payment of the money for said land, and included in said receipt a memorandum that he would make me a title to said four eighths. He would have transferred said land to me in the register's office had the register not been absent on the day I paid him.

HENRY G. JOHNSTON, J. P.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

Interrogatories propounded to Thomas L. Summeral, present register of the Mount Salus land office, State aforesaid, touching any malconduct on the part of the several registers and receivers of the several land offices in the State aforesaid, by virtue of a commission from the honorable Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands.

Interrogatory first. When you took charge of the Mount Salus land office in the latter part of April, 1833, how long was it before you discovered that a considerable quantity of land had been marked sold upon the maps of survey, but which in fact was not sold; how many pieces of land thus marked have you detected upon said maps; how much is still thus marked; and how much of this marked land has since been entered, and in fact sold?

Interrogatory second. What quantity of land thus marked was so marked while the office was in the care of your predecessors in office; and how much was marked under each one, according to the best estimate you can make; and how much was marked by each one in his own handwriting?

Interrogatory third. Is there any record in your office of any of your predecessors informing the Secretary of the Treasury, or the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that a considerable quantity of land was marked sold which was not sold; and what disposition did your immediate predecessor make of land thus marked when applied for?

Interrogatory fourth Do you know or have you reasons to believe any officer of said office ever marked land sold when in fact said land was not sold, with a view of profit to himself or for the benefit of others, and did represent said land thus marked sold as in truth sold when applied for and inquired after by persons looking for vacant land? State particularly what officer may thus have acted, and every case in which you either know or have reasons to believe such was the fact.

Interrogatory fifth. Do you know or have you reasons to believe that any officer of said office ever agreed to save or enter any tract or tracts of vacant land for any person, and with an understanding they or he was to receive a percentage for so doing? If so, did said officer or officers make payment to the government at the time of making the agreement to save said land; or did he or they only mark said tract or tracts of land sold upon the maps of survey, so as to induce inquirers for vacant land to believe said land thus marked was sold when in fact it was not sold?

Interrogatory sixth. Was the north one-half, east one-half, southeast one-fourth, section 12, township 7, range 3 west; and the south one-half, west one-half, northeast one-fourth, same section, township, and range, marked sold upon the maps of survey when said land in fact was not sold, when you took charge of said office? If so, state how you think said land came to be marked in that manner, and what induced you to permit its entry without waiting to receive instructions from the Commissioner of the General Land Office; and also, what information you received from any person concerned in said Mount Salus land office relative to said lands being thus marked; and also who now owns said land, and when it was entered; and also state in whose handwriting you think said land was thus marked.

Interrogatory seventh. When you took charge of said office, what mark or writing was on north one-half, east one-half, southwest one-fourth, section 36, township 6, range 2 west? Who now owns said land? When was it entered; and was said mark or writing on said land prior to its being paid for? And also state what information you received relative to said land having said writing upon it.

Interrogatory eighth. When was west one-half, southeast one-fourth, section 20, township 7, range 3 west; and north one-half, east one-half, northeast one-fourth, section 29, same township and range, entered; and also were south one-half, east one-half, southeast one-fourth, section 21, township 7, range 3 west; and east one-half, southeast one-fourth, section 17, same township and range, marked sold upon the maps of survey? How do you think it thus came to be marked sold; in whose handwriting is said mark, and for what purpose was it made; and also what information have you had relative to said mark, from any person concerned in the office, and what is now the situation of said land?

Interrogatory ninth. Were the west one-half, northwest one-fourth, section 21, township 7, range 2 east; and the east one-half, northeast one-fourth, section 20, same township and range, marked sold upon the maps of survey when said land was not sold; and in whose handwriting is the mark of sale made upon said land; who now owns it; and in whose name is it entered? State every particular of said land.

Interrogatory tenth. Were certain tracts of land situate near a certain steam saw-mill, owned by John B. Pittman and Samuel Gwin, late register of this office, marked sold when in fact they were not sold? If so, state when you discovered said mark of sale upon them; what information you received relative to said marks; for whose benefit they were intended, when said land was in fact entered; who now owns it, and what induced you to erase the mark of sale from said land; and whether or not you had received instructions from the department for making the erasure.

Interrogatory eleventh. When do the records of your office show that northwest one-fourth, and west one-half, northeast one-fourth, section 33; and east one-half, southeast one-fourth, and east one-half, northwest one-fourth of section 32, township 7, range 2 east, were entered; by whom, and how much per acre?

Interrogatory twelfth. When do the records of your office show the entry of southeast one-fourth, section 27; and the northeast one-fourth of section 34, township 10, range 4 east; by whom, and how much per acre? Was said land marked sold upon the maps of survey, before the purchase money was paid to government; in whose handwriting do you suppose the mark of sold is made? If so, and said land was marked sold before it was in truth sold, how came it to be entered without waiting to receive instructions from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, permitting its entry; and also what information have you received relative to said land from any person who ever did business in your office, either as principal or deputy?

Interrogatory thirteenth. Is a certain half eighth of land near to or adjacent to the land mentioned in interrogatory 12, for which Thomas Griffin has deposited money, marked sold upon the maps of survey, but the sale of which cannot be traced to any other book in the office marked sold? If so, state in whose handwriting you think said mark of sale was made, and what information you ever received from any person, whoever may have done business in said office, either as principal or deputy.

Interrogatory fourteenth. Have you ever been informed that any person or persons were ever allowed to place or have placed a private mark upon vacant land, which such person or persons intended at some subsequent time to purchase of the government? If so, state what person or persons had said privilege; what was the intention of said private mark; what register allowed it, and every particular relating thereto.

Interrogatory fifteenth. From your examination of the books of said Mount Salus land office, and from information otherwise obtained, do you think your predecessors in office have faithfully discharged the duties required of them as registers of said office? State every particular; if from the records of the office, refer; if from information otherwise obtained, state your information; and also whether you think said registers have always acted in the discharge of their official duties with strict justice between man and man, and equal justice towards the government, whose agents they were; and also give the name of any register who may have been guilty of such malconduct.

Interrogatory sixteenth. Do you know of any malconduct on the part of any of the several registers or receivers of this State, yourself excepted? If so, state every particular.

Interrogatory seventeenth. What mark or writing is put upon land sold to show the sale of said land, in the Mount Salus land office?

Interrogatory eighteenth. Do the records of your office show that Samuel Gwin and George B. Dameron, or either of them owned, in November or December, 1832, the southeast one-fourth of section twenty-seven, and the northeast one-fourth of section thirty-four, township ten, range four east, or any half section of land in the neighborhood, or lying near the above-described land? If so, give the numbers of said land owned by them, and every particular.

Propounded June 18, 1834.

WILLIAM J. JONES, Commissioner.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Hinds County:

Answers of Thomas L. Summeral to the interrogatories propounded to him by William J. Jones, commissioner appointed by the Senate of the United States, through their Committee on Public Lands:

Answer to the first interrogatory. In the course of a month or two I discovered a considerable quantity of tracts marked on the maps of the office, which, upon inquiry at the General Land Office, proved to be not sold. Of lands thus marked, I have detected as much as twenty-one eighths, the whole of which I believe have since been sold. And upon a late comparison of the maps with the tract books of the office, I have discovered about one hundred and thirty-six eighths of land marked on the maps as sold that are not tract.

Answer to the second interrogatory. As to the time the marks were made I cannot say, but believe they were nearly all made before I took possession of the office. As to the handwriting, or under whose time as register, I cannot say with any degree of certainty; however, I believe that from the great variety of appearances in those marks, many of them were made by other persons than those in charge of the office; a considerable quantity of them appear to be in the handwriting of Samuel Gwin, some in the handwriting of Geo. B. Dameron, and some in the handwriting of Gideon Fitz, and perhaps some in the handwriting of S. D. Hays; but as to the quantity of marks made by each one, it is, from their numerous appearances, impossible to determine.

Answer to the third interrogatory. I find in a copy of a letter, purporting the original to have been sent to the General Land Office, a list of marks found on the maps, which corresponding tracts had not been entered on the tract books, and appears to be dated March 5, 1832. As for what disposition Col. Gwin, who was then register, made of said lands when application was made for them, I do not know.

Answer to the fourth interrogatory. I believe the maps have been marked in many places indicating the lands to be sold, when in fact they were not sold; but what were the views of the officers that made such marks I do not know. The north one-half, east one-half, southwest one-quarter of section 36, township 6, range 2 west, when I came into office was marked Gwin; and, upon inquiry, Colonel Gwin told me that it was not sold, but that he had marked it for himself, intending, as soon as I should take my post, and did some time afterwards, enter said tract land. G. B. Dameron also marked the maps, which will be explained in my answer to interrogatory six.

Answer to the fifth interrogatory. I know of no such circumstance.

Answer to the sixth interrogatory. The east one-half, southeast one-quarter, and the west one-half, northwest one-quarter of section 12, township 7, range 3 west, and marked on the maps as sold when I took charge of said office. The reason why I permitted said lands to be entered without waiting to have instructions from the General Land Office is, that G. B. Dameron indicated to me that he had marked it for R. B. Powee, who he expected would enter it, and the said mark on the map does appear to be in the handwriting of G. B. Dameron. The said land was entered by R. B. Powee on the 22d November, 1833.

Answer to the seventh interrogatory. For my answer as to the mark, &c., see my answer to the fourth interrogatory. The said tract was entered by Samuel Gwin on the 10th of August, 1833; however, the receipt having been misplaced at that time, the entry was not closed until the 29th of the same month.

Answer to the eighth interrogatory. The west one-half, southeast one-fourth of section 20, and the north one-half, east one-half, northeast one-fourth, 29, both of township 7, range 3 west, were entered (as appears by the records of this office) on the 3d day of January, 1833. The east one-half, southeast one-fourth of section 17, and the south one-half, east one-half, southeast one-fourth of section 21, both of township 7, range 3 west, were marked sold, I think, before I came into office, but how they came marked I know not. I believe the mark on the east one-half, southeast one-fourth of section 17, is in the handwriting of George B. Dameron. Application has been made, and the money deposited on the two tracts last above named, and now waits instructions from the General Land Office.

Answer to the ninth interrogatory. I know nothing of said marks, except that I perceive by the books of the office that it was entered by J. Dunbar and David Hunt on the 24th of July, 1833, at which time George C. Dameron attended to my office in my absence. By whose hand the marks were made I cannot tell.

Answer to the tenth interrogatory. There are two or three eighths of land lying in sections ten and fifteen, in township five, range two west, near which I suppose the said steam saw-mill is situate, about which John B. Pittman and Alexander McKay had some contention, a part of which has since been entered by John B. Pittman and Samuel Gwin in copartnership, and a part by Alex. McKay. The balance contained in said interrogatory I cannot answer.

Answer to the eleventh interrogatory. According to the records of this office, the northwest one-quarter and west one-half, northeast one-fourth of section thirty-three, township seven, range two east, and the east one-half, southeast one-fourth, and east one-half, northwest one-fourth of section thirty-two, same township and range, were entered on the 28th of February, 1833, by Burrass Haley, at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre.

Answer to the twelfth interrogatory. According to the records of the office, the southeast one-fourth of section 27, and the northeast one-fourth of section 34, both in township 10, range 4 east, were entered on the 11th September, 1833, at $1.25 per acre. I can neither tell who marked said tracts on the maps as sold, nor when they were marked; at the time said lands were entered I was part of the time confined with sickness, and was very seldom in the office. I never received any information relative to said entry until rehearsed by Ramsay Cox, whose testimony has been taken on the subject. I believe at the time the entry was made George C. Dameron superintended in my office.

Answer to thirteenth interrogatory. The north one-half, west one-half, northwest one-fourth of section 35, township 10, range 4 east, is marked sold on the maps, which entry cannot be found on the tract books, upon which Thomas Griffin has made a deposit to wait instructions from the General Land Office; the handwriting of said mark resembles that of Samuel Gwin. I have never received information on this subject from any person, save that from the testimony of Cox aforesaid.

Answer to the fourteenth interrogatory. I have been told by some person, but do not recollect by whom, that several persons had put private marks on certain tracts of land, as designated on the maps, which they intended at some future time to enter. I understood that Joseph Dunbar had thus marked the maps, but whether or not it was a privilege allowed by the register I do not know. The marks were made before I took charge of the office, but I cannot say who was the register at the time.

No answer to the fifteenth interrogatory.

Answer to the sixteenth interrogatory. I know of none.

Answer to the seventeenth interrogatory. Sometimes the purchaser's name is put upon the map to indicate the tract sold, but more commonly the letter S is put on the map for that purpose.

Answer to the eighteenth interrogatory. I know of none, nor do the records show any.

DEPOSITIONS FROM LOUISIANA IN RELATION TO FRAUDS IN THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

WASHINGTON CITY, September 20, 1834.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed you will receive a commission authorizing you to take depositions in relation to frauds in the sales of public lands, if any shall have been committed, in any district in the State, coming within your knowledge, and the conduct of the officers authorized by law to superintend these sales.

I transmit to you also sundry resolutions passed by the Senate, instructing the Committee on Public Lands to investigate these matters, with power to send for persons and papers, and take depositions in cases where the witnesses reside at a distance, and their personal attendance cannot be had before the committee.

These resolutions will direct your attention generally to the objects concerning which the Senate desire to obtain evidence; but it may be useful to incorporate more particularly a specification of some points on which it may be in your power to procure and forward satisfactory testimony to the committee; premising, however, that reliance is placed on your own judgment and information touching the execution of the duty confided to you.

1st. We desire to obtain evidence as to the conduct of registers and receivers generally in the disposal of the public lands at public or private sale.

Have they demanded of the purchaser fees or compensation for the performance of their official duties not authorized by law?

Have they accepted a bonus in money or in the form of interest, for securing particular tracts of land to such purchasers as would comply with the terms prescribed to them in this respect?

Have they sold public lands at any time otherwise than for ready money; and if so, have they taken the promissory note of the purchaser, payable at a distant day, for the purchase money, and a separate note for interest in their own names and for their own benefit?

Have they marked any part of the public lands laid down on the maps of survey "sold," or in any other manner which designated the land as entered, when in fact the lands so marked had not actually been sold or entered?

Have they at any time been interested with speculators or others who became the purchasers of the public lands so marked, or shared with them the profits arising out of such purchases?

On this point, if you cannot obtain clear and direct testimony, it would be desirable to resort to strong circumstantial evidence tending to show any connection founded on interested motives between the speculators or other purchasers and the officers.

2d. Have combinations of speculators at any public sale of lands united for the purpose of driving other purchasers out of the market, and deterring poor men from bidding for the lands on which they resided, or other lands which they might desire to purchase for actual settlement and cultivation, and thereby taking into their own hands the control of the sales for their own benefit, and purchased all of the valuable lands at the minimum price of the government?

Have these speculators, after the public sales were closed, offered the lands so purchased by them for sale at augmented prices; and have these lands been purchased by persons attending the sales at the prices put on them by the speculators or their agents; and if so, what price per acre, estimating the highest and lowest qualities, did they receive for the lands so purchased?

Have these companies, or any of them, large bodies of lands now in the market, which they fraudulently purchased at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre? And if so, what amount of land, according to the best estimate which may be made, yet remains undisposed of; and what is the price at which it is limited, including lands of the best quality and those of an inferior quality?

What would be a reasonable estimate of the loss sustained by the government at any public sale of lands within your district, in consequence of combinations of companies to purchase them at the minimum price?

Were the registers and receivers attending any such sale informed or had knowledge of the existence of such combinations or companies, and their object, and did they aid them in their fraudulent purposes; or did they, having such knowledge, interpose, in their official conduct or otherwise, to prevent the accomplishment of the purposes for which they had combined?

Have the registers and receivers manifested favoritism in the sale of the public lands at private sale, where two or more persons made application to purchase or enter any particular tract of land; and if so what were the circumstances under which their partiality was so manifested?

Have the receivers of the public moneys, or any of them, been at any time detected in speculating on the funds paid into their offices, by selling at a premium bank notes of the Bank of the United States, or other currrent bank paper, for bank notes not current at par, but which were made receivable for public lands, and then depositing these uncurrent bank notes in the deposit bank, selected by the Secretary of the Treasury, in lieu of the current notes thus sold at a premium?

Where companies or combinations of speculators in public lands may be known to you, it will be important as far as practicable to ascertain and certify their names, and the name or names of their agents, and also the State in which the company may have been formed.

These interrogatories may, and no doubt do fall far short of covering all the fraudulent practices of many officers authorized to superintend the sales of the public lands; I therefore wish you distinctly to understand that they are not to limit the scope of your investigations, but that you will extend your inquiries and take testimony on all subjects which you may deem essential to the public interest, or to the development of illegal or fraudulent practices at any land office within your district or State.

The committee rely confidently on your patriotic exertions in carrying into effect the investigations which they are instructed to make by the Senate.

You will receive a suitable compensation for your services when they shall have been completed, and the witnesses who may attend to give their evidence will be allowed the usual mileage and daily pay which is given in the highest courts of law within your State.

Before taking the testimony of any witness, you will make out such interrogatories as you may deem proper to draw from the witness all that he may know on the points to which you may desire his testimony.

If in making these interrogatories you deem it necessary to employ counsel to assist you by legal advice, you are authorized to do so; and such counsel will be paid a reasonable fee for his services on your certificate.

It is not expected that you are to give notice to any of the time and place which you may appoint to take depositions, nor will any person be permitted, either as principal or counsel, to interfere with you in the performance of your duty, but you may, at your option, furnish any officer who may reside within a convenient distance with a copy of any deposition which may implicate his official conduct. This, however, is submitted entirely to your own discretion.

In all cases where a witness may be examined who is not generally known, you will take care to forward satisfactory testimony of his character for truth and veracity.

You will cause the depositions to be certified by the judge or justice of the peace before whom they are taken, with the attestation of the clerk of the court under seal, that such judge or justice is duly appointed and qualified according to the constitution and laws of the State.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

GEO. POINDEXTER, Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands,
Per WM. BURNS, Clerk to Committee.

IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, March 5, 1834.

Resolved, That in the prosecution of their inquiries the Committee on Public Lands have power to send for persons and papers, to take depositions, and to examine witnesses before them on oath, touching the matters aforesaid. The committee consists of Messrs. Poindexter, Moore, Prentiss, McKean and Clay.

Attest: WALTER LOWRIE, Secretary. [L. S.]

IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, June 30, 1834.

Resolved, That the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands be authorized during the recess of Congress to proceed in the investigations of the alleged frauds in the sale of the public lands, commenced during the present session, by issuing commissions to take depositions in relation to such frauds, and the conduct of the officers appointed to superintend said sales by law, directed to such persons in the several land districts as he may select for the purpose; and also that he be authorized to extend said interrogatories into the conduct of the commissioners or agents appointed by the President to locate the Indian reservations under the treaties with the Creeks, Choctaws and Chickasaws, and the frauds, if any, which may have been committed in the purchase or sale of said reservations; and the testimony so taken shall be reported to the next session of Congress. The honorable George Poindexter, senator of the United States from the State of Mississippi, is chairman of the Committee on Public Lands.

Attest: WALTER LOWRIE, Secretary. [L. S.]

United States of America, to E. K. Wilson, Esq., of the parish of Ouachita, State of Louisiana, greeting:

Know you that the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands, reposing entire confidence in your prudence and fidelity, have appointed you, and by these presents do give you full power and authority diligently to examine all such witness or witnesses as you may think proper, upon interrogatories to be exhibited by you, touching the perpetration of any frauds in the sales of the public lands of the United States, if any shall have been committed in any district in the State of Louisiana, and also touching the conduct of any officer or officers of the said United States charged or authorized by law with the conduct, direction, management, or superintendence of said sales. We, therefore, authorize and empower you, first having yourself taken an oath before some judge or justice of the peace authorized by law to administer an oath, that you will well, fully and faithfully execute this commission, and reduce to writing the deposition of such witness or witnesses as you may examine as aforesaid; and cause to be administered to such witness or witnesses respectively an oath, that they will true, full, and perfect answers make to all and singular the said interrogatories; and reduce the answers of the said witness or witnesses respectively to writing; and when you shall have completed the same, to transmit the same, under your hand and seal, carefully closed up, to the Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate of the United States.

By order of the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate of the United States, this twentieth day of September, 1834.

GEORGE POINDEXTER,
Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, Senate of the United States.

NATCHEZ, November 10, 1834.

DEAR SIR: I am instructed by the honorable George Poindexter, chairman of the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate of the United States, to enclose to you a commission to take depositions in relation to frauds in the sales of the public lands, together with his letter of instructions on the subject.

Your prompt attention to this matter is requested, in order that the Committee of the Senate on Public Lands may be enabled to make their report as early in the ensuing session of Congress as practicable.

You will please acknowledge the receipt of the commission, &c.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM BURNS, Clerk to the Committee.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

To William P. Snow, Esq., Justice of the Peace in and for the parish of Ouachita, State of Louisiana, greeting:

Know you, that reposing special confidence in your integrity and provident circumspection, you are hereby required to cause to come before you John M. A. Hamblin, Esquire, and the honorable John H. Overton, and examine on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, in answer to the several interrogations hereto annexed; and after having them signed respectively, after reducing said answers to writing, certify the same officially, and send them carefully enclosed to us at Monroe, together with this commission.

Given under our hand this fifth day of December, 1834.

H. BRY,
E. K. WILSON,
Commissioners appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands.

MONROE, December 3, 1834.

DEAR SIR: Believing that it might be satisfactory to you, we enclose copies of the interrogatories to be put to the persons therein named, in some cases relative to your office, which we are commissioned to inquire into. Some of these interrogatories will be sent to Alexandria by first opportunity, probably by mail, leaving here on 5th inst., directed to Judge Johnston, who is commissioned to that effect.

We remain, very respectfully, yours, &c.,

E. K. W.

JOSEPH FRIEND, Esq., Receiver of S. M. Monroe.

The following are interrogatories to be propounded to John M. A. Hamblin, Esquire, register at the land office at Monroe, in pursuance of a commission directed to us from the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands:

First. At what time did Joseph Friend enter on the duties of the office of receiver of public moneys for the land district north of Red river?

Second. Did you not about that time make a purchase of a tract of land at a public land sale at one dollar and seventy-five cents per acre; and when you came to pay the money for it the next morning, or the same evening, was it not offered to you by the receiver, Joseph Friend, at one dollar and twenty-five cents, to which you objected, and paid, after causing the receipt made out for one dollar and twenty-five cents to be altered to one dollar and seventy-five cents? If not, state what were the circumstances of the case; and did you not pay for yours previous to the next day's sale?

Third. On the same day did or did not H. Pargond purchase two quarter sections of land in Bunch's bend, on the Mississippi river, said to be very valuable, at six dollars or upwards; and does or does it not appear on the books as having been sold previous to yours, to Joseph M. Patten, at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre?

Fourth. Was not Joseph M. Patten, the brother-in-law of C. F. Morehouse, the then register, and a friend of the receiver?

Fifth. Do you or not know that C. F. Morehouse, the then register, was suffered to enter a tract of land which is very valuable, a short distance above the town of Monroe, without it ever having been offered for sale, and when he had no claim to a pre-emption, or at least none was established?

Sixth. Do you or do you not find that many applications and certificates given by you to persons wishing to purchase lands, are not entered on the receiver's books as entered until a succeeding quarter?

Seventh. Is or is not the receiver, Joseph Friend, often gone from his office, and even from the parish for some weeks at a time, on other business than that of making his deposits of public moneys?

H. BRY,
E. K. WILSON,
Commissioners appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

In pursuance of a commission to me directed, from the Hon. Henry Bry and Ephraim K. Wilson, commissioners appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on public lands, have this day caused Dr. John M. A. Hamblin to appear before me at his bedside, at his residence on the bayou de Laird, in said parish; and after having duly sworn him upon the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, according to law, to answer the several interrogatories propounded to him by the said commissioners, and annexed to the said commission in relation to the sales of the public lands, &c., at the land office at this place, deposeth and saith as follows, to wit:

To the first interrogatory, he says, Joseph Friend entered on the duties of his office a few days previous to the 25th of November, 1830.

To the second, he says, yes; he did purchase a tract of land at the land sales in November, 1830, for which he bid one dollar and seventy-five cents per acre; and by an arrangement made with the receiver, Joseph Friend, he was to call on his, deponent's merchant, H. Pargond, for the purchase money in the event of his, deponent, not returning the next morning before the opening of the land sales. The next morning deponent called on the receiver between 9 and 10 o'clock A. M., and asked if Mr. Pargond had paid him. He replied, yes, and went to his desk and drew from a pigeon hole a receipt, made out and signed. When deponent came to examine the receipt, he found it had been made out for one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre; not doubting but what it was an oversight, he pointed to the mistake and gave it back to the receiver, who examined it for a moment, as he presumed, to see if it could be altered without too much erasure, when he tore off his name, walked to his desk, and made a new calculation on the back of the old receipt, and proceeded to fill up a new one. When he came to the price per acre, he again inserted $1.25 instead of $1.75; when deponent remarked to him that he was making the same mistake. Receiver then made a seven of the two, and carried out the amount at one dollar and seventy-five cents per acre.

To the third, he says, yes; he believes Mr. Pargond did purchase two lots of land on the Mississippi river, situate in Bunch's bend, for something upwards of six dollars per acre: and that he believes them to be the same lots that stand charged to Joseph M. Patten at one dollar and twenty-five per acre; and that they stand on the record as having been paid for previous to deponent's lot, as mentioned in his answer to the second interrogatory.

To the fourth, he says, yes.

To the fifth, he says, the register, C. F. Morehouse, did purchase at private entry a small tract of land a short distance above Monroe, containing about 45 or 50 acres. Deponent further states that he presumes the township in which said land was situate had been offered for sale, but whether the particular lot entered by the register had been offered for sale or not he is unable to say.

To the sixth, he says, yes. And for further answer, he says that it has been sometimes done for the purpose of enabling them to make up their returns so as to meet the earliest mail.

To the seventh, he says, yes; he frequently attends the district courts in the parishes of Claiborne and Carroll as a lawyer, but always leaves blanks signed with some one of his friends. Deponent further states that he does not know that the business of the office has suffered very materially by his absence.

JNO. M. A. HAMBLIN.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

I, William P. Snow, justice of the peace in and for said parish, do hereby certify that the foregoing answers were taken, written down, sworn to, and subscribed before me, as above stated.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed my name and affixed my private seal, having no public seal of office, on this 19th day of January, A. D. 1835.

WM. P. SNOW, Justice of the Peace. [L. S.]

STATE OF LOUISIANA:

I, the undersigned, secretary of state, do hereby certify to all whom it may concern, that Wm. P. Snow, whose signature is affixed to the foregoing document, is now, and was at the time of signing the same, a justice of the peace in and for the parish of Ouachita; that to all acts by him so signed, full faith and credit are and ought to be given; and further, that his attestation at the foot of said document is in due form of law.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the State, at the city of New Orleans, this seventh day of February, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and thirty-five, and of the independence of the United States the fifty-ninth.

MARTIN BLACHE, Secretary State. [SEAL.]

The following are interrogatories to be propounded to the honorable John H. Overton, of the town of Monroe, in pursuance of a commission directed to us from the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands:

First. Have you made, within the last two years, any purchases of United States land in the land district north of Red river, in the name of yourself and Richard Winn; and if so, was or was not Joseph Friend, the receiver, to have one-third of those lands for his services on the entry; and if not, what was the contract with him, yourself, and Richard Winn?

Second. Was not this land entered in township No. 18 range No. 13 east, and did or did not the quantity so entered exceed twenty-six hundred acres?

Third. How was this land paid for? Was it paid for in money, a draft, or in notes; and if either of the latter, at what time payable?

Fourth. Was payment made on the day that the receipt was given; and if not, at what time was it made?

Fifth. Was there or was there not an agreement with the receiver that he should send on to the office of the surveyor general and get the diagram of the township No. 18, and that you could immediately on the receipt of it enter the land; and did he not write for it, or did he not tell you so? Please state all you know of this matter.

Sixth. Had there not been a previous application presented to the receiver for the land entered by yourself and Richard Winn, or by Richard Winn, and have you not heard the receiver say so? State what you have heard him say on the subject, as far as you can recollect.

Seventh. Does or does not Joseph Friend, the receiver, now own, unless he has sold it, the one-half of about two thousand six hundred and sixty-three acres of land in township No. 18, in range No. 13 east, which was entered in the name of yourself and Richard Winn, and the one-half of something upwards of two thousand acres entered in the name of Richard Winn; the first from your own knowledge, and the latter from what he has told you.

H. BRY,
E. K. WILLSON,
Commissioners appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

Henry Bry and Ephraim K. Willson, Esqrs., inhabitants of said parish, in pursuance of a commission from the Committee of the Senate of the United States, have made out and tendered to the undersigned, of the same parish, the interrogatories subjoined. Nothing but a sense of sheer justice to another could induce him to answer. Being sworn according to law, he answers as follows:

To the first interrogatory, he says: In May last, having previously understood that township 18, range 13 east, contained good lands in its interior, and was subject to private entry, I engaged S. W. Maddox, of this parish, in consideration of one-third of the good land that should be entered upon his information, to go over and examine it. Before his return, and I believe a very short time after his departure, in a conversation with Joseph Friend, the receiver of public moneys at this place, I learned from him that he had funds of Richard Winn, of Alexandria, subject to his order for the purchase of lands. I proposed to him that I would embark my little means with Winn's, at hazard, my information of the position of the good lands being too vague to risk alone, if he would engage that Winn would take two-thirds of the whole purchase, leaving me an interest of one-third only. It was agreed to: accordingly I purchased in the name of Overton and Winn, in township 18, range 13 east, on the 14th of May last, fractional section 56, containing $426\frac{46}{000}$ acres, at $1.50 per acre; east one-half of section 58, containing 320 acres, at $1.25 per acre; fractional section 57, containing $327\frac{76}{100}$ acres, at $1.50 per acre; and section 61, containing $642\frac{80}{100}$ acres, at $1.50 per acre; H. Pargond, of this place, bidding against me for fractional section 56, 57, and section 61. On the day following, 15th May, 1834, I purchased in the like manner fractional section 50, containing $254\frac{36}{100}$ acres, at $1.25; fractional section 51, containing $614\frac{56}{100}$ acres, at $1.25. And on the day succeeding, the 16th May, 1834, I purchased in the same way the east half of northeast quarter of section 55, containing $80\frac{35}{100}$ acres, at $1.25. I paid for one-third of the lands purchased as before mentioned, it being my interest in the same, in cash, on the day the receipt bears date, to wit, on the 14th, 15th and 16th of May, 1834. Of the kind of money I have only this recollection, (and perhaps I should not have recollected thus much had it not have been for some circumstances connected with the particular bill paid,) that one of the notes was a $1,000 note on the United States Bank, given me by Charles Pipes, of this parish, to pay his installment to the bank at Avoyelles, which I used, subsequently replaced, and paid over according to his wishes. The deponent further answering, declares that there never was any contract, covenant, or agreement between himself and Joseph Friend, the receiver, by which the said Friend was to have one-third of the lands for services, or any part or portion of the same. That there was never any contract between them, unless the arrangement spoken of in the preceding part of the answer to this interrogatory may be construed to be one.

To the second interrogatory, he answers, that the lands entered in the name of Overton and Winn, are situated in township 18, range 13 east, and estimated (exclusive of $626\frac{17}{100}$ acres purchased on the 1st of August afterwards, and mentioned in his answer to the fifth interrogatory) to contain 2,666 acres and $\frac{23}{100}$ of an acre.

To the third, he answers, that one-third of the purchase money, the price of his interest, was paid in cash as before-mentioned; the balance, he understood, was paid over by Richard Winn, to the receiver, Joseph Friend, on his way through Alexandria to New Orleans, for the purpose of making his deposits, but of this he has no personal knowledge.

To the fourth, he has answered in his answers to the first and preceding interrogatory.

To the fifth, he answers, that about the date of the entries spoken of in the answer to the first interrogatory, he made application in the name of Overton and Winn for the northwest quarter and south half of the northeast quarter of section 62, containing $234\frac{2}{100}$ acres, lots five, six and seven of section 49, containing $74\frac{19}{100}$ acres, and the south half of fractional section 48, containing $317\frac{99}{100}$ acres, which the register declined selling unless subdivided by the surveyor general. Having heard in my acquaintance with the land officers of instances of private individuals procuring from the surveyor general regularly certified plats, having the particular fractional sections subdivided so as to enable them to purchase less quantities, and bring or send them to the register, and make the purchase accordingly; in perfect good faith I applied to Col. Friend, not in his character as an officer of the government, to write for me, as he had some acquaintance with the surveyor general and I had none, for a plat of the fractional sections, subdivided so as to enable me to purchase the lots already applied for. He did so; I mailed the letter a few days after at Alexandria, on my way to Oppelousas. On the return of deponent about the latter end of June or first of July, or shortly afterwards, the answer of the surveyor general, covering the plat containing the subdivisions of those fractional sections and two or three others, perhaps, into which the back pre-emptions had run, was handed me by Col. Friend; and on the first day of August I went to the register's office with the plat, to purchase the lots before applied for. Mr. Pargond having also applied to purchase the same lots, was notified by the register, but declined buying, when they were sold to this deponent and Richard Winn, at the minimum price, $1.25 per acre. This plat of a few fractional sections in the interior of the township, is the only plat, or map, or diagram of township 18, range 13 east, or any other township that I have ever applied for to the surveyor general, through Col. Friend or any other person, and I suppose is alluded to in the interrogatory as being the diagram of the township No. 18.

To the sixth interrogatory, he answers and says, that he has no personal knowledge upon the subject. He understood that there had been an application for fractional section 50, he thinks; saw the individual who was said to have applied, had a conversation with him, and heard the receiver say he had not the money to make the purchase.

To the seventh interrogatory, he answers and says, that he knows nothing of his own knowledge, in relation to the interest of Joseph Friend, the receiver, in the lands purchased by Winn and himself. He has heard Col. Friend say that he is the owner of one-half of the lands in township 18, range 13 east, entered in the name of Richard Winn, for which he has obligated himself for the half of the purchase money, with interest thereon at ten per centum per annum until paid; payable, if I am not mistaken, on the sale of the lands. The quantity he does not know.

J. H. OVERTON

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

I, William P. Snow, justice of the peace in and for said parish do hereby certify, that by virtue of a commission to me directed, from the honorable Henry Bry and Ephraim K. Wilson, commissioners appointed by a Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands, have caused the Hon. John H. Overton to appear before me at my office in the town of Monroe, on this day, who answered the several interrogatories propounded to him by the said commissioners, and annexed to the said commission as above stated; and that the answers were taken down, sworn to, and subscribed before me, as therein stated.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed my name and affixed my private seal, having no public seal of office, on this 12th day of January, A. D. 1835.

WM. P. SNOW, Justice of the Peace. [L. S.]

STATE OF LOUISIANA:

I, the undersigned, secretary of state, do hereby certify to all whom it may concern, that Wm. P. In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the State, at the city of New Orleans, this seventh day of February, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and thirty-five, and of the independence of the United States the fifty-ninth.

MARTIN BLACHE, Secretary of State.

THE STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita.

To A. J. Lowry, a justice of the peace in and for the parish of Carroll:

Know you, that trusting to your fidelity and provident circumspection, you are hereby authorized and required to cause to come before you Honora P. Morancy, Robert Ford, and William R. Hynes, citizens of your said parish, and after having sworn them on the Holy Evanglist of Almighty God, cause them to answer, on oath, the interrogatories hereto annexed; and after reducing the said answers to writing, and causing the persons so interrogated to sign the same, send them carefully enclosed to me at Monroe, together with this commission. Given under my hand this twenty-third day of December, in the year 1834.

E. K. WILLSON,
Commissioner appointed by the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate of the United States.

The following is the interrogatory propounded to Honora P. Morancy, of the parish of Carroll, in the State of Louisiana, in pursuance of a commission directed to me by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands; also to be propounded to Robert Ford and William Hynes, of same place:

Interrogatory. What do you know of the conduct of the receiver of public moneys at Ouachita, Louisiana, in regard to the sale, and his previous representations of the situation of township number 18, in range number 13 east, in the parish of Carroll?

E. K. WILLSON,
Commissioner appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Carroll:

In pursuance of a commission to me directed by Ephraim K. Willson, commissioner appointed by the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate of the United States, I caused Honora P. Morancy, of the above named parish, to appear before me, who, having been duly sworn, answers as follows to the above interrogatory:

Some time in the fall of 1833, I was at Monroe, Louisiana, and inquired of Joseph Friend if the lands in township 18, range 13, were subject to entry. He replied they were not. That the commissioners had no plat of the same, excepting the plat of the front lots. That he believed the former commissioners had offered that township at public sale, but that the sale was illegal, and he could not permit any entries to be made in that township at that time; that it would be necessary that said township should be previously offered at public sale, according to law, before he could be authorized to permit any private entry. I saw Joseph Friend again in December of the same year, and conversed with him on the same subject, observing to him that I was desirous of making some entries in that township, and that if he should change his determination, and permit those lands to be entered at private sale at a future time, without advertising, that as I lived at a great distance from the office I would not know it in time. He observed to me that I need not give myself any uneasiness on that subject; that he could by no means permit any private entries in that township, and that it was his determination to write shortly to the General Land Office, for the purpose of having the said township included in the very first proclamation of the President that would be issued for the sale of lands in his district.

H. P. MORANCY.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this twenty-fifth day of December, 1834.

A. J. LOWRY, Justice of the Peace in and for the Parish of Carroll.

Wm. R. Hynes, jun., and Robert Ford, not knowing anything relative to entering the lands prejudicial to the receiver, their deposition was not taken.

A. J. LOWRY, Justice of the Peace.

STATE OF LOUISIANA:

I, the undersigned, secretary of state, do hereby certify to all whom it may concern, that A. J. Lowry, whose signature is affixed to the foregoing document, is now, and was at the time of signing the same, justice of the peace in and for the parish of Carroll; that to all acts by him so signed full faith and credit are due and ought to be given; and further, that his attestation at the foot of said document is in due form of law.

MARTIN BLACHE, Secretary of State. [SEAL.]

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

To William P. Snow, Esq., justice of the peace in and for the parish of Ouachita, State of Louisiana, greeting:

Know you, that, trusting to your fidelity and provident circumspection, you are hereby authorized and empowered to cause to come before you Hypolite Pargond, and on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God to be sworn to give true and perfect answers to the interrogatories hereto annexed, and after having them reduced to writing and signed by him, and certified by you, under your hand and seal of office, send them carefully enclosed to us at Monroe. Given under our hands and private seals, having no public one, this tenth day of December, 1834.

H. BRY, [L. S.]
E. K. WILLSON, [L. S.]
Commissioners appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands.

The following are interrogatories to be propounded to Mr. Hypolite Pargond, of the parish of Ouachita, and State of Louisiana, in pursuance of a commission directed to us by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands:

First. Did you or did you not purchase at public sale, in the fall of 1830 or 1831, one or two quarter sections of land on the Mississippi river, in Bunch's bend, and were they not numbered as lots Nos. 17 and 18 in township No. 22, range 12 east; and did you not bid for the said land six dollars and one-half per acre; and if not that sum, what did you bid?

Second. Did you, from information or otherwise, learn that some person was living on said land, and bid for it himself, or some person bid for him?

Third. Did you forfeit your bid, or did you agree that Joseph M. Patten should have the benefit of your bid; or did he not take your bid off your hands?

Fourth. If this arrangement was not made, what was the arrangement by which Mr. Patten got the land? State fully the whole arrangement.

Fifth. Is not Joseph M. Patten living on the land yet; and is not the land reputed to be worth thirty dollars or upwards per acre?

Sixth. Was or was not the arrangement which you made with Mr. Patten understood by the then register, C. F. Morehouse, and the receiver, Joseph Friend?

Seventh. State all you know about that matter.

Eighth. If Patten had not taken your bid, and agreed to pay for it at the price that you bid, would you not have taken it?

H. BRY,
E. K. WILLSON,
Commissioners appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

In pursuance of a commission, to me directed, from the honorable the commissioners, Henry Bry and Ephraim K. Wilson, appointed by the Committee of the Senate of the United States on Public Lands, I have caused Mr. Hypolite Pargond to appear before me, at my office, in the town of Monroe, and after having duly sworn him upon the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, according to law, to answer the several interrogatories propounded to him by the said commissioners, in relation to the sales of public lands, &c., at the land office at this place, deposeth and saith as follows, to wit:

To the first interrogatory, he says, that he did purchase at the land sales, he thinks in the fall of 1830, one or two lots of land on the Mississippi river, situate in Bunch's bend; but as to the numbers of the lots, the township and range, he does not recollect; and further, he says he does not recollect exactly the amount he bid per acre, but thinks it was over five dollars.

To the second, he says, he thinks he was informed while he was bidding for said land, that some person lived on it, but does not know that the person then living on said land bid for it through any other person, nor by himself.

To the third, he says, no; he did not forfeit his bid, but did agree with Mr. Joseph M. Patten, in the presence of the register, C. F. Morehouse, and the receiver, Joseph Friend, that he, Patten, should have the benefit of his bid, to which Patten agreed, and took the bid off his hands.

To the fourth, he says, he has answered this interrogatory in his answer to the third; and for further answer he says, Joseph M. Patten did forfeit the bid, and that he, deponent, complained very much to Patten about it, and told Patten if he had known he would have forfeited the bid, he should not have had the land. Patten then told deponent he need not complain about it, for his (deponent's) name was not known in the transaction at all, as deponent's name was erased, and his, Patten's name put in the place of it.

To the fifth, he says, he believes that he does live on the same land; as to the value of said land he is unable to say.

To the sixth, he says, yes; the register, C. F. Morehouse, erased his name and wrote Patten's in the place of it, which was done in the presence of the receiver, Joseph Friend.

To the seventh, he says, he has answered all he knows on the subject.

To the eighth, he says, yes.

H. PARGOND.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita:

I, William P. Snow, justice of the peace in and for said parish, do hereby certify that the foregoing answers were taken, written down, sworn to, and subscribed before me, as above stated.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed my name, and affixed my private seal, having no public seal of office, at my office, in the town of Monroe, on this 20th day of December, A. D. 1834.

WM. P. SNOW, Justice of the Peace. [L. S.]

STATE OF LOUISIANA.

I, the sundersigned secretary of tate, do hereby certify to all whom it may concern, that W. P. Snow, whose signature is affixed to the foregoing document, is now and was at the time of signing the same justice of the peace in and for the parish of Ouachita; that to all acts by him so signed full faith and credit are and ought to be given; and further, that his attestation at the foot of said document is in due form of law.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and affixed the seal of the State, at the city of New Orleans, this seventh day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, and of the independence of the United States of America the fifty-ninth.

MARTIN BLACHE, Secretary of State. [SEAL.]

To William Lumpkin of Hinds County, Mississippi, greeting:

By virtue of the power in me vested by the Senate of the Congress of the United States of America, I hereby authorize and command you to summon William Bedwords, James McLarer, William Corgale, William C. Despass, Herrin Walker, G. C. Porter, and John H. Ripler, of the county of Hinds, and State of Mississippi, to be and personally appear before me, on the 10th day of January, A. D. 1835, at my office, in the town of Raymond, Hinds county, and State aforesaid, then and there to be propounded all such facts as he may know, touching any malpractice on the part of the several registers and receivers of the several land offices in the State aforesaid; also touching any fraud or corruption that may have been practiced in the recent sale of public lands in this State.

Given under my hand and seal this 22d day of December, A. D. 1834.

ROBERTSON A. CARLOSS, Commissioner. [SEAL.]

To R. J. Townes, of Hinds County, Mississippi, greeting:

By virtue of the power in me vested by the Senate of the Congress of the United States of America, I hereby authorize and command you to summon David Slay, of the county of Hinds, and State of Mississippi, to be and personally appear before me, on the 22d day of December, A. D. 1834, (inst.) at my office in the town of Raymond, in Hinds county, and State aforesaid, then and there to discover on oath, in answer to interrogatories to be propounded, all such facts as he may know, touching any malpractice on the part of the several registers and receivers of the several land office in the State aforesaid; also touching any fraud or corruption that may have been practiced in the recent sale of public lands in this State.

Given under my hand and seal this 22d day of December, A. D. 1834.

R. A. CARLOSS, Commissioner. [SEAL.]

To William Lumpkin, of Hinds County, Mississippi, greeting:

By virtue of the power in me vested by the Senate of the Congress of the United States of America, I hereby authorize and command you to summon Wm. A. Hardwick, John Palmer, Patrick Sharkey, and Frederick Spann, of the county of Hinds, and State of Mississippi, to be and personally appear before me on the 10th day of January, A. D. 1835, at my office in the town of Raymond, in Hinds county, and State aforesaid; then and there to discover on oath, in answer to interrogatories to be propounded, all such facts as he may know touching any malpractice on the part of the several registers and receivers of the several land offices in the State aforesaid; also touching any fraud or corruption that may have been practiced in the recent sale of public lands in this State.

Given under my hand and seal this 22d day of December, A. D. 1834.

ROBERTSON A. CARLOSS, Commissioner. [SEAL.]

To James R. Wright, of Clairborne County, Mississippi, greeting:

By virtue of the power in me vested by the Senate of the Congress of the United States of America, I hereby authorize and command you to summon Doct. Edward Lee, Henry T. Irish, Esq., B. F. Stockton, Doct. James P. Parker, and John B. Thrasher, to be and personally appear before me at the office of James Maury, Esq., in the town of Port Gibson, in the county of Claiborne, and State aforesaid, on Saturday, the 27th day of December, A. D. 1834, then and there to discover on oath, in answer to interrogatories to be propounded, all such facts as they may know touching any malpractice on the part of the several registers and receivers of the several land offices in the State aforesaid; also touching any fraud or corruption that may have been practiced in the recent sale of public lands in this State.

Given under my hand and seal the 24th day of December, 1834.

ROBERTSON A. CARLOSS, Commissioner. [SEAL.]

Doct. Lee and Major B. F. Stockton know nothing in relation to the land offices of Mississippi; they could testify concerning the land offices in Louisiana. Mr. Thrasher was absent from home; his testimony and Doct. Parker's would be the same.

R. A. CARLOSS.

Interrogatories propounded to John Maxwell, Henry T. Irish, David Slay, Stewart McRaven, and J. P. Parker, by R. A. Carloss, under a commission from the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate of the United States, in relation to alleged frauds in the sales of the public lands:

Interrogatory first. Did you or did you not attend the sales of the public lands held at Chocchuma, in the State of Mississippi, on the 21st day of October, 1833, at any time during the continuance of said sales?

Interrogatory second. If yea, please state whether you became the purchaser of any lands of the United States at said sales, what number of acres, and at what prices?

Interrogatory third. Did you make such purchases on your own individual account, or in partnership with others?

Interrogatory fourth. If the purchases were made in partnership with other persons, please subjoin to your answer to this interrogatory a full and fair copy of the articles of agreement under and by virtue of which said purchases were made.

Interrogatory fifth. Did you, in bidding for the public lands, represent any company or companies of speculators? And if so, state the names of the persons composing said companies, the agent or agents of said companies, designating the State in which such company was formed.

Interrogatory sixth. Did or did not all of said companies combine for the purpose of purchasing all the valuable lands then offered for sale for their own exclusive benefit, granting only the privilege to actual settlers to purchase, at the minimum price of the government, one-eighth or a quarter section of land, including their improvements; and did not an agent of the combination, or of some one of the companies, in most instances, bid off each eighth or quarter section of land, and afterwards transfer the certificate to the person settled on it, provided payment was made for the land during the same day?

Interrogatory seventh. Were there any actual settlers who bid for other lands at these sales, after he had obtained the eighth or quarter section on which he had made his settlement or improvement? And if so, please to state the name of the person who bid under such circumstances.

Interrogatory eighth. What number of acres of public land did the whole of said companies purchase at said sales; and how was it divided between them after the sales were closed?

Interrogatory ninth. Did or did not the companies, after the public sales were closed, open an auction for the lands which they had purchased, at which all who thought fit were permitted to bid, thereby creating a competition for their mutual benefit?

Interrogatory tenth. Did the register and receiver demand payment according to law from the companies of speculators for the whole of the lands purchased by them and each of them; or was not the payment in some cases, OR IN ALL, postponed until the sales were closed, and the subsequent sales were made by said companies on their own account?

Interrogatory eleventh. Did the register and receiver accept, in lieu of money or bank notes, bills of exchange on some mercantile house in Natchez or New Orleans, or elsewhere, in payment for public lands purchased at said sales by said companies of speculators, or any of them? If so, state what amount was so offered and accepted, and on what terms.

Interrogatory twelfth. Was the register or receiver, or either of them, interested with said companies of speculators, or either of them, in the lands purchased at said sales, either directly or in the name of some other person?

Interrogatory thirteenth. Did not the combination of speculators stipulate with Samuel Gwin, the register, to guarantee to him one dollar for each transfer of an eighth of a section of land; and did not said Gwin refuse to permit the sales to proceed until that stipulation was made?

Interrogatory fourteenth. Was not William M. Gwin, the brother of the register, now marshal of the State, a member of the combination of speculators in the public lands at said sales? And if so, please state what number of acres was allotted him in the general distribution.

Interrogatory fifteenth. Did or did not the register or receiver demand of the purchaser or purchasers fees or compensation for the performance of their duties not authorized by law?

Interrogatory sixteenth. Have they accepted a bonus in money, or in form of interest, for securing particular tracts of land to such purchasers as would comply with the terms presented to them in this respect?

Interrogatory seventeenth. Have they or have they not sold public lands at any time otherwise than for ready money? And if so, have they taken the promissory note of the purchaser, payable at a distant day, for the purchase money, and a separate note for interest in their own names, and for their own benefit?

Interrogatory eighteenth. Have they marked any part of the public lands as laid down in the map of survey sold, or in any other manner which designated the land as entered, when in fact the lands so marked had not been actually sold or entered?

Interrogatory nineteenth. Have they at any time been interested with speculators or others who became the purchasers of the public lands so marked, and shared with them the profits arising out of such purchases?

Interrogatory twentieth. Have combinations of speculators at any public sale of lands united for the purpose of driving other purchasers out of the market, and deterring poor men from bidding for the lands on which they resided, or other lands which they might desire to purchase for actual settlement and cultivation, thereby taking into their own hands the control of sales for their own benefit, and purchased all the valuable lands at the minimum price of the government?

Interrogatory twenty-first. Have these speculators, after the public sales were closed, offered the lands so purchased by them for sale at augmented prices; and have these lands been purchased by persons attending the sales at the prices put on them by the speculators or their agents; and if so, what price per acre, estimating the highest and lowest qualities, did they receive for the lands so purchased?

Interrogatory twenty-second. Have these companies, or any of them, large bodies of land now in the market which they fraudulently purchased at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre; and if so, what amount of lands, according to the best estimate which may be made, yet remains undisposed of; and what is the price at which it is limited, including lands of the best quality and those of an inferior quality?

Interrogatory twenty-third. What would be a reasonable estimate of the loss sustained by the government at any public sales of lands within your district, in consequence of combinations of companies to purchase them at the minimum price?

Interrogatory twenty-fourth. Were the registers and receivers attending any such sale informed, or had knowledge of the existence of such combinations of companies, and their object; and did they aid them in their fraudulent purposes; or did they, having such knowledge, interpose, in their official conduct or otherwise, to prevent the accomplishment of the purposes for which they had combined?

Interrogatory twenty-fifth. Have the registers and receivers manifested favoritism in the sale of the public lands at private sale, where two or more persons made application to purchase any particular tract of land; and if so, what were the circumstances under which their partiality was so manifested?

Interrogatory twenty-sixth. Have the receivers of the public moneys, or any of them, been at any time detected in speculating on the funds paid into their offices by selling at a premium bank notes of the Bank of the United States, or other current bank paper, for bank notes not current at par, but which were made receivable for public lands, and their depositing these uncurrent bank notes in the deposit bank selected by the Secretary of the Treasury in lieu of the current notes thus sold at a premium?

Interrogatory twenty-seventh. Please state any and every other matter or thing material to this investigation, within your knowledge, as fully and at large as if thereto particularly interrogated?

The deposition of John Maxwell, of the city of Natchez, taken in the town of Port Gibson, county of Claiborne, and State of Mississippi, the 24th day of December, A. D. 1834, in the presence of Robertson A. Carloss, commissioner of the Senate of the United States for taking testimony, and also of James H. Murray, a justice of the peace of said county of Claiborne:

To interrogatory first, witness answers, I did.

To interrogatory second, witness says, he did not purchase or bid for lands at the public sales.

To interrogatory third, witness answers, he made no purchase.

To interrogatory fourth, witness makes same answer as above.

To interrogatory fifth, witness answers, that he made no bid at the sales of public lands, but says that he was connected with a company in whose behalf lands were purchased. He says further, that the company with whom he was connected, consisted of upwards of one hundred and fifty persons; among those who with himself constituted the company, he designates the names of Thomas G. Ellis, Robert J. Walker, Robert Jameson, of Alabama; Malcolm Gilchrist, of Alabama; Richard Anderson, Eli Driner, —— Glover, —— Bradford, —— Burnett, Isaac Lane, F. E. Plummer, Wm. Plummer, —— Govan, Wm. M. Beal, Wm. M. Gwin, and David W. Connelly. The company was formed at Chocchuma.

To interrogatory sixth, the witness answers, that the company was formed with the view of preventing competition in the bidding; and in the belief that the combination of purchasers would enable the members of the company to purchase on cheaper terms from persons who were members of the company, and who were the persons whose names are first designated above, were constituted agents to purchase for the company, and were called commissioners. One or another of the commissioners made all the purchases that were effected in behalf of the company. The company agreed with the settlers that they would not bid for settlements provided the settlers would not compete with the company in the purchase of other lands; many of the settlers were themselves members of the company; all persons, whether members of the company or settlers, were allowed to bid for lands, and in some instances did so; in most instances the settlements were purchased in by the commissioners of the company, and in a few days after transferred the purchase at cost to the settlers, and received remuneration.

To interrogatory seventh, witness says, he is unable to answer affirmatively or negatively.

To interrogatory eighth, witness answers, he knows not what number of acres were purchased by the company.

To interrogatory ninth, the witness answers entirely in the affirmative.

To interrogatory tenth, witness answers, that there were some instances of the receipts not being delivered by the receiver on the day of sale, but he knows of no such instance except in cases where the purchasers had made a deposit of their funds with him. The neglect seemed to be attributable to the press of business.

To interrogatory eleventh, witness says, that he does not know that they did.

To interrogatory twelfth, witness answers, that he did not know them to be concerned directly or indirectly in the company. He says that Mr. Sterling, the receiver, did in some instances bid for and purchase lands against the company.

To interrogatory thirteenth, witness states, that he knew of no such stipulation. He states that he arrived at the place of sales on the last day of the existence of the company as a company to purchase, though he was a member from the first. He states that Gwin, the register, did charge and receive one dollar for each transfer during the sales.

To interrogatory fourteenth, witness answers, that Wm. M. Gwin was a member of the company, bought lands of the company, he believes, and received his dividend of the profits on the sales by the company, which amounted to three hundred dollars on the thousand.

To interrogatory fifteenth, witness answers, not to his knowledge.

To interrogatory sixteenth, witness answers, not to his knowledge.

To interrogatory seventeenth, witness answers, not to his knowledge.

To interrogatory eighteenth, witness answers, not to his knowledge.

To interrogatory nineteenth, witness answers, not to his knowledge.

To interrogatory twentieth, witness answers, not to his knowledge.

To interrogatory twenty-first, witness states, that at Chocchuma the company, after the sales were over, set up at auction the lands which they had bought, but in the first instance they were put up at the sum which they had cost the company, and sold at the highest advance upon the cost, to any person who would bid; and if no advance was made on the cost, the land fell back to the company, and when they had thus offered all their lands they again set up the residue, either at cost or the government price, and he forgets which.

To interrogatory twenty-second, witness says, that the company of which he has spoken own no lands at this time. He states that there were sub-companies formed which bought of the main company, and are now owners of the land, and hold them in market at various prices.

To interrogatory twenty-third, witness says, he is unable to answer the interrogatory.

To interrogatory twenty-fourth, witness answers, that the officers of the land office at Chocchuma had knowledge of the existence of the main company, though he cannot say when they were informed of it. After the termination of the time of the duration of the main company, new companies were formed, when he heard colonel Gwin, the register, threaten to suspend the sales if they did not desist from such combinations.

To interrogatory twenty-fifth, witness answers, they have shown none to my knowledge.

To interrogatory twenty-sixth, witness answers, not to his knowledge.

To interrogatory twenty-seventh, witness says, he cannot state anything further than what he has said.

JOHN MAXWELL.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Claiborne County:

I, James H. Maury, a justice of the peace in and for the said county of Claiborne, do certify that John Maxwell, the witness whose name is subscribed to the foregoing deposition, was by me duly sworn, and that the foregoing deposition was taken down in my handwriting, as delivered by said witness, in answer to the interrogatories respectively. Given under my hand and seal this 24th December, 1834.

J. H. MAURY, J. P. [SEAL.]

The deposition of Henry T. Irish, of the town of Port Gibson, State of Mississippi, taken in said town on the 27th day of December, 1834, by Robertson A. Carloss, commissioner of the Senate of the United States for taking testimony, and also before James H. Maury, a justice of the peace of said county and State aforesaid.

The witness, being first duly sworn to make true answers to the interrogatories, deposeth as follows:

To interrogatory first, he answers, that he was at Chocchuma from the beginning to the termination of the sales of land by the government at that place.

To interrogatory second, he answers, that he has no recollection of making any purchase at the sales. He bought lands while there by entry, and also at the sales of a company and of individuals; and generally at the price of one dollar and twenty-five cents: for some he gave as much as five dollars per acre.

To interrogatory third, he answers, that he bought in partnership with H. Carpenter.

To interrogatory fourth, he answers, that the articles of partnership between himself and Carpenter do not now exist, that he knows of.

To interrogatory fifth, he says, that he does not remember that he made any bid for lands at the government sales.

To interrogatory sixth, he answers that there were large companies formed upon the ground with views of purchasing, as named in the interrogatory. The purchases in behalf of the company were commonly made by agents; but sometimes purchases were made by others of the company, who had not been designated as agents for that purpose. He understood that the lands desired by settlers were bid off by the agents of the company and transferred to the settlers, after the manner named in the interrogatory.

To interrogatory seventh, he says, he is not informed as to the facts named in the interrogatory.

To interrogatory eighth, he says, he does not know the number of acres bought by the company. The company made no division of lands.

To interrogatory ninth, he answers affirmatively.

To interrogatory tenth, he says, he is not fully informed as to the facts of the interrogatory, but thinks that payments were required on the morning after the sales, or on the evening of the days of sale.

To interrogatory eleventh, witness answers, that he knows of no payments by bills. He says he paid himself by checks on the Planters' Bank at Natchez.

To interrogatory twelfth, he answers, that he does not know that either of them were concerned in any way with the speculators, or in the purchases that were made by the companies.

To interrogatory thirteenth, he says, he never heard nor knew of any such application.

To interrogatory fourteenth, he says, he thinks William M. Gwin was a member of the company, but is not at all positive that he was.

To interrogatory fifteenth, witness answers, he does not know that they have.

To interrogatory sixteenth, he says, he does not know that they have.

To interrogatory seventeenth, he says, he does not know.

To interrogatory eighteenth, he says, he does not know that they have.

To interrogatory nineteenth, he says, he does not know that they have.

To interrogatory twentieth, he says, he does not know of any union of speculators for such purposes.

His idea of the motives of the combination is that they were formed for the purpose of avoiding the effects of competition.

To interrogatory twenty-first, he answers, that the company offered the lands purchased by them in the first place for the highest advance upon what they cost the company; and in the second place for what they would bring. The lands were sold by the companies at public auction.

To interrogatory twenty-second, he says, the company, of which the deponent is informed, at this time owns no land.

To interrogatory twenty-third, the deponent says, he is unable to answer the interrogatory.

To interrogatory twenty-fourth, he says, he does not know that the officers had any positive knowledge of the combination. He heard Gwin say that if any such combination came to his knowledge he would stop the sales.

To interrogatory twenty-fifth, he says, the conduct of the officers was entirely fair, so far as his knowledge extends.

To interrogatory twenty-sixth, he says, as to his own knowledge he cannot answer the interrogatory.

To interrogatory twenty-seventh, he answers, that he has stated all that he conceives to be material, so far as his information extends.

H. T. IRISH.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Claiborne County:

The undersigned, justice of the peace of the said county, certifies that Henry T. Irish was duly sworn to answer the interrogatories, and that his answers were taken down by the undersigned, and read to the witness respectively, and assented to by him, and subscribed before me this 27th day of December, 1834.

J. H. MAURY, J. P. [SEAL.]

The deposition of Dr. James P. Parker, of the town of Port Gibson, in the county of Claiborne and State of Mississippi, taken by Robertson A. Carloss, commissioner of the United States Senate, in the town of Port Gibson, and county and State aforesaid, and also in the presence of James H. Maury, Esq., a justice of the peace of said county and State aforesaid, and sworn to and subscribed by the said deponent.

To interrogatory first, witness says, he arrived at Chocchuma a few days previous to the close of the sales, and remained there till the termination.

To interrogatory second, witness says, he purchased at public sales about four hundred and fifty acres of land at prices ranging between two and ten dollars.

To interrogatory third, he answers, that he bought in partnership with J. B. Thrasher.

To interrogatory fourth, he answers, there was no article of agreement in writing; the terms were equal interest in advancements and products.

To interrogatory fifth, he says, he had nothing to do with any company of speculators in purchasing the lands hereinbefore mentioned. He states that he bought no lands in behalf of a company, but that he bought about six hundred acres of a company of which he was himself a member.

To interrogatory sixth, he says, as to the company in which witness was concerned, he answers affirmatively.

To interrogatory seventh, witness says, he is unable to answer.

To interrogatory eighth, witness says, he knows nothing of the principal company; hewas a member of two or three sub-companies, who closed their transactions daily. As to the quantity purchased of government by the company, and as to the mode of division, he is uninformed, except that the companies with which he was connected did, on the evening of each day, sell at private company auction the lands which they had bought on the same day of government.

To interrogatory ninth, he answers, no further than in the next preceding answer.

To interrogatory tenth, he answers, that as far as he knows, payments were made to the receiver on the day of the purchase, or next morning, except in cases where the officer was a depository of funds of purchaser.

To interrogatory eleventh, never to the knowledge of the witness.

To interrogatory twelfth, not to knowledge of witness.

To interrogatory thirteenth, cannot say there was any stipulation. S. Gwin charged to transfer on each certificate one dollar.

To interrogatory fourteenth, he was, and purchased some land at the company's sale. I know of no allotments made by the companies.

To interrogatory fifteenth, never to my knowledge, except by charging one dollar for the transfer of each and every certificate of land.

To interrogatory sixteenth, never to my knowledge.

To interrogatory seventeenth, never to my knowledge.

To interrogatory eighteenth, never to my knowledge.

To interrogatory nineteenth, answer as above.

To interrogatory twentieth, answer as above.

To interrogatory twenty-first, answer as above.

To interrogatory twenty-second, answer as above.

To interrogatory twenty-third, cannot estimate the loss sustained by government, but presume that much of the land would have sold for a higher price than the minimum, if competition had not been prevented by the formation of companies; and also believe that much low and worthless land was sold which otherwise would not have been sold.

To interrogatory twenty-fourth, they knew of the existence of companies for the purchase of public lands, and did interfere as far as I know.

To interrogatory twenty-fifth, never to my knowledge.

To interrogatory twenty-sixth, not to my knowledge.

To interrogatory twenty-seventh, further the deponent knoweth not.

JAMES P. PARKER.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Claiborne County:

The undersigned justice of the peace of said county of Claiborne doth hereby certify, that the foregoing answers were made by said witness, and subscribed by him; and that the answers were taken down partly in the handwriting of the witness, and partly in that of said justice, and that the witness was duly sworn.

Given under my hand and seal this 27th December, 1834.

J. H. MAURY, J. P.

Replies or answers of David Slay to interrogatories propounded by R. A. Carloss, commissioner, &c., on 22d December, 1834:

Answer to first interrogatory. I was not.

Answer to eighteenth interrogatory. George B. Dameron, late receiver at Clinton or Mount Salus, refused to permit me to enter a piece of land, and pointed out a few small dots or spots, made apparently by a pen, and which Mr. Dameron admitted he had made; and further, that said land was not entered at that time, but was entered some few months afterwards by a neighbor of mine.

Answer to twenty-seventh interrogatory. Very shortly after the passage of an act of Congress, authorizing individuals to enter tracts of land in forty acre tracts, I applied for the entry of the north ½ of the west ½ of the northeast ¼ of section 12, township 7, and in range 3 west; and George B. Dameron, the then receiver of public moneys at Mount Salus, (and at whose office the entry was to be made) peremptorily refused to allow me to do so; and said land was afterwards entered as stated in the above answer. Further: Mr. Gwin, the register at said office, insisted on giving me an application for said land, and in the presence of Mr. Dameron; but Mr. Dameron still persisting in not letting me enter it, I did not take out an application.

The examination of Stewart McRaven, of the county of Hinds and State of Mississippi, taken by Robertson A. Carloss, commissioner of the United States Senate for taking depositions, and also in the presence of the honorable James Scott, judge of the second judicial district of the State.

Witness answers to the first interrogatory in the following manner: I was.

To interrogatory second, witness answers, he did not purchase any lands at said sales; and answers in the negative to all interrogatories until the seventeenth.

Answer to seventeenth interrogatory. This deponent was called upon, and did loan to a Mr. John Long a small sum of money, which Long stated was to pay the interest due to Mr. George B. Dameron, then receiver of public moneys at Mount Salus, Mi., due, or so stated by said Long to have accrued, on a note given for the entry of a piece of land. Further, that said Dameron, receiver as aforesaid, charged said Long, as by him stated, interest at the rate of sixty per centum per annum.

To all interrogatories up to the twenty-sixth, witness answers in the negative.

Answer to twenty-sixth interrogatory. Geo. B. Dameron, late receiver at Mount Salus, stated to deponent that he had loaned to Dr. Jacob B. Morgan the sum of five hundred dollars of the funds of the government, but he knows not of his making similar loans to any one else.

Furthermore the deponent saith not.

LAND CLAIMS IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 3, 1835.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 7, 1835.

SIR: Having received the report of the recorder of land titles and commissioners appointed under the provisions of the act of the 9th of July, 1832, and the acts supplementary thereto, for the final adjustment of land claims in Missouri, upon the claims therein, numbered from 143 to 255, inclusive, which, in their opinion, are entitled to be placed in the first class specified in the said act of 1832, and as it would have been impracticable for this office to have prepared duplicate copies thereof for the two Houses of Congress within a reasonable time, I have this day transmitted the original report to the Senate, with a request that it be placed in the possession of the House of Representatives whenever the Senate shall have acted thereon.

It being very important that this office should be in possession of the originals of all the reports upon private land claims, I have to request that the report above mentioned may be returned after the final action of Congress thereon.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

The SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES, St. Louis, Missouri, December 5, 1834.

SIR: In pursuance of the act of Congress entitled "An act for the final adjustment of private land claims in Missouri," approved the 9th day of July, 1832, and the acts supplementary thereto, the undersigned recorder and commissioners have the honor to make report to you, to the end that it be laid before Congress, of their proceedings under and by virtue of the acts aforesaid.

In the report now submitted, the board have included only such claims as they considered to be entitled to confirmation, and consequently have placed them in the first class, reserving their decisions upon those claims which to them have appeared destitute of merit, for their final report, having adopted the course of proceeding followed by this board in its report transmitted through you to Congress at its last session.

In deciding upon the claims herewith reported, the undersigned have, in pronouncing them entitled to confirmation, adopted the principles laid down in the report of last year, and have endeavored to make such application of them to the respective cases, as comported with reason and justice. They have the more unhesitatingly adopted and applied those principles, inasmuch as they seem to the undersigned to have been fully ratified, adopted and acted upon by the highest judicial tribunal known to the United States. In proof of which, the board beg leave to refer the whole current of decisions made by the Supreme Court, on the claims brought before it by appeal from the courts in Florida.

These decisions have been attentively read and examined by the undersigned, and, in their view, would entirely justify the confirmation of the claims included in the report now made to you.

As in the previous report, the board have presented each case in a tabular form, and numbered them in the order of their decision, from No. 143 to No. 255, and forward them herewith, together with the translations of the concessions and surveys. The undersigned avail themselves of this opportunity to observe that, in consequence of the minute investigation which they have found it their duty to give to each case, and in consequence, also, of the difficulty of discovering and applying the evidence on the respective claims, scattered as it frequently is over voluminous and confusedly arranged records, they have not been able to complete, in time for the present session of Congress, their examination of a greater number of claims, which, under the acts of Congress, are subject to their decision, than that herewith submitted.

The reörganization of the board, consequent upon the appointment of Lewis F. Linn, Esq., to the Senate of the United States, and the resignation of Albert G. Harrison, Esq., did not take place until the month of June last, since which time they have been assiduously employed in the execution of the duties assigned to them, except during an interval of a few weeks, when the board did not sit, owing to the fatal indisposition of the wife of the recorder, and while one of the members of the board was laboring under a severe and dangerous illness.

Feeling, as we do, great solicitude that strict justice should be done to all concerned in the unconfirmed land claims in this State, as well as those in Arkansas, and believing that it is of great importance to the State and Territory, and to the interest of the United States, to have them speedily settled, we hope and believe that Congress will act with promptnesss and justice in relation to them.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

No. 145.—JEAN BAPTISTE GAMACHE, SR., CLAIMING 1,050 ARPENS.

Number.	Name of original claimant.	Quantity.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
145	Jean Baptiste Gamache, sr.	Arps. 1,050	Settlement right.	.....	James Mackay, deputy surveyor, 15th November, 1805; below the mouth of Maramec river, district of St. Louis.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

NOVEMBER 19, 1811.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Auguste Gamache and John Baptiste Gamache, claiming 1,050 arpens of land situate on the Mississippi, below the mouth of Maramec river, district of St. Louis, produce record of a plat of survey, dated 15th November, 1805, certified 22d February, 1806.

Alexander McNair, claiming 525 arpens of this tract, as assignee of the sheriff of St. Louis district, who sold the same as the property of John Baptiste Gamache, produces record of a deed from sheriff to McNair, dated 4th February, 1807.

It appears to the board, from the rough minutes of April 3, 1806, that testimony was taken in this claim, and not entered on the fair minutes; and the same being within the recollection of two of the commissioners, to wit, John C. B. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, it is thereupon agreed to receive testimony on this day.

Auguste Chouteau, sworn: Says that he knows the tract claimed; that in 1776, or near that time, the commandant of St. Louis thought proper that a ferry should be established on Maramec, that a regular intercourse should be kept up between St. Louis and St. Genevieve; that John Baptiste Gamache, father of claimants, hearing of this, agreed to undertake the same; that the commandant, whom this deponent believes to be Cruzat, acceded to the proposals of Gamache, to wit: that he should keep a ferry, and hold land at the said place. Deponent cannot say anything as to quantity of said land. Said Gamache immediately went and settled on said laid, cleared land, built a house, and cultivated thereon, and continued to cultivate and inhabit until 1780, when he was ordered away by the commandant, on account of Indian disturbances; that said Gamache returned to the place claimed, one or two years after, as soon as tranquility was restored, and continued thereon four or five years longer, until the death of his wife; that, about 1790, the sons of said Gamache, to wit, the claimants, inhabited and cultivated said land, time about during eight years.

Charles Sanguinette and John Baptiste Prevencher, sworn, depose to the same as the foregoing witness.

The board order that this land be surveyed agreeably to the possession, provided it does not exceed 1,050 arpens; survey at expense of the United States, and to be returned in ten days. See minutes, No. 5, page 423.

JANUARY 6, 1812.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Auguste Gamache and John Baptiste Gamache, claiming 1,050 arpens of land. See book No. 5, page 423. It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted, because the survey which has been ordered by the board contains a much greater quantity of land than is actually claimed, and also because, from the notes contained in the report of survey, it does not appear that the lines of said survey run with boundaries of ten years' standing before the year 1803. See book No. 5, page 555.

April 20, 1833.

A. G. Harrison, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Nicholas and Lovis Gamache, heirs of Jean Baptiste Gamache, sr., deceased, claiming, under settlement right, 1,050 arpens of land at the mouth of the Maramec. See record book B, page 211; minutes, No. 5, pages 423 and 555.

John Baptiste Vien, duly sworn, says that he was acquainted with John Baptiste Gamache, sr., the grandfather of Nicholas and Louis Gamache; that said John Baptiste Gamache cultivated a tract of land on the right bank of the Mississippi, at the mouth of the Maramec; about fifty years ago; that his children inhabited and cultivated the same during the Spanish government, and that they left it on account of the sickness of their families, and that his grandchildren, Nicholas and Louis, with their families, still reside on it, and have, for the last seven or eight years, resided on it; that he, the deponent, found them (the Gamaches) in possession and cultivation of the said tract of land, when he, the deponent, first came to the country, which was about the year 1783 or '84. He further says that John Baptiste Gamache, sr., had five or six children; that Auguste Gamache and John Baptiste Gamache, jr., sons of John Baptiste Gamache, sr., lived on the land with their families. Auguste had a wife and four children, and John Baptiste, jr., a wife and six or seven children.

John Baptiste Maurice Chatillon, duly sworn, says that he knew John Baptiste Gamache, sr., in 1780; that he lived on the tract above spoken of, at that time; that, in 1782, Gamache brought his wife to St, Louis, sick, where she died, and afterwards Gamache returned to live on the land; that Gamache, sr., died about the year 1800, and after his death, his sons, Auguste and John Baptiste Gamache, jr., lived on and cultivated the same place, and that Nicholas and Louis have been living there ever since with their families. See No. 6, page 157.

October 7, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Jean Baptiste Gamache, senior, claiming, by his legal representatives, 1,050 arpens of land. See book No. 6, page 157.

The board are unanimously of opinion, this claim of 1,050 arpens of land ought to be granted to the legal representatives of the said Jean Baptiste Gamache, senior, according to the possession; reference being had to the second sections of the acts of 1805 and 1807. See book No. 7, page 12.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John McFerren, assignee of Andrew Kenney, assignee of Jacob Odam and James Bradshaw, claiming 800 arpens of land, situate on Odam's creek, district of St. Genevieve, produces notice to the recorder.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. See minutes, No. 5, page 467.

A. G. Harrison, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Jacob Odam, by Andy Rinney and George Forquer, claiming 800 arpens of land, under settlement right, situated on the creek commonly called Odam's creek, on the Mississippi, opposite Wood island, including the big spring and rush bottom, formerly presented to the board in the name of John McFerren. See minutes, No. 5, page 467.

Joseph Gerrard duly sworn says, that he has been in the country about fifty-eight years; that he was well acquainted with Jacob Odam; that he went with said Odam in the year 1777 or 1778 to the commandant at St. Genevieve, by the name of Cartebonne, and that said Odam asked the commandant for a concession, but the commandant told Odam that he could not then give him a concession, but told him to go and settle and improve a place, and that this would be the best concession; that Odam did, after this, go immediately, and settle and improve a place, usually called Wood island, from being opposite or nearly opposite that island; that he saw said Odam working and improving said place, and that said Odam raised a crop on said land; that, after being there a while, Mrs. Odam took sick and died, leaving one child, a daughter, by the name of Mindy; that some months after the death of Mrs. Odam, Odam took sick and died; that both were buried on the place; that their daughter Mindy grew up and married; that the place, after the death of Odam, has never been cultivated; that from where he settled to the Mississippi is about a half or three-quarters of a mile, which space formed a part of his claim, as witness thinks; that Odam settled about a quarter of a mile above the big spring, on the creek called Odam's creek. No. 147.—JOSESH GERRARD AND PATRICK FLEMING, CLAIMING 840 ARPENS.

To Don Francis Vallé, captain and commandant, civil and military, of the post of St. Genevieve, of Illinois:

Joseph Garret has the honor to represent to you that he had obtained, in the year 1790, a concession for a tract of land, situate on the Maramec, otherwise called the Grande rivière, below the river Platte, at the distance of about one and a half leagues from the said river; that having lost the copy of the said concession, he has the honor to pray you to be willing to search for the said concession in the archives of this post, and to give him a copy of the same.

JOSEPH GERRARD.

ST. GENEVIEVE, September 7, 1799.

ST. GENEVIEVE, September 8, 1799.

In consequence of the request of the petitioner, we annex here below, the copy of the original documents, deposited in the archives of this post.

FRANCISCO VALLE.

SIR: The petitioners have the honor to represent to you, that they would wish to clear and cultivate a tract of land, situated on the second fork of the Grand river of Maramec, containing one league square, one league and a half below the river Platte, and about twelve leagues from this village. This being considered, be pleased, sir, to grant them the concession of the said tract, in order that they and their heirs may enjoy the same, and you will do justice.

JOSEPH GERRARD.
And one cross for Larran Maccagné's mark.

ST. GENEVIEVE, June 27, 1790.

Be the present petition presented to Don Manuel Perez, lieutenant governor of this part, in order that he be pleased to give his orders on the subject.

PEYROUX DE LA COUDRENIERE.

ST. GENEVIEVE, 27*th June*, 1790.

Captain Henry Peyroux, commandant of St. Genevieve, may grant to each of the petitioners five arpens of land in front by forty arpens in depth, in the place where they solicit, of the lands belonging to his Majesty's domain, in order that they may be able to establish themselves as they desire, and they shall be bound and governed by the laws of Spain as subjects of his Catholic Majesty, whom God protect.

MANUEL PEREZ.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, 7*th July*, 1790.

We, Don Henry Peyroux, captain of infantry, commandant, civil and military, of the post of St. Genevieve of Illinois, in consequence of the orders of the lieutenant governor of this part of Illinois, do grant, in fee simple, to Messrs. Laurent Maccagné, Joel Maccagné, brothers, and to Joseph Gerrard, sr., and Patrick Fleming, jr., of eighteen years of age, the quantity of seven arpens of land in front, to each of them, by thirty arpens in depth, in the place designated on the petition on the other side; which tracts of land shall be taken in a body, without being separated one from another, and they shall be liable to the repairs of the public roads; are to be established in one year from this day, and, on the contrary, to be re-united to the King's domain.

PEYROUX DE LA COUDRENIERE.

A true copy, compared with the original remaining in the archives of this post.

FRANCISCO VALLE.

ST. GENEVIEVE, September 8, 1799.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of this province:

Joseph Gerrard, sr., and Patrick Fleming, his stepson, have the honor to represent to you that, by virtue of the original documents deposited in the archieves of St. Genevieve, of which a copy, certified by Mr. François Vallé, is here annexed, they had obtained jointly with Messrs. Laurent Maccagné, who died on the American side, in 1800, and Joel Maccagné, his brother, by the orders of the lieutenant governor, Don Manuel Perez, a concession for a tract of land of seven arpens in front, to each of them, by thirty arpens in depth, or twenty-eight arpens in front, by the said depth of thirty arpens, making in all, a superficie of 840 arpens, situated in the place designated in said title. This same land was established in the term of one year and a day, conformably to the time fixed by the law, and has been cultivated during more than three years, when the incursions of the Indians were the only cause which determined the petitioners—many others having been obliged to do the same—to abandon the said land until more quiet times. The petitioners do attest to you, each serving the other mutually as witness, that Laurent Maccagné, who died on the American side, as it is mentioned here above, did voluntarily and gratuitously, some time before his death, abandon his rights on the fourth part of said concession, and that as Joel Maccagné, his brother, is gone since several years, without any one being able to know where he resides, the petitioners presume to hope of your justice that, on account of the possibility which exists now of establishing insulated plantations with security, you will be pleased to order the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana to measure and deliver to them his certificate of survey of the said land, in order to enable them to prove the legality of their property, and that they may, with their primitive title in support, solicit the ratification of the intendant general of these provinces.

JOSEPH GERRARD.
PATRICK FLEMING.

ST. GENEVIEVE, 10*th September*, 1799.

We do inform the lieutenant governor that the property of the land claimed by Messrs. Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming is proven by the copy, here annexed, of the original documents deposited in the archives of this post; that the land has been established in the term prescribed by the law, and inhabited during more than three years; that the incursions of the Indians have been the only cause which obliged the proprietors to abandon it, in order to wait for more peaceful times; that the petitioners have always inhabited this post, and that their character is too well known to us not to give faith to what they say of the abandonment made to them by Lauret Maccagné, before his death, of his part in the said land. It is also very well known to us that the above-named Joel Maccagné, brother of the deceased, left this country soon after the establishment of the said land, which facts, in my opinion, give to the petitioners the right to pretend to the whole of the said land.

FRANCISCO VALLE.

ST. GENEVIEVE, 10*th September*, 1799.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, September 25, 1799.

By virtue of the copies of the original documents remaining in the archives of St. Genevieve, said copies certified by the commandant, Don Francisco Vallé, and in consequence of the preceding memorial of Messrs. Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming, and of the information given by the above-named commandant, the surveyor of the Upper Louisiana, Don Antoine Soulard, shall put them in possession of the land of which they claim the property, conforming himself to the tenor of the title of concession which has been delivered to them in St. Genevieve, under date of 17th July, 1790, by captain Don Henrique Peyroux, then commandant of that place, as attested by the order given to that effect, under date of 7th of the same month and year, by Don Manuel Perez, who was then lieutenant governor of these settlements; and after executing all the operations of survey, the documents shall be forwarded to the intendancy general of these provinces, in order to obtain the title of concession in due form.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that on the 28th of September, last year, (by virtue of the foregoing decree of Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor of these settlements,) I went on the land of Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming, in order to survey the same, according to his demand, and other documents; said land containing eight hundred and forty arpens in superficie. This measurement was made in presence of the proprietors, with the perch of Paris, of eighteen feet in length, conformably to the custom adopted in this province of Louisiana. The said tract of land is situated at about twenty-six miles and a half west-northwest of the post of St. Genevieve, bounded on its four sides by vacant lands of the royal domain. And in order to make it known to all whom it may concern, I do give the present, with the foregoing figurative plat, on which are designated the dimensions and the natural and artificial boundaries of said land.

ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 10, 1800.

DECEMBER 24, 1811.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Rufus Easton and James Bruff, assignees of Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming, claiming eight hundred and forty arpens of land situate on the second fork of the Grand river, district of St. Genevieve, comprehending and including the Mine-a-Joe, produce a certified copy of an order from Manuel Perez, lieutenant governor, to Peyroux de la Coudreniere, commandant, to grant said tract, dated 7th July, 1790; a certified copy of a concession from Peyroux de la Coudreniere, commandant, to Joseph Gerrard, père, Patrick Fleming, fils, Joel Macagné, and Laurent Macagné, to seven arpens by thirty to each of them, dated 17th July, 1790; an order of survey from Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor, to Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming, for eight hundred and forty arpens, stating the aforesaid concession from Peyroux, commandant, in consequence of the same not having been surveyed, dated September 25, 1799; a transfer from Patrick Fleming to claimants, dated 14th September, 1805; a transfer from Joseph Gerrard to Rufus Easton, dated 12th December, 1804; a plat of survey of eight hundred and forty arpens, dated September 28, 1799, certified January 10, 1800; an acknowledgment, signed by Rufus Easton and James Bruff, and dated November 15, 1805, by which it appears that said claimants are equally concerned in said tract.

The testimony of James Kieth and Ezekiel Eastridge, stated, in the report of the agent, to have been taken on the 2d December, 1807, and copied by the said agent from the rough minutes, which must be understood from the rough minutes of the board, is not deemed legal evidence, inasmuch as the same was ordered by the board not to be transcribed, and was not transcribed, for the following reasons: that the board had established a rule not to receive evidence partially, but to receive all the testimony at one time, unless, from the peculiar situation of the parties, the testimony offered could not be produced again; in that case, the same was attested on the rough minutes, by the signature of a majority of the commissioners. The object of the rule was, generally, not to let the testimony open to be improved and enlarged by the parties, the board conceiving that this opportunity might have been greatly abused. It is the opinion of a majority of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. Frederick Bates, commissioner, forbears giving an opinion. See minutes No. 5, page 537.

MAY 20, 1833.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming, by their legal representatives, Rufus Easton, and the heirs of James Bruff, claiming eight hundred and forty arpens of land situate in the district of St. Genevieve, on the waters of a fork of Maramec, called Big river, (see record book E, pages 331 and 332; minutes No. 5, page 537,) produce a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated September, 25, 1799; also a plat of survey by Antoine Soulard, dated January 10, 1800; also a paper purporting to be a copy of a concession referred to in the original concession here produced, and certified by François Vallé, late commandant of St. Genevieve.

M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of Carlos D. Delassus; that the signature to the plat of survey is in the proper handwriting of A. Soulard; and that the signature to the certified copy of a concession is in the proper handwriting of François Vallé. See minutes, book No. 6, page 167.

JUNE 28, 1833.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

In the case of Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming, claiming eight hundred and forty arpens of land, (see page 167, book No. 6,) the following testimony was taken in St. Genevieve, before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

Personally appeared before L. F. Linn, (one of the commissioners appointed for the final adjustment of private land claims in Missouri,) Baptiste Vallé, aged about seventy-two years, who deposes and says that he was well acquainted with Patrick Fleming and Joseph Gerrard, sr., and knows that they were inhabitants long before the change of government to the United States. Deponent further states that he always heard that said Fleming and Gerrard had a concession for land under the Spanish government, and they located the same on Flat river, a branch of Big river, in the former district of St. Genevieve, but does not recollect the precise place of their survey or location.

No. 148.—Daniel Griffith, claiming 600 arpens.

Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieut. governor of Upper Louisiana:

Sir: Daniel Griffith has the honor to represent to you that he would wish to establish himself in the upper part of this province, where he has been residing for some time; therefore, the petitioner applies to your goodness, praying that you may be pleased to grant him a tract of land of 600 arpens in superficie, to be taken on the vacant lands of the King's domain, in the place which will appear most convenient to the interest of your petitioner, who presumes to expect this favor of your justice, having his father, since a long time, settled in this country.

A. G. Harrison, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Daniel Griffith, claiming 600 arpens of land, (see book D, pages 111 and 112; minutes, No. 3, page 308; No. 4, page 397,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated April 18, 1801; also a plat and certificate of survey, signed by John Ferry, date somewhat defaced, and the affidavit of said Ferry before Thomas F. Reddick, justice of the peace.

M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says that the signature of Carlos Dehault Delassus is in the proper handwriting of the same; that the signatures to the survey and affidavit are in the proper handwriting of the said John Ferry; and that the signature to the certificate is in the proper handwriting of Thomas F. Reddick. See book No. 6, page 158.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of Daniel Griffith, claiming 600 arpens of land, see book No. 6, page 158, the following affidavit is transcribed by order of the board:

TERRITORY OF MISSOURI, County and Township of St. Louis:

This will attest and make known to whom it may concern, that the annexed plat and certificate, made for Daniel Griffith, for 600 arpens of land, marked in the margin thus, (J. H. B.,) was made by me at the time it bears date; that I was then a deputy surveyor under major Antoine Soulard, surveyor general for the Territory of Missouri, and that I returned the said plat and certificate to him, which he rejected and refused to receive on the ground that it interfered with the village common of the village of Portage des Sioux; after which I delivered it to Mr. Griffith, and do now recognize it to be the same I made, as above stated.

No. 149.—VICTOR LAGOTERIE, CLAIMING 800 ARPENS.

Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana:

SIR: Victor Lagoterie has the honor to represent to you that he would wish to make an establishment in the upper part of this colony, where he has been residing for a very long time; therefore, sir, the petitioner prays you to grant to him a tract of land of 800 arpens in superficie, to be taken on the vacant lands of the King's domain, at the place called the little prairie of the Bay de Charles, situated on the Mississippi; favor which the petitioner presumes to expect of your justice, or, if it cannot be, (in the place mentioned,) then on Salt river.

VR. LAGOTERIE.

ST. LOUIS, February 24, 1800.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, February 28, 1800.

Whereas, it is notorious that the petitioner possesses more than the means and number of hands necessary to obtain the concession which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any other person; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in a vacant place of the royal domain; which being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to the party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of land of 690 arpens in superficie was measured, the lines run and bounded in favor and in presence of Victor Lagoterie, (said tract being part of a concession of 800 arpens granted in my (his) favor, as appears by the decree below my (his) memorial.) Said land was measured with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet, lineal measure of the same city, conformably to the agrarian measure of this province, and is situated about 30 miles west of the Mississippi, and at 130 miles northwest of St. Louis. It is bounded east by Salt river, northwest, northeast, southeast, and southwest by vacant lands belonging to the royal domain. This survey and measurement was done without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7 deg. 30 min. east, as appears by the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, the courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. The said survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal treasury, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, under date of February 28, 1800, here annexed; and in order that all what is here above mentioned may be available, I do give the present, with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, Mr. James Rankin, under date of 29th December, 1803, who signed on the minutes, to which I certify.

ANTONIO SOULARD, S. G.

ST LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 20, 1804.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of 110 arpens in superficie was measured, the lines run and bounded in favor and in presence of Victor Lagoterie, (it being part of 800 arpens granted in my (his) favor.) Said tract was measured with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet, lineal measure of the same city, according to the agrarian measure of this province, and is situated at about 130 miles north of St. Louis, bounded north and northwest by vacant lands of the royal domain, northeast and east by the river Mississippi, south by lands of Charles Fremon Delauriere, and southwest by lands of the royal domain. Said survey and measurement was done without regard to the variation of the needle, which is seven degrees thirty minutes east, as appears by the preceding figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. Said survey was taken by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal treasury, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, under date of 28th of February, 1800, here annexed; and in order that all what is here above mentioned may be available, I do give the present, with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, Mr. James Rankin, under date of 29th December, 1803, who signed the minutes, to which I certify.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

St. Louis, August 20, 1813.

Victor Lagoterie (legal representative) claiming 800 arpens of land, county of St. Charles, near Fort Mason, on the western shore of Salt river. Francis Reed, duly sworn, says that he saw claimant on the premises, well established, before the cession to the United States of this territory. He then had a house, corn-field, &c., and was working at the Saline; he saw claimant still in possession of the premises about the year 1808. The salt spring worked by claimant is 12 or 15 miles from this tract.

Joseph Brazeau, duly sworn, says that claimant was in possession of this tract 12 or 13 years ago, at which time witness saw his people making hay, and cultivating a field of corn of four or five arpens. The Saline worked by claimant is distant from the premises 12 or 15 miles.

Denis Julien, duly sworn, says that claimant settled on this tract when Charles D. Delassus was lieutenant governor of the province, in 1800, or 1801; believes it was the former year; believes he remained on the place constantly until about two or three years ago; knows that claimant constantly cultivated the land, and made salt. See recorder's (Bates') Minutes, page 51.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Victor Lagoterie, by his legal representatives, claiming 800 arpens of land, to wit, 690 arpens on Salt river, and 110 arpens on the Mississippi, (see record book F, pages 107 and 108; recorder's minutes, page 51,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated 28th February, 1800; also two plats of surveys, one for 690 arpens, and the other for 110 arpens, both taken on the 29th December, 1803, and certified by Soulard, on the 20th January, 1804.

M. P. De Luc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of C. D. Delassus, and the signatures to the two plats of surveys are in the proper handwriting of Antonio Soulard. See minutes, No. 6, page 167.

October 8, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of Victor Lagoterie, claiming 800 arpens of land, see book No. 6, page 167, the following testimony was taken by A. G. Harrison, late commissioner, under a resolution of the board passed the 13th May, 1833:

Etienne Quenelle, duly sworn, says that he knew said Lagoterie very well; that he lived on a tract of land on the banks of the Mississippi, above the mouth of Salt river, where he made salt; that, at the time, he, witness, knew him living there; was under the Spanish government; that said Lagoterie had a house and garden on said land; also a small field near the prairie, as witness was informed.

Pierre Palardi, being duly sworn, says that having read the testimony of Etienne Quenelle, as above, and that being well acquainted, personally, with all the facts, makes the above testimony his own, in relation to all that is above testified to.

Peter Teague, being duly sworn, says that he was acquainted with a place called Lagoterie's lick, on the banks of the Mississippi river, above the mouth of Salt river, at the lower end of a little prairie; which said lick was not far from Fort Mason. Witness always understood that Victor Lagoterie's claim included said lick, and that Lagoterie had made salt there. See book No. 7, page 21.

Manuel Lisa, claiming under Amiot. See book No. 4, page 440. A majority of the board declare that they would have granted this claim, under the provisions of the second section of the act of the 3d March, 1807, had it been found not to have exceeded 600 arpens. John B. C. Lucas, commissioner, makes the same remarks as in the claim of V. Bouis (page 561), to wit: John B. C. Lucas, commissioner, declares that he cannot give an absolute vote, under the present circumstances, upon this claim, inasmuch as the board has heretofore ordered a survey to be made for the purpose of ascertaining the quantity, and inasmuch as the same reasons which induced the board to make said order previous to the decision of the claim still exists, and the said order remains in force, not having been rescinded. He further remarks that the claim ought to be granted, without being able to say, at present, what quantity. See minutes, book No. 5, page 561.

No. 151.—Mathurin Bouvet, claiming six arpens square.

Don Manuel Perez, &c.

Cognizance being taken of the statement made in the memorial presented by Mathurin Bouvet, an inhabitant residing in the town of St. Charles of Missouri, jurisdiction of St. Louis, dated 7th instant, I have granted, and do grant, to him, in fee simple, for him, his heirs, or others who may represent his right, the six arpens square of land which he solicits, considering that he has already established it in part, having built his house on said lot, and being a resident of the said town of St. Charles. Said piece of land is situated on the outskirts of said town, bounded on the north by the lot of Bivi Renau, and on the other sides by the royal domain, fronting the river Missouri; and it shall be liable to the public charges, and others which it may please his Majesty to impose.

Board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: The Hon. John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose.

John Cook, assignee of John Vallet, claiming four hundred arpens of land in the district of St. Charles.

John Vallet, sworn, says that he has no interest in this claim; that he, witness, is the father of seven children, and improved said land in the beginning of the year 1800, and worked thereon until May, 1803, when he sold the same to claimant, and resided on the same during the time of raising his crops, with his wife and children; that after having been one year on the land, he applied to Don Carlos Delassus, lieutenant governor, for permission to settle; said lieutenant governor told him (deponent) to take his plough and go on with his work, and nobody should disturb him.

Antoine Marechal, sworn, says that he was on the place claimed in the spring of 1803; then saw cornstalks in a field which appeared to have been cultivated the year before, and also at same time saw about three-fourths of an acre ploughed round the houses for a garden: that he, deponent, inhabited and cultivated the land claimed the last year, 1807. Laid over for decision. See book No. 3, page 215.

John Vallet, by his legal representatives, claiming four hundred arpens of land. See record book B, page 214; minutes, No. 1, page 510; No. 3, pages 69 and 219, and No. 4, page 224.

MAY 23, 1833.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of John Vallet, claiming four hundred arpens of land. See page 169 of this book, No. 6.

Albert Tison, duly sworn, says that in 1803, about the middle of December, he staid one night at Mr. Cook's, who had purchased Vallet's improvement, and said Cook had then a large field and cabin; that the place appeared to have been settled several years before the deponent saw it; that said Cook had his family residing along with him, and lived on said place until his death, which happened five or six years afterwards. See No. 6, page 171.

OCTOBER 8, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of John Vallet, claiming four hundred arpens of land, see No. 6, page 169, the following testimony was taken by A. G. Harrison, late commissioner, under a resolution passed by the board on May 13, 1833.

Jean Prieux, being duly sworn, says that about thirty-four years ago, the said John Vallet, alias Bourbonné, made an improvement near the Cave spring, in St. Charles county; that his claim included said spring; that he had a house on it, and some ploughed ground; that he had a wife and five children at the time mentioned.

Pierre Quebec, alias Violet, being duly sworn, says that, about thirty-three or thirty-four years ago, John Vallet settled and improved a place, including the Cave spring, in St. Charles county; that he had a house and field on the said place at the time mentioned.

The following testimony was taken by J. S. Mayfield, commissioner:

Charles Denné produced and sworn, states on his oath, that, in the year 1801, John Vallet was in possession of the above-named tract of land; that said Vallet was a man of family; that he erected and built on said tract of land a house, and had in cultivation about six acres of ground; the same was not enclosed, as, at the time, the St. Charles commons were enclosed, and cattle could not get to it; and, further, that the same tract always went by the name of the Cave Spring tract, there being upon the same a large cave spring. Deponent further states that about two years afterwards the said Vallet sold the same tract and improvement to John Cook, whose son-in-law lived on the same about one year, under

Cook, and whose name was Antoine Marechal; and deponent further states that the said Vallet lived in the house on said place, when there at work; and that Cook, above named, continued to reside in this country where he died; and that the tract mentioned above was surveyed after Cook became the purchaser, by John Harvey, and deponent assisted in making said survey.

Sworn to this 3d day of July, 1834, at St. Charles.

J. S. MAYFIELD, Commissioner.

Joseph Voisard, sworn, on his oath, states, by his interpreter, Charles Denny, who was sworn a true interpretation to give, that, about thirty-five or thirty-six years ago, Vallet made a small improvement on the above tract of land; that he built a house on the same, and enclosed a garden spot near the Cave spring; that Vallet lived there while at work. Deponent further states, he was not at the sale, but understood Vallet sold the same tract of land to John Cook, who put his son-in-law, Marechal, mentioned above, to live on it, which he thinks was after the change of government.

Gabriel Latreille produced and sworn, states that, in the year 1802, he knows of Mr. Vallet cultivating the land alluded to above; that he had in cultivation two or three arpens of land, and built a house upon the same; and deponent further states that he, Vallet, cultivated the same for about two years, and sold to John Cook, who occupied and possessed the same until sold under execution by the sheriff; and deponent further states that the tract, as he understood, amounted to 400 or 450 arpens, and embraced what was then called Vallet's spring.

Sworn to this 4th day of July, 1834.

JAMES. S. MAYFIELD, Commissioner.

NO. 153.—CAMILLE DELASSUS, CLAIMING 2,500 ARPENS.

To Mr. Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana:

Camille Delassus, son of Peter Charles Dehault Delassus de Luziere, civil and military commandant of the post of New Bourbon of Illinois, and residing therein, humbly supplicates, and has the honor to represent, that since 1792, when his said father came to settle in Illinois, your petitioner has constantly thought of settling himself near him; and having manifested his intentions on this subject to his lordship the baron de Carondelet, he was assured by this governor general of the province that he should have a concession granted to him in any part of Illinois he might select, as appears by the copy (here annexed) of the official letter, directed to his said father on the 8th of May, 1793, by the said governor general, who, at the same time, gave orders to Don Zenon Trudeau, your predecessor, to grant to the petitioner the said concession, which he has delayed until now to locate and petition for, only on account of his youth, and his desire to get thoroughly acquainted, by remaining with his father, with the labors of agriculture and the searching and working of lead mines. Now that he finds himself old enough and able to manage well a farm and to work lead mines, with his hired hands, his slaves, and the cattle he owns, he supplicates you to grant to him a concession of 2,500 arpens of land in superficie, situated towards Grand river and river Platte, bounded on all sides by his Majesty's domain; the petitioner preferring that place to any other, as he will be able, from there, to oversee the works going on at his father's mine, situated on a branch or fork of the river St. Francis, called Gaboury; so that, with the lead he will discover and manufacture on the concessions he solicits he may make up for the considerable and unprofitable expenses his father has been at on his said mine.

The petitioner flatters himself so much the more of obtaining this favor, as, in his capacity of sublieutenant of militia, and being acquainted with the English language, he has very frequently been employed in the post commanded by his father, and has shown his zeal and disinterestedness in the royal and public service. Therefore, the petitioner has recourse to you, sir, praying that you may be pleased, conformably to the above-mentioned orders, and to the evident intentions of the government, to grant to him the aforesaid concession of 2,500 arpens, and, consequently, give orders to Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor of Upper Louisiana, to survey the said concession, and to make a plat and certificate of said survey. In so doing, the petitioner will ever pray for the preservation of your days.

CAMILLE DELASSUS.

NEW BOURBON, October 3, 1799.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, October 12, 1799.

In consequence of the foregoing memorial, and of the document annexed to it, and also in consideration of the two official letters of the baron de Carondelet, late governor of these provinces, dated 7th and 8th of May, in the year 1793, which are of record in this archive, the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall survey the 2,500 arpens of land in superficie, which the party interested solicits, conformably to the orders of the said governor; and, afterwards, the said party, in order to obtain his title of concession in form, shall have to apply to the intendant general of these provinces, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the right of granting all classes of lands belonging to the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that on the first day of the month of November, of last year, (in consequence of the foregoing decree of Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor of these settlements,) I went on the land of Don Camille Delassus, in order to survey the same, according to his demand and other documents, the said land containing 2,400 arpens and 34 perches in superficie, which measurement was made in presence of the proprietor and adjoining neighbors, with the perch of Paris, of 18 feet in length, according to the custom adopted in this province of Louisana, without regard to the variation of the needle, which is seven degrees 30 minutes east, as appears by the foregoing figurative plat. The said land is situated at about 26 miles southwest of the post of St. Genevieve, and bounded on its four sides as follows: north by lands of Thomas Alleys and of William Montgomery; south and east by vacant lands of the royal domain; and west, in part by the said royal domain, and by lands of Joseph Gerrard and Patrick Fleming. And, in order that it may be available where needed, I do give the present certificate, together with the foregoing figurative plat, on which are indicated the dimensions and the natural and artificial limits of said land. Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement C. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners Camille Delassus, claiming 2,400 arpens, 34½ perches of land situate on the waters of Big river, district of St. Genevieve, produces record of a concession from Charles D. Delassus, lieutenant governor, dated 12th October, 1799; a plat of survey, dated 1st November, 1799, certified 10th January, 1800.

The board make the same remarks as in the claim of Amable Partenais, page 533, as respects the rough minutes, to wit: The testimony of Baptiste Vallé and Jean Lemoine, stated in the report of the agent to have been taken on the 12th August, 1806, and copied by the said agent, together with the opinion of the board, from the rough minutes, which must be understood from the rough minutes of the board, is not deemed by the present board to be proper and legal evidence, inasmuch as the said testimony and opinion never were entered on the fair minutes of the board, which are the sole minutes known in law and acknowledged by the commissioners. The board remark that no kind of testimony suggests or makes it appear that the land claimed includes a lead mine, and the board would have confirmed the same had it not been included in the agent's report. See Partenais' claim, No. 5, page 533, and the same remarks as in the claim of Easton and Bruff, page 537, to wit: The testimony of James Kieth and Ezekiel Eastridge, stated in the report of the agent to have been taken on the 2d December, 1807, and copied by the said agent from the rough minutes, which must be understood from the rough minutes of the board, is not deemed legal evidence, inasmuch as the same was ordered by the board not to be transcribed, and was not transcribed, for the following reasons: that the board had established a rule not to receive evidence partially, but to receive all the testimony at one time, unless, from the peculiar situation of the parties, the testimony offered could not be offered again; in that case, the same was attested on the rough minutes by the signature of a majority of the commissioners. The object of the rule was, generally, not to let the testimony open to be improved and enlarged by the parties, the board conceiving that this opportunity might have been greatly abused, (see Easton and Bruff's claim, No. 5, page 537,) as respects the testimony taken on the 1st and 2d of December, 1807. It is the opinion of a majority of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. Frederick Bates, commissioner, forbears giving an opinion. See minutes, No. 5, page 539.

Smith, claiming 2,400 arpens and 34 perches of land, (see record, book C, pages 447 and 448; minutes, No. 5, page 539,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos D. Delassus, dated 12th October, 1799; also a plat of survey taken 1st November, 1799, and certified 10th January, 1800, by Antonia Soulard. See minutes No. 6, page 175.

No. 154.—ANTOINE PRATTE, JR., CLAIMING 500 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

SIR: Anthony Pratte, junior, has the honor to represent to you, that considering agriculture as the most proper and surest means to provide, hereafter, for the maintenance and independence of his family, he has made choice of a tract of land situated on Grand river, where he supplicates you to have the goodness to grant to him the concession of a tract of land of 500 arpens in superficie, for which he would already have had a title, if he had immediately taken advantage of the offer made to him by your predecessor, Don Zenon Trudeau, of the said quantity of land. Confiding in your justice, and convinced that the length of time that his family has inhabited this country is known to you, having no other views but to put in practice the sentiments of fidelity and submission in which his father has brought him up, he believes with confidence that you will be pleased to grant to him the favor which he solicits of your justice.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, Esq., one of the commissioners:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Genevieve:

John Bte. Vallé, aged about 72 years, being duly sworn, saith that he was well acquainted with Charles Dehault Delassus, late lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana; that the said Charles Dehault Delassus was the lieutenant governor in the year 1799; and this deponent further says that he is well acquainted with the name, signature, and handwriting of the said Charles Dehault Delassus, having frequently seen him write, and that the name and signature of said Charles Dehault Delassus to the concession from him to the said Antoine Pratte, for 500 arpens of land, dated the 5th day of September, in the year 1799, is the proper name, signature, and handwriting of the said Charles Dehault Delassus. And this deponent further says that he was well acquainted with Antoine Pratte, the grantee; that he was, at the date of the grant aforesaid, a citizen, and resident in the province of Louisiana, and that he remained and continued a citizen and a resident of the country till the time of his death.

ST. LOUIS, December 9, 1813.

Abraham Smith, claiming 600 arpens of land; notice only. See minutes, book No. 5, page 499.

Louis Tayon, duly sworn, says that, 10 or 11 years ago, claimant inhabited and cultivated this tract of land; which said tract is situated near the Mamelles, or the bluff; this inhabitation and cultivation commenced two or three years before the change of government, that is to say, when Charles Tayon was commandant of the post of St. Charles; left this tract, as witness believes, about the change of government. (At the margin is the following:) Not granted. See Bates' Minutes, page 75.

DECEMBER 22, 1813.

Abraham Smith. See page 75.

George R. Spencer, being duly affirmed, says that, in 1799, he was at the cabin of claimant on this tract; wheat was sown on this tract in the fall of 1799, which was destroyed by animals; claimant's cabin was inhabited by a family or families, though he did reside there himself.

Wm. Connell, duly affirmed, says that claimant came to the country in the spring of 1798, and in that year raised turnips, and inhabited the tract in a camp; was frequently at the house of this witness; raised a good crop of corn in 1799. Witness sowed wheat in the fall, which did not come to perfection; witness sowed flax for claimant in 1800. In this year, or in 1801, the cabin, corn crib, and fences, were burnt, since which nothing has been done on the land. See Bates' Minutes, page 92.

In the case of Abraham Smith, claiming 600 arpens of land, see book No. 6, page 170.

The following testimony was taken by A. G. Harrison, late commissioner, under a resolution of the board, passed on the 13th May, 1833:

Robert Spencer, being duly sworn, says that, in the year 1799, he saw Abraham Smith cultivating a place near the Mamelles, and immediately below Point d'Aulm, where the said Smith had a house, and a field of corn, of about ten acres, on it; that the appearance of the improvement was new, and that he cultivated the same two or three seasons afterwards, as witness now recollects.

Gabriel Latreille, being duly sworn, says that, in the year 1797, Abraham Smith settled near the Mamelles, and in 1798 raised a crop on the place he settled; that he had a house on it, and continued there until 1800, when, being ordered by Charles Tayon, commandant, to keep up his cattle, he left the said place.

The following testimony was taken by James S. Mayfield, commissioner. Claimant at the same time produced a paper purporting to be an affidavit of Charles Tayon, late commandant of St. Charles, certifying to have given to Abraham Smith verbal permission to settle on 400 arpens of land:

Charles Denny, produced and sworn, on his oath states that, in the year 1801 or 1802, deponent saw land broke up on the said tract, which was called Abraham Smith's improvement; he saw no house or enclosure, and Smith had then returned to Kentucky; deponent further states, at that time none of the inhabitants enclosed their lands or improvements, that is, near the common fields; deponent further states that the paper shown him, marked A, is signed in the proper handwriting of Charles Tayon, having seen him write, who was commandant of St. Charles from about 1800 up to the change of government.

Sworn to this 3d July, 1834, at St. Charles.

JAMES S. MAYFIELD, Commissioner.

Gabriel Latreille, produced and sworn, on his oath states through his interpreter, who was sworn a true interpretation to give, that, in 1797, a Mr. Smith was living on a tract of land near the town of St. Charles, said land now being in the possession of James Lindsey; that Smith lived there with his family, and had seven or eight arpens of land enclosed and in cultivation; that Mr. Smith lived there for some time afterwards, and the place was left vacant, unoccupied, and unclaimed, by any one else, until about fifteen years ago, when Mr. James Lindsey took possession of it; and deponent further states, he does not recollect the given name of Mr. Smith, but does not, or did not know of any other Smith in the country at that time, nor of any other man of that name, who settled and improved a tract of land near the town of St. Charles, during the existence of the Spanish government.

No. 157.—P. AUGUSTE PRATTE, CLAIMING 600 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

SIR: Pierre Auguste Pratte, jr., has the honor to represent to you that, considering agriculture as the surest and most proper means of securing, hereafter, the maintenance and independence of his family, he has made choice of a piece of land situated on the Grand river, at which place he supplicates you to have the goodness to grant to him a concession for 600 arpens in superficie, for which he would have had already a title, if, at the time, he had taken advantage of the offer made to him by your predecessor, Don Zenon Trudeau, of the same quantity. Confiding in your justice, and convinced that the length of time that his family has inhabited this country is known to you; having no other views but to put in practice the sentiments of fidelity and obedience in which he has been brought up by his father, he believes, with confidence, that you will be pleased to grant to him the favor which he solicits of your justice.

P. AUGUSTE PRATTE.

St. Louis, September 4, 1799.

St. Louis of Illinois, September 5, 1799.

Whereas we are assured that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to improve the land he solicits, in the time fixed by the regulation of the governor general of this province, the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the petitioner in possession of the 600 arpens of land which he solicits, in order that he shall enjoy the said land, in the same terms as he asks; and the survey being executed, he (the surveyor) shall make out the corresponding certificate of survey, with which the party interested shall apply to the intendancy general of these provinces, to which alone corresponds, by order of his Majesty, the granting of lands and town lots belonging to the royal domain.

No. 158.—Joseph Pratt, claiming 20,000 arpens.

To Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana:

Joseph Pratte supplicates you very humbly, and has the honor to represent that, wishing to form a settlement, and seeing that the lands of the domain in the vicinity of this village are barren and uncultivable, in consequence, he went to look out for lands on the waters of the river St. Francis, where he found some suitable to his views, as well for agriculture as for the raising of a great quantity of cattle, with which he is well provided; therefore, he has recourse to you, sir, praying that you will be pleased to grant to him, in full property, for him, his heirs or assigns, a concession for twenty thousand arpens of land in superficie, in the place above indicated; quantity which is proportionate to his strength and means for improving them. Favor which your petitioner expects of the generosity of the government you represent, and which he has the honor to serve. And he shall never cease to pray for your happiness and prosperity.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, A. G. Harrison and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Joseph Pratte, for himself and others, assignees under him, to wit, Francis Vallé, Charles C. Vallé, Robert T. Brown, and Catherine Brown, his wife, Walter Wilkinson, and Emily Wilkinson, and George Bullet, the legal representatives of Celestie M. Allen, claiming 20,000 arpens of land situate in the late district of St. Genevieve, now county of Washington, (see record, book D, page 70; minutes, book No. 5, page 481,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated 17th October, 1797; also a plat of survey, dated September 4, 1817, by John Hawkins; also, deed of conveyance from Joseph Pratte and wife.

State of Missouri, County of St. Genevieve:

Charles McLane, aged 55 years, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with the said Joseph Pratte, and has been so ever since he can remember anybody, for both this witness and said Pratte were born in this country, and have always and still do reside in the same. And this witness further says that some 32 or 33 years ago, this deponent does not particularly remember the year, but it was 5 or 6 years before the American government took possession of this country, he, this deponent, in company with one Lewis Canon and one Stephen Dalinel, (now deceased,) at the request of Mr. Francis Vallé then the commandant of this post, did go to a piece of land situate on the waters of the river St. Francis, about 16 miles distant from the Mine à Breton, for which he understood a concession had been or would be applied for, and on which it was then understood there was a large quantity of iron ore; that this witness and the others were sent to dig pits and holes to ascertain the probable quantity of ore, and bring samples of the same. And this deponent further says, that himself and the others aforesaid did go and dig and work on said land, and procure the samples of the ore as aforesaid. And further this deponent says, that, by instructions to him given, he did mark and blaze the trees round the said land, to ascertain the boundaries; and that said Francis Vallé, son of the commandant, with Walter Fenwick, son-in-law of said Francis Vallé, sr., and an American whose name he does not recollect, went again the next following year to the same place, for the purpose of showing the iron ore to the American gentleman. And this deponent further says that it is well known in the country at the time that a concession had been obtained for the said land on which the iron ore had been found as aforesaid. And he further says that the marks and blazes, spoken of before, to designate the place, were a few years ago, and perhaps still are, visible and conspicuous; that said tract of land is remarkable, being almost included in the fork of a creek called by the French thus, La Fourche du Pore, being a part of the waters of the river St. Francis. And this deponent further says that he has several times been on the said tract of land since it was surveyed under the said concession, and that the said tract, so surveyed, is the same which he had so examined and marked and blazed some thirty odd years ago; and that he further knows that the said land has been and is continually claimed under the same concession ever since, and now is so claimed. And this deponent further says that he, for the claimant, built a cabin on the said land at the time he worked there. And this deponent further says that he, the said Joseph Pratte, Robert T. Brown, François Vallé, and Walter Wilkinson, with hands, went in the neighborhood of said land, many years since, to make a furnace, forge, or bloomery, to wash said ore, and that they built cabins and shop, and that they dug for a seat to build the works.

This deponent says he is well acquainted with the handwriting and signature of the said Zenon Trudeau, having seen him write, and that the name and signature of the said Zenon Trudeau to the concession to Joseph Pratte for 20,000 arpens of land, dated the 17th day of October, in the year 1797, is the proper name, handwriting, and signature of the said Zenon Trudeau. And this deponent further says that he is well acquainted with Joseph Pratte, the grantee in said concession; that he was, at the date of said concession, a citizen and resident in the then province of Louisiana, and that he has continued a citizen and resident ever since, and still is; that the said Pratte was a member of a very large and respectable family, and had in himself considerable means and property, which, with such assistance as his connections were able to give him, placed it in his power to render the grant to him available; that he always understood that the grant was in trust for the said Joseph Pratte and the others in the deed to them named, and that the family for whose use the grant was obtained had, collectively, large means, a great number of negroes, and large stock, and that the said Pratte was influential with the Indians, and, in connection with his father, aided and gave much assistance in keeping peace and maintaining relations of friendship and amity between them and the whites; that, in the early settlement of the country, the Indians were troublesome, killed people, drove off the cattle, and prevented the spreading of the settlements, and it was considered as rendering both the people and the government great and essential services to suppress that disposition of the Indians, and maintain peace, so as to enable the settlements to expand and spread through the country.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Louis Bolduc, sr., and Parfait Dufour, sr., have the honor to represent that they own and cultivate, since more than five years, with the permission of their commandant, and also that of the lieutenant governor, Don Zenon Trudeau, a tract of land situated at the place known under the name of Fourche á Duclos, (Duclos' fork,) adjoining on one side the land of Michael Placette. They hope that their delaying to make their demand in a regular manner shall not be looked on by you as a motive for excluding them from enjoying the favor which was promised to them by your predecessor. Full of confidence they supplicate you to have the goodness to grant to them in the place above mentioned, in full property, the concession for a tract of land of about twenty arpens in front, more or less, by forty in depth. The long time they have been settled in the country being known to you, as also their respective means, and the proofs of fidelity they have given to the government, will induce their worthy commandant, Mr. Vallé, to recommend them to you according to their merits.

Full of confidence in your justice and in the generosity of the government, they hope that you will be pleased to do justice to their demand in a manner favorable to the accomplishment of their wishes.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, December 18, 1799.

Considering that the petitioner has inhabited this country for a long time, and that he possesses sufficient means to improve the land he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any person; and the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in a vacant place of the royal domain; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order that they shall serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendent general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands belonging to the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of land, of 800 arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of Peter Gamelin, measured with the perch of the city of Paris, of eighteen French feet, lineal measure of the same city, according to the common mode of measuring land in this province. This land is situated at about seventy-one miles from this town of St. Louis, bounded northwest quarter north by lands of Francis Gaston Gué, southeast quarter south by those of Louis Dupré, northeast quarter east by those of Don Silvester Labbadie, and southwest quarter west by those of Don Antonio Soulard, which survey and measurement was made without regard to the variation of the needle, which is seven degrees thirty minutes east, as appears from the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. Said survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal fisc, dated 18th December, 1799, here annexed. And in order that all here above mentioned be available, I do give the present (certificate), with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, James Rankin, on the 19th of February, 1804, who signed the minutes, to which I do certify.

Captain Don Henry Peyroux, commandant of St. Genevieve, shall grant to Messrs. Louis Bolduc and John Baptiste Vallé the land which they solicit in the petition, on the other side.

MANUEL PEREZ.

St. Louis, August 13, 1788.

We, Henry Peyroux de la Coudreniere, captain of infantry, civil and military commandant of the post of St. Genevieve of Illinois, in consequence of the above order, and knowing that the tract of land demanded by Messieurs John Baptiste Vallé and Louis Bolduc belongs to his Majesty's domains, we do grant to the said petitioners, for them and their heirs, to enjoy in full property, a tract of land of twenty arpens in front on the Mississippi, by forty in depth, to be taken two arpens in the Cypress swamp, and the rest in ascending the Mississippi towards the Cape à Girardeau.

PEYROUX DE LA COUDRENIERE.

Given at Genevieve, August 23, 1788.

To Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant colonel by brevet, captain in the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois:

By virtue of the title of concession here annexed, (the said land having never been measured for want of a surveyor,) the petitioners pray you to give orders to the surveyor of the government to fix their boundaries, and to deliver to them the certificate of his survey. The petitioners supplicate you, besides, to authorize the said surveyor to measure their land in the directions which he will judge the most convenient to suit the surveys of the other (adjoining) lands. Favor which we expect of your justice.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Genevieve:

Bartholomew St. Gemme, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with John Baptiste Vallé and Louis Bolduc, the original claimants; that he knows they were citizens and residents in the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1788, and the said Vallé is still a citizen and resident, and the said Bolduc continued so till his death, and his children are still so. And this witness further says that he was well acquainted with Henry Peyroux de la Coudreniere; that he has seen him write, and that the said Peyroux was the commandant, civil and military, of the post of St. Genevieve, in the year 1788, and that the signature and name of the said Peyroux de la Coudreniere to the said recommendation for said grant, dated the 1st day of August, 1788, and to the grant by him made, of the date of 23d August, 1788, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Peyroux. And this deponent further says that he was well acquainted with Manuel Perez, personally; that he knows he was the lieutenant governor of the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1788. And this deponent further says that he was well acquainted with Zenon Trudeau; that he has seen him write; that he was the lieutenant governor of the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1798, and that the name and signature to the warrant or order of survey for said land, dated the 6th day of March, 1798, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau. And this deponent further says that, in the year 1788, the said J. B. Vallé and Louis Bolduc were both men of families, with slaves and other property.

No. 165.—CHARLES ROBIN AND LOUIS CARON, CLAIMING 1,500 ARPENS.

To Mr. Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, residing in St. Louis:

Charles Robin and Louis Caron, ancient inhabitants of the post of St. Genevieve, humbly supplicate and have the honor to represent to you that they would wish to make and improve a plantation, in order to cultivate various productions, and raise a great number of cattle, so as to enable them to provide for the maintenance of themselves and that of their numerous families; that having made searches for a tract of land suitable to their purpose, they have found one situated at about eight or nine leagues from the said post of St. Genevieve, on a branch of the north fork of Saline river, on the north side of the said fork, and consisting of 1,500 arpens of land in superficie. They flatter themselves so much the more to obtain this concession in its whole extent from the government, because it is proportionate to the number of persons composing their respective families; that they have the means to improve it well, and to put thereon a numerous stock of cattle, and that they have never demanded nor obtained from the government any other concession; besides, it is notorious that the said concession, now claimed by the petitioners, has never been granted to anybody, and that it belongs to the King's domain, as Mr. De Luziere, commandant of New Bourbon, in the district of which post the said land is situated, and, if needed, the surveyor of said district will not refuse to certify and attest; therefore, the petitioners apply with confidence to your justice and authority, sir, praying that you will be pleased to grant and concede to them the said tract of land, consisting of 1,500 arpens in superficie, situated at the place here above designated, for them, their heirs and assigns, in order to make and improve their plantations; in doing which, and giving orders to the King's surveyor for this district to survey the said land, to make out the plat, and put them in possession, the petitioners shall never cease to pray for the conservation of your days.

Done in ST. GENEVIEVE, March 5, 1800.

We, the undersigned, commandant of the post of New Bourbon, do certify to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, that the statement in the foregoing petition is exact, sincere, and true, and that they (the petitioners) deserve, under all points of view, to obtain the concession which they demand, as much because it is on vacant land which has not been granted to anybody, and belongs to the King's domain, as they have the means necessary to improve advantageously this plantation, which is indispensable to them to provide for the support of their numerous families, and for the grazing of their numerous stock; besides, the petitioners are near relations to Messrs. Vallé, who have rendered, since such a long time, with zeal and success, important services to the government and to the colony: this consideration ought to be one more motive to grant to them the favor which they solicit.

Done at NEW BOURBON OF ILLINOIS, March 12, 1800.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, April 4, 1800.

In consequence of the information given by the commandant of New Bourbon, Don Pedro Delassus de Luziere, by which it appears evident that the petitioners are ancient inhabitants of this country, and that they possess more than the means and number of people necessary to obtain the concession which they solicit, I do grant to them and their heirs the land which they solicit, provided it is not to the prejudice of any one; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the parties interested in possession of the quantity of land they solicit, in the place designated; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to the parties, with his certificate, in order to serve to them to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

No. 166.—Henry Peyroux, claiming 7,760 acres.

To Don Manuel Perez, captain of the first stationary battalion of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the western part of Illinois:

Sir: Don Henry Peyroux de la Coudreniere, captain of infantry, civil and military commandant of the post of St. Genevieve, has the honor to represent to you, that having bought, a few days ago, a plantation having forty arpens in width by one league in depth, at the place called La Saline, and where the spring, which goes by that name, is exactly in the middle of the width of said plantation, he desires to extend his possession, on the north side, to the river Aux Vases, which is but at the distance of about ten arpens; and, on the south side, to the river St. Laurent, distant about from thirty to thirty-five arpens, in order that, by enjoying this extent of land, he may have a sufficient quantity of timber for the great consumption of the Saline; and also, establish a stock farm, which cannot be but advantageous to the country. Therefore, he supplicates you, sir, to grant to him and his heirs, and in full property, the extent of land situated between the river St. Laurent and the river Aux Vases, including the plantation which he has bought of Mr. John Baptiste d'Atcherut, in such a manner that those lands, in a body, be bounded east by the river Mississippi, north by the river Aux Vases, south by the river St. Laurent, and west by lands not yet conceded, at the distance of one league from the river Mississippi.

The petitioner will pray for your conservation and prosperity.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Henry Peyroux, by Henry Dodge, the heirs and legal representatives of Edward Hempstead, and John Scott, claiming 7,760 acres of land situate on the Mississippi river, and on the waters of the Saline, county of St. Genevieve, (see record books, C, page 258, and F, page 258; minutes, No. 5, page 545,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Manuel Perez, lieutenant governor, dated 24th December, 1787; also a plat of survey, by John Hawkins, deputy surveyor, dated 22d, and received for record, by Soulard, surveyor general, the 26th of February, 1806.

State of Missouri, County of St. Genevieve:

John Baptiste Vallé, a witness, aged about seventy-two years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with Henry Peyroux, otherwise called Henry Peyroux de la Coudreniere, the original petitioner for said grant; that he has often seen him write; that the said Peyroux, at the date of the petition and grant, was a citizen and resident of this country, now the State of Missouri, and was civil and military commandant at the post and district of St. Genevieve, and remained a citizen of the country from thence till long after the purchase of the country by the American government. This deponent also says that the signature and name to the petition for said grant, dated the 15th of December, 1787, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of said Peyroux. And this deponent further says, that Manuel Perez was the lieutenant governor of the western part of Illinois at the date of the grant in the year 1787. And this deponent further says that he is well acquainted with the tract of land claimed, and that the same was, at the date of the grant, actually inhabited and cultivated, and used as a saline, where much salt, for the use of the country, was made; and that, after the grant aforesaid, the said land was, more or less, continually inhabited and cultivated; that there were several farms on the same, and many buildings and houses, with furnaces for the making of salt; and that the said property, from the date of the grant till about the year 1824 or 1825, and perhaps longer, was actually inhabited and cultivated, and extensively used in the making of salt, and that the same was of great and extensive use to the whole country for many years; and that the said tract has always been, and still is, inhabited and cultivated. And, further, that the said Peyroux was a man of property, and useful in the country. And this deponent further says, that at the time said Peyroux claimed said grant, he understood that a grant had been formerly made for a part of said tract as it now stands, which had been purchased by the said Peyroux. This witness further says, that he saw the orders from Baron de Carondelet, for the survey of this land, and that in the order special instructions were given to respect the lands and lines of Madame Villars and Francis Vallé.

No. 167.—CHARLES ROY, CLAIMING 80 ARPENS.

We, Don Fernando de Leyba, lieutenant governor, &c.

In consequence of the demand to us made by Charles Roy, residing in this post, in his petition dated March 24th, this present month, in which he states to us that he would wish to establish himself in the new settlement called river Des Peres, contiguous to the Grande Prairie, and praying that we would be pleased to grant to him, in continuation of the other inhabitants of the said place, a tract of land of two arpens in width by forty arpens in length, adjoining on one side to the land of François Hebert, and on the other side to the King's domain, fronting on the south end the little river, and on the north end the King's domain: Therefore, being willing to favor the said Charles Roy, we have granted to him the said tract of land in all its width and length, such as it is described in his said petition, on condition to improve the same in one year and one day, and that it shall be liable to public charges, and others which it may please his Majesty to impose.

David Miracle, claiming 640 acres of land on the waters of the Dardenne, county of St Charles. See record book C, page 511; minutes, No. 5, page 457.

Ira Cottle duly sworn says, that David Miracle's wife came to this country before her husband, and had a house on said tract of land, as soon at least as 1803; that it was certainly before the change of government. See book No. 6, page 216.

October 8, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of David Miracle, claiming 640 acres of land—see book No 6, page 216—the following testimony was takem by A. G. Harrison, late commissioner, under a resolution passed by the board, on the 13th May, 1833.

Daniel Keathly being duly sworn says, he saw the wife of Mr. David Miracle, who lived at that time, as she said, on a tract of land on a branch then called Walker's branch, and now called Scott's branch; that witness never saw the place mentioned while said Miracle lived there, but from general report of the neighborhood, is certain that said claimant did live on said place at the time mentioned.

John Zumalt being duly sworn says, that he knew the wife of David Miracle, who lived somewhere in the neighborhood, as above stated; that she was living there before her husband, David Miracle, came to the country.

Jeremiah Groshon being duly sworn says, that in 1802, the wife of David Miracle improved and cultivated a place on Walker's branch, sometimes called Lewis' branch; that there was a cabin built on it, in which she lived; that it adjoined the claim of John Lewis.

William Craig being duly sworn says, that in 1802 he saw the wife of David Miracle living on and cultivating a place on Walker's, sometimes called Lewis' branch; that said improvements consisted of a cabin and a small field. See book No. 7, page 22.

No. 172.—JAMES CLAMORGAN, CLAIMING 3,200 ARPENS.

To Don Zenon Trudeau, captain in the stationary regiment of Louisiana, lieutenant governor, and commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois:

Clamorgan supplicates humbly, and has the honor to represent to you that he wishes to obtain a tract of land on the river Maramec, at the distance of about three leagues west of the saline belonging to the petitioner, on which tract there has been formerly a beginning of improvement made by one James Head, an American, who has abandoned the same, and is gone back to the American side, and who had no kind of approbation of your predecessors; the said tract of land consists in forty arpens in width by eighty in depth, on which there are two springs, distant from one another about two arpens, the waters of which run into a fork of Maramec, known by the name of Fourche à Renaud. The said forty arpens in width by eighty in depth are bounded on all sides by his Majesty's domain. The intention of the petitioner is to raise thereon his cattle, which is continually attracted to that place by the goodness of the pasture, to increase the number of it, and make there a stock farm.

The petitioner shall never cease to render thanks to your goodness.

JACQUES CLAMORGAN.

ST. LOUIS, October 1, 1793.

We, lieutenant governor, after having ascertained that the land asked for belongs to the King's domain, and that the concession shall not be to the prejudice of any one, I certify to have put Mr. Jacques Clamorgan, residing in this town, in possession of the quantity of forty arpens in front by eighty arpens in depth, situated at about three leagues westwardly from the saline of the said Clamorgan, said saline known by the name of la Tête de Bœuf, on the river Maramec. On these forty arpens in front, that is to say, forty arpens at each end, by eighty arpens in depth, there are two large springs, distant from one another about one or two arpens, the waters of which empty into a branch of the Maramec, known by the name of Fourche à Renaud, (Renaud's fork,) the whole being bounded by his Majesty's domain, as represented in the following plat.

In testimony whereof, we have given the present (certificate) in the town of St. Louis of Illinois, October 4, 1793.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

We, Don Zenon Trudeau, captain in the stationary regiment of Louisiana, lieutenant governor, and commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois:

In consequence of the demand to us made on the 1st instant, by Mr. Clamorgan, residing in this town of St. Louis, after having ourself put him in possession, according to the instrument drawn up by us on the 4th of same month, we have granted, and do grant, to the said Clamorgan, in fee simple, for him, his heirs or assigns, or any other who may represent his right, the quantity of forty arpens in front by eighty in depth. The said tract of land is situated on the river Maramec, at about three leagues, in a westerly direction, from the saline of said Clamorgan. On said tract, for which a concession is now granted, there are two large springs of water, at the distance of about one or two arpens from one another, where one James Head, an American, had formerly begun an improvement, which he has abandoned since several years, without having asked, before his going away, any permission or concession. This grant is made to said Clamorgan for the purpose of raising cattle, and establishing such a stock farm as he shall think advantageous to his interest. This concession of forty arpens by eighty in depth, is bounded, as well on its two ends as on its two parallel sides, by his Majesty's domain, and remains liable to all the charges, laws, or taxes, which it may please his Majesty to impose hereafter.

October 26, 1808.

Board met. Present: The Hon. Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates.

Alexander McNair, claiming 400 arpens of land, situated near the village of Florissant, district of St. Louis, as assignee of Jeremiah Connor, sheriff of St. Louis district, who sold the same as the property of Gregoire Sarpy, produces to the board a concession from Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor, dated 17th December, 1796, and an assignment from one James Williams, dated 2d March, 1797; also the deed of sheriff Conner to claimant, dated 29th June, 1808.

This claim interfering with the following, the parties being present, agree that they shall be taken together by the board, and adjusted jointly, to wit: William Whitesides, assignee of James Williams, assignee of Thomas Wilkinson, claiming 440 arpens of land situated as above, produces to the board a notice to the recorder, dated 16th June, 1808; also, a deed from Wilkinson to Williams, dated 1st February, 1797; conveyance from Williams to claimant, dated September, 1805; recept dated 12th September, same year, for consideration money.

Elisha Harrington, sworn, says that Wilkinson gave Williams a cow and calf to build a house on the tract about 11 or 12 years ago; said Wilkinson lived in the house one winter, then sold to James Williams, who moved into the house and cleared some land. Laid over for decision. See book No. 3, page 327.

No. 174.—DAVID KINCAID, CLAIMING 500 ARPENS.

To Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and commander-in-chief of Upper Louisiana:

David Kincaid, Roman Catholic, has the honor to represent to you that, with the consent of the government, he came over to this side, where he has chosen a piece of land on the domain of his Majesty, in order to make a plantation: therefore, he supplicates you to have the goodness to grant to him at the place he has chosen, the quantity of land corresponding to the number of persons in his family, composed of himself, his wife, and six children. The petitioner having the means necessary to improve a plantation, and having no other views but to live as a peaceable and submissive cultivator of the soil, hopes to deserve the favor which he solicits of your justice.

DAVID KINCAID.

ST. ANDRE, June 4, 1803.

Be it forwarded to the lieutenant governor, with information that the above statement is true, and that the petitioner deserves the favor which he solicits.

ST. ANDRE, June 15, 1800.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, June 20, 1800.

In consequence of the foregoing information from the commandant of St. André, Captain Don Santiago Mackay, the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of 590 arpens of land in superficie, in the place where he asks, said quantity corresponding to the number of his family, according to the regulation of the governor of this province, which being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general of these provinces, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of land, of 590 arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of David McKinney. Said measurement was made with the perch of the city of Paris, of eighteen French feet, lineal measure of the same city, according to the mode of measuring land in this province. This tract of land is situated on the north bank of the Missouri, about five miles above the river Charette, and at sixty-four miles west of St. Louis; bounded north-northwest, north-northeast, and east-southeast, by vacant lands of the royal domain; on the south by the river Missouri, and on the west-northwest by lands of Lorenzo Sidney. Said survey and measurement was executed without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ east, as appears by the foregoing figurative plat, on which is designated the dimensions, the courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. The said survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal fisc, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated June 20, 1800, here annexed. In testimony whereof, I do give the present, (certificate,) with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed on the 8th of November, 1803, by the deputy surveyor, Don Santiago Mackay, who signed the minutes, to which I certify.

No. 176.—WILLIAM DAVIS, UNDER BARADA, CLAIMING 800 ARPENS.

To Mr. Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant colonel, lieutenant governor, and commander-in-chief of this western part of Illinois and dependencies:

SIR: Antoine Barada, residing at Marais des Liards, with all the respect due, has the honor to represent to you that, having lately married, and having no land on which to settle himself and make a plantation, in order to cultivate the soil, he supplicates you, sir, to be willing to grant to him, in fee simple, for him, his heirs, or assigns, twenty arpens of land in front, by forty in depth, on the fork of the river . . . . . following the lines of the other concessions, ... all granted; favor which he hopes to deserve of your justice.

St. Louis of Illinois, August 10, 1797.

Not knowing how to write, I have made a cross for a mark ×.

St. Louis, August 10, 1797.

Considering that the petitioner has no land, the surveyor of this jurisdiction shall put him in possession of the land he asks, immediately following those who have obtained some by decrees prior to the present one; and he shall make out a plat and certificate of his survey, to serve to solicit the concession from the commandant general.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of land, of 800 arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of William Davis, as being purchaser of the same, from the original owner, Antoine Barada; the measurement was made with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet, lineal measure of the same city, according to the mode of measuring land in this province. This land is situated at about 20 miles northwest of St. Louis, bounded on the northwest ¼ north, and on the southwest ¼ west, by vacant lands of the royal domain; on the southeast ¼ south by the river Missouri, and on the northeast ¼ east by lands of James Griffin. This survey and measurement was made without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7 degrees 30 minutes east, as appears by the foregoing figurative plat, on which are designated the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. Said survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor, Don Zenon Trudeau, dated August 10, 1799, here annexed. In testimony whereof, I do give the present (certificate,) with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, James Mackay, on the 4th of February, 1804, who signed the minutes, to which I certify.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

David Horine, claiming 640 acres of land, situate in the Richwood settlement, Washington county, on the waters of Big river, (see record book B, page 247; minutes, book No. 5, page 432,) produces a plat of survey, dated February 12, 1806.

John Stewart, being of lawful age, and duly sworn upon his oath, doth depose and say, that on the 12th day of February, 1806, he surveyed for David Horine a settlement or head right of 639¼ acres and 10 poles, including David Horine's improvement; that, as to the settlement of the above claim, this deponent does not positively know but there were large white oak stumps that, from appearances, had been made into rails within the survey. Deponent says he neither saw a house nor enclosure at the time above mentioned, though there might have been without his seeing them, as his duties only required of him to make the survey.

No. 178.—Auguste P. Chouteau, claiming 800 arpens.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Auguste Chouteau, jr., has the honor to represent to you, that having considered the dangers to which commerce is exposed, and being old enough to establish himself, he has thought better to give the preference to agriculture; consequently, he hopes that you will please receive his demand kindly, and give him proofs of that protection you have always granted to industry; therefore he has the honor to supplicate you to have the goodness to grant to him the concession of a tract of land of eight hundred arpens in superficie, situated about sixty miles from the village of St. Genevieve, between Mine à Breton and the Old Mine, in such a manner that the spring, near which is the spot he has chosen to make his improvement, shall be included in the survey of said tract of land. The petitioner has the honor to inform you that he had obtained of your predecessor the promise of a concession for this same quantity of land, for the improvement of which he possesses all the means necessary, and this makes him hope that you will be pleased to do justice to his demand in such a way as to fulfill his views.

AUGUSTE CHOUTEAU, Jr.

St. Louis, January 5, 1800.

St. Louis of Illinois, January 5, 1800.

Whereas we are assured that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to improve the land he solicits in the time fixed by the regulation of the governor general of this province, the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the 800 arpens of land in superficie, in the place indicated in his petition; which being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general of these provinces, to whom alone, by royal order, corresponds the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of land, of 800 arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of Don Auguste Chouteau, jr.; said measurement was made with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet, lineal measure of the same city, according to the custom adopted in this province. This land is situated at fifty-three miles to the northwest quarter west from the post of St. Genevieve, and bounded to the north-northwest, south-southeast, and west-southwest, by vacant lands of the royal domain; and to the east-northeast by the lands of Elias Bates. Said survey and measurement was done without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7 degrees 30 minutes east, as appears by the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. Said survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and subdelegate of the royal fisc, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, under date of 5th January, 1800, here annexed. In testimony whereof, I do give the present certificate, together with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, Don Thomas Maddin, on the 6th of September, 1803, who signed the minutes, to which I certify.

May 5, 1806.

The board met agreeably to adjournment. Present: The Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, Esq.

Auguste Chouteau, jr., claiming 800 arpens of land situate in the district of St. Genevieve, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus, dated 5th January, 1800, and a survey of the same, taken 6th September, 1803, and certified 15th January, 1804.

Auguste Chouteau, being duly sworn, says that, about five or six years ago, he was informed by claimant's father that, in consequence of a recommendation from Gayoso de Lemos, he had obtained a number of concessions for himself and his children; and, further, that the above claimant was, about the time of obtaining said concession, of the age of eighteen years.

Nicholas Boilevin, being also duly sworn, says that, about five or six years ago, claimant's father, having obtained the said concession for said claimant, applied to witness, and agreed with him for the establishing of the aforesaid tract of land; that the same is mine land; that accordingly, witness moved on it for claimant, built a house and out-houses; that he then began to work said land for mineral, and that the same has been actually worked and inhabited to this day; that claimant was born in the country, and claims no other land in his own name in the Territory.

The board reject this claim. The board remark on the aforesaid three claims of Peter Chouteau, sr., Peter Chouteau, jr., and Auguste Chouteau, jr., that, from the testimony offered in the same, they were satisfied that Peter Chouteau, sr., enjoyed the highest confidence and favor of the Spanish government; was employed on the most confidential and important occasions; was the negotiator of Indian treaties, and much occupied in the Indian department; that he received no compensation for these various services, except a promise of command in the regular army, in which he was disappointed from the change of government; and that it was the intention and wish of the governor general and intendant that the lieutenant governor should favor him in all his undertakings, and assist him in the same. JULY 10, 1833.

L. F. Linn, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Auguste P. Choteau, son of Peter Chouteau, sr., claiming 800 arpens of land situated in Washington county, (see record book C, page 379; minutes, No. 1, page 282; No. 5, page 536,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated January 5, 1800.

M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of the said Carlos Dehault Delassus.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

Thomas Maddin, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was deputy surveyor under the Spanish and American governments in Upper Louisiana; that while he was deputy surveyor under the Spanish government, he surveyed for Auguste Choteau, son of Don Pedro Chouteau, 800 arpens of land, in virtue of a concession from the lieutenant governor of Louisiana, situated in Washington county at this time, formerly St. Genevieve. This survey was made on December 6, 1803, and it is bounded as follows: beginning at a post, and making corner at Elias Bates' land; thence south 20° east 5 French perches to a stone near a post oak; south 70° west 20 perches to a stone near a post oak; 28 to a stone near a white oak; north 20° west 285½ perches to a stone near a post oak; thence north 70° east 280 perches, to the beginning. Deponent further states that, at the time this tract of land was surveyed by him, there was a house on the same, occupied by the agent of the said Chouteau, who had negroes working on the land at the time. Deponent further says he filed a regular plat of survey of this tract, which was recorded at St. Louis, to which deponent refers.

THOMAS MADDIN.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Joseph Becquet, sr., being duly sworn, deposes and says that Auguste Chouteau, son of Pierre Chouteau, occupied and cultivated, by their agent, Nicolas Boilevin, a concession of land, quantity not recollected, joining the Old Mine tract or concession. Deponent further states that they had in cultivation, in the year 1804, four or five acres of land; he says said Chouteau had said land in possession some years before, how many he does not remember. Deponent says that, before and during the year 1804, he had negroes working on his property owned by said Chouteau, as well as hired white men in the employment of Mr. Chouteau or his agent. Deponent further states said tract of land has been occupied and cultivated ever since by Chouteau, or persons under him.

No. 179.—Therese Crely, claiming 3,528 arpens.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Therese Crély, wife of Louis Tesson Honoré, has the honor to supplicate you to condescend to take into consideration her unhappy situation, and that of her children, ruined by a writ of execution issued against the property of her husband, to whom there remains no kind of means for the support of her family. The heart of your petitioner, rent by such a desperate situation, sees no other resource but in your natural goodness, and in the generosity of the government, which has always been the protector of the unfortunate; full of confidence, and assured of the help of some friends, she flatters herself to be able to procure the means of establishing a stock farm; therefore, she claims of your justice that you will be pleased to grant to her a concession for a tract of land of 3,528 arpens in superficie, or the half of a league square, situated on the north side of the river called à Geoffrion, at the distance of about sixty leagues from this town. Your petitioner has the honor to observe that, at that distance, lands are of no value, and are not asked for by anybody; that those remote settlements are subject to dangers on account of the Indians who are hovering along the Missouri in the hunting seasons; but those dangers appear of little consequence to her when she hears the cry of nature, and considers that there is no other means left her to snatch her family from the grasp of misery. Having the greatest confidence in your compassionate feelings, she hopes that the short sketch she has submitted of her woful situation will secure to her the favor which she solicits of your justice.

St. Louis of Illinois, April 6, 1803.

Being fully convinced of the situation in which the petitioner, as she states, finds herself with a numerous family, and it being important to the general welfare that those parts, so remote from these posts, should be settled, as well for the advantage of travelers, hunters, and Indian traders, as in order to put a stop to the incursions of the Indians, I do grant to her one-half league (square) conformably to her demand, on express condition that she is to inhabit, clear and cultivate the same, in part, as her short means will permit, without delay; and the said concession shall remain secured to her and her children, it being out of the power of any of her husband's creditors, or her own, to pretend or claim anything against said concession, either for debts heretofore contracted, present or future; the same having to retain its whole value for the benefit of the petitioner, and afterwards pass over to her children; and when her means will permit, and the settling of those remote parts shall require, the petitioner shall apply to the surveyor, in order to have the said concession surveyed; and said survey shall serve to solicit the title of concession from the intendant, to whom corresponds, by the King's order, the granting of all classes of lands of the royal domain.

Col. Thomas H. Benton, being duly sworn, says that about fourteen or fifteen years ago the original concession, on which this claim is founded, was put in his hands by Therese Crély Tesson Honoré, and her son, Louis Honoré, to draw a petition upon it to Congress for its confirmation; the petition was drawn and sent on, and he believes the original was sent on with it; that he has since, at the request of those interested, searched among his papers for the original, but could not find them, and does not know where they are. Deponent further says that the papers had all the appearance of genuine papers. See book No. 6, page 234.

In the case of Therese Crély, claiming 3,528 arpens of land, see book No. 6, page 234.

Pierre Chouteau, senior, duly sworn, says that, in 1800, Tesson Honoré, the husband of said Therese Crély, came to ask of the deponent if he could help him to make an establishment on river Geoffrion, now called Two Rivers; that deponent lent him a sum of money, and the said Honoré immediately hired several men, went on said tract, built houses, cleared lands, had a good stock of cattle, and lived there with his wife and father-in-law; that, in 1803, deponent, on his way to Prairie du Chien, saw said improvement; he does not recollect of having seen a field, but saw a large garden, dwelling-house, out-houses and stables; that said Tesson remained on said tract until driven away by Indian depredations. Deponent further says that although said Tesson owed him at his death the sum of $1,200, he has no kind of interest in the claim.

Jacques Metté, duly sworn, says that thirty-four years ago, on the 15th of June, he passed on the tract claimed; that he saw a dwelling-house and out-houses, a garden of about two and one-half arpens; that, back of the buildings, there was an enclosure of seven or eight arpens, where the cattle were then kept; that said Honoré was living on said place with his wife and children. No. 180.—GABRIEL LORD, CLAIMING 400 ARPENS.

Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana:

SIR: Gabriel Lord has the honor to represent to you that he would wish to make an establishment in the upper part of this province, where he has been residing for some time; therefore, he prays you to grant to him a tract of land of four hundred arpens, in superficie, to be taken on the vacant lands of his Majesty's domain, in the place which shall be most convenient to the interest of your petitioner, who presumes to expect this favor of your justice.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, July 12, 1800.

Whereas we are assured that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to improve the land he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not to the prejudice of anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks for, in a vacant place in the royal domain; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands, &c.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of the settlements of Upper Louisiana.

I certify that a tract of land, of 360 arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of Gabriel Lord. Said measurement was made with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet, lineal measurement of the same city, and the survey was done without regard to the variation of the needle, which is seven degrees, thirty minutes east, as appears in the foregoing figurative plat. This land is situated at the Spanish swamp to the north thirteen degrees west of this town, bounded north by lands of Vincent Carico; south, by lands of widow Rigauche; east, in part, by lands of Pascal Cerré, and part by those of Jacques St. Vrain; and west, by lands of Vincent Carico. On said plat the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c., are designated. The survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal fisc, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, under date of July 12th, 1800, here annexed. In testimony whereof, I do give the present certificate, with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, James Mackay, on the 3d December, 1803, and who signed the minutes, to which I certify.

ANTONIO SOULARD, S. G.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, August 23, 1803.

NOTA.—The survey of the said land was not made in presence of the proprietor, as expressed in the foregoing certificate of survey, but was made in presence of Don Santiago St. Vrain, as agent of the said proprietor, by virtue of a power to him given, and annexed to the petition of the interested.

No. 181.—AUGUSTE GAMACHE, CLAIMING 300 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana:

Auguste Gamache, jr., residing in the village of Carondelet, where all his family is settled, and father of two children, wishing to make a plantation for himself, has the honor to supplicate you to have the goodness to grant to him the quantity of three hundred arpens of land in superficie, corresponding to the number of persons composing his family. The said land is situated on the south side of the Maramec, at some distance from its mouth, in such a way as not to be prejudicial to any other concessions which might have been granted at the same place. The petitioner hopes to deserve this favor of your justice.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Thomas Maddin, R. C., formerly an inhabitant of the United States, and settled on this side of the Mississippi, with his numerous family, since a number of years, owner of slaves, and deputy surveyor for the posts of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon, has the honor, respectfully, to represent, that having but an insufficient quantity of land to exert his industry, and to maintain a great number of cattle, he would wish to obtain from the generosity of the government the same favor which it has been pleased to grant to all those who wanted to establish stock farms; therefore, full of confidence in your justice, and in the perfect knowledge you have of his conduct and his means, he has the honor, respectfully, to supplicate you to have the goodness to grant to him, in full property, a concession for a tract of land of 6,000 arpens in superficie, to be taken in a vacant place of the domain, situated in the districts of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon. Your petitioner having no other views but to continue to live as a peaceable and submissive cultivator of the soil, and to bring up his family in the same principles, hopes that you will be pleased to do justice to his demand in a way favorable to the accomplishment of his views.

THOMAS MADDIN.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 15, 1800.

Considering that the petitioner is one of the first settlers in this country, who came from the United States, and whose known conduct and personal merit are recommendable, and being satisfied to evidence as to the truth of what he states in his petition; the whole being supported by the information given by the commandant of the post of New Bourbon, captain of militia, Don Pedro Delassus Deluziere, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in a vacant place of the royal domain; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands belonging to the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

We, the undersigned, civil and military commandant of the post of New Bourbon, do certify to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, that the statement in the present petition is very exact, sincere, and true; and that the petitioner deserves under all points of view, to obtain the concession of 6,000 arpens of land he asks for, in a vacant place of the King's domain, and laying, in parts, in the districts St. Genevieve, and of New Bourbon, in order to make thereon a stock farm, as much on account of the essential services he has frequently rendered to the inhabitants of the said two districts, in his capacity of deputy of the King's surveyor, as because he is very honest, and well versed in the art of good cultivation; that he has a great number of cattle, and sufficient means to establish, very advantageously, the said stock farm.

Done in NEW BOURBON, January 10, 1800. PRE. DELASSUS DECUZIERE.

FRANCISCO VALLE, Commandant of St. Genevieve.

The petitioner has the honor to represent to you that not having found a sufficient quantity of land suitable to his views, in one of the districts mentioned in his petition, he prays you to grant him 4,000 arpens in the district of St. Genevieve, situated at a place where there is a large spring which empties into the river Du Chevreuil (Deer creek) bounded by a small branch of Grand river, about three miles east of the Old Mine; and the other 2,000 arpens remaining on river Aux Vases, on the north branch, above the concession of Mr. St. Vrain.

THOMAS MADDIN.

ST. GENEVIEVE, March 1, 1800.

ST. LOUIS, March 15, 1800.

Permission is given to the petitioner to take the concession in the place he asks for, provided it is not to the prejudice of anybody, whether he establishes his stock farm now, or in a more remote time.

DELASSUS.

The said title of concession has been registered, and its compared copy deposited in the archives of the post of New Bourbon, under No. 50.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

June 23, 1806.

The board met agreeably to adjournment. Present: The Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, Esq.

Thomas Maddin, senior, claiming 6,000 arpens of land situate in the district of St. Genevieve, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus, dated January 15, 1800, a certificate of survey of 2,000 arpens, dated 14th December, 1805, and a further warrant of survey for 4,000 arpens, in consequence of the said claimant not having found more than 2,000 arpens in compliance with the aforesaid concession, the same dated 15th March, 1800, and another certificate of survey of 4,000 arpens, dated December 1, 1803.

The board reject this claim, and call for further proof of the date of said concession; they observe that the said claimant had, at the time of obtaining said concession, a wife and seven children, and seven slaves; was a surveyor of the said district, in which capacity he acted from the year 1797 until the change of government. See book No. 1, page 334.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, commissioners.

Thomas Maddin, senior, claiming 6,000 arpens of land. See book No. 1, page 334. It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. See book No. 4, page 470.

August 27, 1833.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, A. G Harrison, and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Thomas Maddin, senior, claiming 2,000 arpens of land, the residue of a concession originally for 6,000 arpens, (of which 4,000 arpens have been confirmed, see Bates' Decisions, page 35,) situated on the waters of river Aux Vases—see book No. 1, page 334; No. 4, page 470; record book A, page 516—produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Charles Dehault Delassus, dated 15th January, 1800, with an additional permit to take the said quantity of land in two different places, and also a recommendation from Pierre Delassus Deluziere, commandant of New Bourbon.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, Esq., one of the commissioners:

State of Missouri, County of St. Genevieve:

John Baptiste Vallé, aged about 72 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with Pierre Delassus Deluziere; that he has frequently seen him write; that he was the commandant of the post and district of New Bourbon in the year 1800; and that the name and signature to the recommendation for said grant, dated the 10th of January, in the year aforesaid, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper hand of the said Pierre Delassus Deluziere. And this deponent further says that he was well acquainted with Charles Dehault Delassus; that he has frequently seen him write; that he was the lieutenant governor of the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1800; and that the name and signature, and handwriting to the said concession, from said Charles Dehault Delassus, of the 15th of January, 1800, and of the 15th of March, in the same year, to said Thomas Maddin, for said 6,000 arpens of land, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Charles Dehault Delassus. And this deponent further says that, at the date of the grant aforesaid, the said Thomas Maddin was a citizen and resident in the then province of Upper Louisiana; that he had a large family, slaves, stock, and other property, and was enterprising and industrious, and that the said Maddin has been from thence hitherto, and still is, a citizen and resident in the country; that he opened a large farm, and built a grist mill and saw mill on some of the land conceded to him.

No. 186.—LOUIS TAYON, CLAIMING 800 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Louis Tayon, son of the commandant of the post of St. Charles of Missouri, has the honor of representing to you that, being on the point of establishing himself, and considering agriculture as the resource the least liable to human vicissitudes, and as offering the best means of ensuring a real estate to his family, expects that, in consideration of his father's services, and of the zeal which himself manifested on all occasions wherein he was required to act in the public service, you will be pleased to grant to him a concession for 800 arpens of land in superficie, to be taken in the district of St. Charles, on the north side of the Missouri. This first favor of the government will be to the petitioner a cause of encouragement, which shall yet increase his desire to render himself more and more useful to the public service.

LOUIS TAYON.

ST. LOUIS, October 17, 1802.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, October 18, 1802.

Whereas we are assured that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to improve the land which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not to the prejudice of any one; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks for, in the place indicated; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to said party, together with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of land of the royal domain.

John Stewart, of Jefferson county, being duly sworn says, that he was well acquainted with the said Elijah Benton, and knows the tract claimed; that in August or September of the year 1803, he was on the tract claimed, and then there was a field of corn of some three or four acres, a garden, a comfortable cabin and out-house; and, to his knowledge, said tract has been inhabited and cultivated ever since, by whom he cannot say.

Mason Frisell, the present claimant, observes to the board, that the above witness, John Stewart, is a different man than John Stewart, of Washington county, who gave testimony in the same case before L. F. Linn, commissioner. See book No. 6, page 339.

NOVEMBER 30, 1833.

F. R. Conway appeared pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Elijah Benton, claiming 640 acres of land, (see page 339, of No. 6,) claimant produces to the board, a paper purporting to be the original survey of the land claimed, said survey made by John Stewart, and dated 12th February, 1806; received for record by Soulard, February 27, 1806.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

John Stewart, being of lawful age, and duly sworn, upon his oath deposes and says that, on the 12th day of February, 1806, he surveyed for Elijah Benton a head or settlement right of 640 acres, including his improvement on Big river; that, at the time this deponent was on the said tract of land to survey the same (at the time above mentioned), there had been, from the appearance of the field, at least two crops made on the place, and, from the appearance of the houses, there was reason to believe that they had been used for two or three years. The deponent further states that he feels great confidence in the belief that at least two crops had been raised on this tract of land at the time he surveyed the same.

JOHN STEWART.

Benjamin Horine, being duly sworn, upon his oath deposes and says that he was in this country before it passed under the government of the United States; that he was well acquainted with the place on Big river settled by Elijah Benton; that, before the change of government took place Elijah Benton had been at work on the place making improvements; that the year after the change of government took place, there was corn raised on the said place by Elijah Benton; that, at the surveying of the said tract by John Stewart, he assisted in carrying the chain, and that, at this time, he is fifty-six years of age.

Thomas Baker, by his legal representative, William Shannon, claiming 640 acres of land situated in Bellevue settlement, county of Washington. See No. 1, page 376; No. 4, page 367; record book B, page 209.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, Esq., one of the commissioners:

State of Missouri, County of Washington:

Uriah Hull, a witness, aged about 56 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was acquainted with Thomas Baker, the original claimant; that he, this witness, came to the country in the year 1804; that he knows the tract of land claimed; that in July, 1804, Thomas Baker offered to sell him his place, and that the witness went with said Baker to the land; that said Baker then lived on the land, had a cabin, and some land cleared, some two acres or more; that the land was then in actual cultivation in such articles as corn and other things that a family would want. There were some fruit trees planted on the place; they were peach trees, then some two feet high; the witness was told the trees were planted the year before; this witness was then hunting a place to settle, was the reason he went to see the land; that Baker continued to inhabit and cultivate the land for several years, and then sold to Shannon.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Stewart, aged about 64 years, being duly sworn as the laws directs, deposeth and saith that, in the month of February, 1806, he surveyed for Thomas Baker a tract of land of 480¾ acres and 32 poles, in the Bellevue settlement, for which he made out a plat of survey, and the same was returned to the proper officer; that he states these facts from the original plat and field notes of the survey made by himself, and still in his possession; that the same was surveyed as the head right of said Thomas Baker, and that he paid the recording fees for the same.

JOHN STEWART.

And also came Uriah Hull, John Stewart, Joseph N. Reyburn, and Timothy Phelps, who being severally sworn as the law directs, depose and say that they were well acquainted with Benjamin Crow, who has heretofore testified in this case; that he was always esteemed a man of good character, standing, and reputation, and that he was generally esteemed a man of veracity and truth, and entitled to full credit in all his statements and testimonies; and these affiants believe such to be the facts.

Personally appeared before me, L. F. Linn, commissioner, Samuel Henderson, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says that he and Thomas Baker were schoolfellows, and were nearly of the same age; that deponent was born in the year 1785; he verily believes there was but four months' difference in their ages; deponent further states that, in the year 1811, he moved into the same settlement, in now Bellevue township, Washington county, at which time the aforementioned Baker did not reside on said tract of land now claimed by him or his legal representatives.

SAMUEL HENDERSON.

Sworn to and subscribed, the day above mentioned.

L. F. LINN.

John Johnston, of lawful age, being duly sworn, deposes and says that in the fall of 1832 he asked Thomas Baker his age; his reply was that he, the said Baker, would be 47 during the next winter.

JOHN JOHNSTON.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

At the same time appeared John T. McNeal, aged about 70, who, after being also duly sworn, deposes and says that he never knew of Thomas Baker having any claim to a settlement claim on Big river or any other place. Said deponent says that Thomas Baker improved a place for his father in the year 1804, which improvement was taken by his father in the fall of 1804, and continued to be held by him as his property. Deponent further states that he heard the father of Thomas Baker say, in the spring of 1805, that said Thomas was not of lawful age at that time. Deponent says he never heard of Thomas Baker having made an improvement for himself, but a tomahawk improvement, which was known by girdling trees.

JOHN T. McNEAL.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

At the same time appeared William Davis, senior, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he emigrated to this country in the year 1809, to Bellevue settlement; that Thomas Baker took said deponent to a tract of land on Big river, which said Baker claimed as his property; deponent saw a pole pen, like a hog pen; that he saw a few rails split, lying on the ground; that this was all the improvement he saw on said place or parcel of land, until the year 1811, when Benjamin Harden took possession of it as public land, who, becoming alarmed at the prospect of an Indian war, quit the country, and left it in the care of his nephew, Joseph Harden. Deponent says that, in the year 1812, whilst the said Joseph Harden was on a campaign against the Indians, Thomas Baker broke open the house of said Harden, took possession of it, and kept it until he sold his claim. Deponent further says that Thomas Baker told him that his father and Benjamin Crow notified all those who claimed places to be on them by a certain day; and accordingly, on the day thus appointed, the said Thomas Baker and many others did go and remain on certain pieces of land, and that the father of the said Thomas Baker and the said Crow did go round, and saw the said Thomas and others thus in possession or occupancy of certain lands, and report says that they afterwards went to St. Louis as witnesses to prove up their claims to land thus occupied as aforesaid.

Question by William Shannon, as assignee of Thomas Baker:

Question. Were you a resident in Upper Louisiana, or were you ever in said territory previous to 1809?

Answer by witness. No, I emigrated to the territory in Upper Louisiana in 1809.

		Acres.
189	John Paul.....	640	Settlement right.	.....	John Stewart, D. S., 22d February, 1806; received for record by Soulard, S. G., 27th February, 1806; Bellevue township.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

JUNE 26, 1806.

The board met agreeably to adjournment. Present: The Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, Esq.

John Paul, claiming 1,048 arpens and 15 perches of land situate in Bellevue, district aforesaid, (of St. Genevieve,) produces a survey of the same, dated February 22, and certified the 27th, 1806.

William Ashbrook, being duly sworn, says that claimant settled the said tract of land in March, 1804; that he has been an inhabitant of the country for many years past, and had, on 20th November, 1803, a wife and four children.

The board reject this claim. No. 1, page 371.

SEPTEMBER 1, 1810.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John Paul, claiming 1,048 arpens and 15 perches of land, (see book No. 1, page 371,) produces to the board a certificate and permission to settle, on file. It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. See No. 4, page 482.

DECEMBER 2, 1833.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

John Paul, claiming 640 acres of land, under a settlement right, on Big river, Bellevue township. See record book C, page 3; No. 1, page 371; No. 4, page 482.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner: John McNeal personally appeared before L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners, &c.

John McNeal, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says that he was well acquainted with John Paul, who emigrated, he thinks, to this country in 1799. In 1803 said Paul made a settlement on Big river, in Bellevue township, and had permission from Joseph Deselle to make an improvement. In the spring of 1803 said Paul lived in a camp, and was clearing land, and raised a crop of corn that year. Deponent further states that said Paul continued on said place for several years, and gradually improved the land by enlarging his fields and improving his houses. Said deponent saw peach trees growing on said land in 1804.

JOHN T. McNEAL.

Sworn to and subscribed, May 7, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

At the same time appeared Martin Ruggles, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says that in the summer of 1804 he saw Mr. John Paul, with his family, in a log cabin on a tract of land claimed by said Paul, on Big river, Bellevue settlement; said Paul had a small field of corn growing, say two or three acres. Deponent thinks Paul was forty years of age.

MARTIN RUGGLES.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Personally appeared before L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners, &c., Uriah Hull, aged about fifty-six years, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says that he came to this now county of Washington, formerly St. Genevieve county, in the month of July, 1804. Deponent further says that he was at the house of John Paul, on Big river, in the month of August following; said Paul had built there a house and stable; had three or four acres of ground cleared; peach trees growing. Deponent further says he saw corn growing on the said land at that time. Next year, 1805, said Paul had improved his place by opening five acres more, which deponent cultivated for said Paul. He further deposes and says he ate, in 1805, peaches from the trees planted on this land, by Paul, some years before.

No. 190.—Bede Moore, claiming 640 acres.

Number.	Name of original claimant.	Quantity.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
190	Bede Moore....	Acres. 640	Settlement right.	.....	John Hawkins, D. S., 4th January, 1806; received for record by Soulard, S. G., 26th February, 1806; on the waters of river Saline, now county of Perry.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

June 24, 1806.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: The Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, Esquire.

Bede Moore, claiming as aforesaid 935 arpens 35 perches of land, situate as aforesaid, produces a certificate from Peter D. Deluziere that he had permitted said claimant to settle on vacant lands, dated December 3, 1805, and a survey of said land, taken January 4, and certified February 26, 1806.

Peter Tucker, being duly sworn, says that claimant settled on said tract of land in the fall of 1803, moved his family on the same, and actually inhabited it for about three months of that year; that he cleared and fenced in a few acres, and claims no other land in his own name, in this Territory, and had then a wife and two children. The board reject this claim. See book No. 1, page 345.

April 20, 1810.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Bede Moore, claiming 935 arpens 35 perches of land. See book No. 1, page 345. It is the opinion of a majority of the board that this claim ought not to be granted; Frederick Bates, commissioner, voting for the granting of 300 arpens. See No. 4, page 338.

December 2, 1833.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Bede Moore, claiming 640 acres of land situate on the waters of the Saline, now in the county of Perry, (see record book B, page 242; minutes, No. 1, page 345; No. 4, page 338,) produces a paper purporting to be an affidavit of Pre. Delassus Deluziere, formerly commandant of New Bourbon, certifying that, prior to the 20th December, 1803, he gave permission to the said Bede Moore to choose lands, and settle in the district of the said New Bourbon.

State of Missouri, County of Perry:

Nicholas Tucker, aged fifty-one years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with Bede Moore, the original claimant; that he came to this country, then the province of Upper Louisiana, in June, 1803; and the witness is also well acquainted with the land claimed, and that the claimant was settled and living on the same in November, 1803; there was a house on the land, into which the claimant went; that he saw claimant engaged in getting rails; that there was a small piece of land under fence; that claimant remained on the land himself till some time in 1804; and that the tract of land has been improved, inhabited and cultivated ever since.

NICHOLAS TUCKER.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, L. F. Linn, commissioner, this 8th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

And also came Joseph Manning, a witness, aged sixty-two years, who, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with Bede Moore, the claimant; that he came to this country in the year 1803; that, in the summer and fall of 1803, he was settled on the land claimed, and lived on the land; witness saw him there with his wife and children; that there was a small piece of land under fence; witness saw turnips growing there; that the claimant remained there for some time, and that the said tract of land has been continually under habitation and cultivation ever since.

No. 191.—James Hawkins, claiming 640 acres.

Number.	Name of original claimant.	Quantity.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
191	James Hawkins.	Acres. 640	Settlement right.	.....	John Stewart, D. S., 15th January, 1806; received for record by A. Soulard, S. G., 28th February, 1806; near Mine à Breton.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

April 10, 1810.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, Esqrs.

James Hawkins, claiming 748 arpens 68 perches of land, situate on Mill creek, near Mine à Breton, district of St. Genevieve, produces to the board a plat of survey, dated 25th (15th) January, 1806, certified to be received for record 28th February, 1806.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim is transcribed from the rough minutes, as perpetuated by the board on the 2d November, 1808. Permission to settle on file.

John Strickland, sworn, says that, in the fall of 1803, claimant cut logs on this tract, and, in the spring of 1804, put up a camp and planted corn; lived in the same while raising his crop that year; has not done anything on the tract since.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. See book No. 4, page 315.

December 3, 1833.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

James Hawkins, claiming 640 acres of land situate near Mine à Breton. See book B, page 246; No. 4, page 315.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

John Stewart, of lawful age, being first duly sworn in the above case, deposeth and saith that, in January or February, 1805, this deponent assisted in bringing a cart load of corn from off the improvement of James Hawkins, and took the corn out of corn-crib; the cart was sent for another load. There were also on James Hawkins' improvement, at the same time, corn stocks of the growth of the previous season, and off of which he supposed the corn to have come which deponent assisted in hauling. This claim lies about four miles from Potosi, on the Mineral fork, and is known by the name of Hawkins' improvement. This deponent surveyed this claim for said Hawkins, and the annexed diagram is a just representation of the claim of Hawkins, containing 640 acres. This deponent knows that, after James Hawkins removed from his claim aforesaid, a certain James Scott occupied the field of Hawkins, from whence this deponent assisted in hauling the corn aforesaid; but whether obtained by purchase from Hawkins, this deponent cannot say.

JOHN STEWART.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Paul, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, deposeth, and saith that he came to Mine à Breton, with his family, in the year 1802, and became acquainted with James Hawkins, the above claimant, in the latter part of that year. In the fall of the year 1803, the said James Hawkins wished to sell this deponent his settlement and improvement made by him on the Mine creek, or Mineral fork, about four miles from Mine à Breton, in Washington county, in a northwest direction. This affiant further states that James Scott, now deceased, lived for many years on said claim, and until he died; and his widow, Constance Scott, and a part of the children, now live on said claim. How James Scott obtained this claim from Hawkins, this deponent does not know. This deponent has also heard that Samuel Perry, late of Potosi, and now deceased, by his last will and testament, gratuitously gave to said Constance Scott, widow, all his right to said claim. This deponent further states that James Scott died insolvent.

JOHN PAUL.

John Anderson, by his heirs and legal representatives, claiming six hundred and forty acres of land, situate in Bellevue settlement, county of Washington. See minutes, book No. 1, page 357; No. 4, page 334; book B, page 215.

State of Missouri, County of Washington:

John T. McNeal, aged about seventy years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with the original claimant, John Anderson, usually called John Crow Anderson; that he settled on the land claimed in the year 1802 or 1803; that he built a small house on the same, and made a small field of some two or three acres, and sowed turnips thereon in the fall of 1803; that he understood the claimant was there at times continuing to clear and improve on the same; that the claimant, as he understood then, sold the claim, and that John Bear or Bar took possession of the same, and lived on the same, and continued to improve and cultivate the same till he died; and at his death James Bear, his son, took possession of the same, and continued in possession till he left the country, when the same was left in possession of William Bear, his uncle, who is still in the actual possession and inhabitation of the same.

JOHN T. McNEAL.

Henry Tucker, by his legal representatives, claiming 949 arpens of land situate on Custard or Cedar creek, waters of the Saline creek. See record book B, page 242; minutes, No. 5, page 505, where the same is not granted.

Beverly Allen, being duly sworn, says that, in the year 1825, he had in his possession a plat of survey of a tract of land claimed by William Hancock and Britain West, as assignees of Henry Tucker, who claimed the same as a settlement right; he believes that the document appeared to be the original survey of the claim, for what quantity he does not recollect; that on the back of the plat were endorsed the words "confirmed, 250 acres," (or "arpens,") "J. L. Donaldson;" which endorsement and signature he believes, from a comparison of the same with the handwriting and signature of said Donaldson on papers in the office of the recorder of land titles, to be the handwriting and signature of J. L. Donaldson, once a commissioner of land titles under the act of Congress providing for their adjustment in the Territory of Missouri, &c. By whom the survey was made, he does not recollect. He also states that the said plat was lost or stolen out of his office at St. Genevieve in the year 1825 or 1826; that the land embraced in the survey lay, as it purported, on the north branch of the south fork of the Saline creek, in the old district of St. Genevieve, Missouri. See No. 6, page 337.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

PERRY COUNTY, May 2, 1833.

Personally appeared before me, L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners, &c., Mr. Roland Boyd, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says he has resided in this State of Missouri, formerly Upper Louisiana, upwards of thirty-one or thirty-two years, near St. Genevieve, and knows that a settlement was made by Henry Tucker on the Cedar fork of Saline creek in the year 1803, and was cultivated by him in 1804. Said Tucker built a cabin on this land in 1803, and lived in the same, and cultivated six or seven acres in 1804. Deponent says he always heard, and has every reason to believe, said Tucker had permission to settle on this land from the Spanish authorities. He further states that all the settlement claims in the neighborhood, all of which were of a similar nature, and resting on the same testimony for confirmation, were confirmed by the former board of commissioners. The deponent had a claim confirmed by said board. On the back of the plat of Tucker's survey was written by J. L. Donaldson, secretary or clerk to the board, "confirmed." He, deponent, as well as all concerned, thought for many years said tract was confirmed, and never knew or heard, until a few years back, that this claim was not confirmed, for he himself heard the commissioners pronounce this claim "granted."

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Henry Tucker states that, in the year 1802, he settled a place on Cedar or Custard fork of the Saline creek, now in the county of Perry, and State of Missouri, and, in that year and the following, cleared about three acres, as he thinks, and, in the year 1803, raised corn on his improvement, built a cabin and corn-crib on it, and resided on it with his family during that year, (1803.) The same is the place where William Hancock now resides. The said Henry Tucker states that, on the 10th day of February, 1804, he sold and transferred his said improvement, and conveyed it by deed of that date, which is herewith filed as a part of this statement, and that he has no claim on said improvement, nor does he claim anything by virtue thereof.

No. 195.—CAMILLE DELASSUS, CLAIMING 6,000 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, &c.:

Camille Delassus, officer of militia by brevet, residing in New Bourbon of Illinois, humbly supplicates, and has the honor to represent to you, that having lately married with one Miss De Villars, daughter of a former commandant of St. Genevieve, and having employed a part of his means, and those of his wife, in purchasing a great number of all kind of cattle, it is indispensable, in order to provide for their maintenance, that he should establish a grazing farm, (vacherie,) and that such farm, to be durable and profitable, cannot be less than the quantity of six thousand arpens in superficie. For the purpose of forming such an establishment, he has made searches for a tract of land, which should not be previously granted to any person, and should be part of the King's domain; that he has found such a convenient tract at Terre Bleue, in the district of St. Genevieve; that he could not make such establishment on the concession which has been already granted to him towards river Platte; on account of those being mineral lands, they are unfit to raise and maintain cattle; that in consequence of the orders given, in 1793, to your predecessor, by the baron de Carondelet, late governor general of this colony, to grant to the sons of Mr. De Luziere (father of the petitioner) all the land which they should think necessary, the petitioner applies to you with confidence, sir, praying that you will be pleased to grant to him the said concession of six thousand arpens in the place here above designated, in order to form and establish thereon a grazing farm; in so doing, he shall not cease to pray for the preservation of your days.

CAMILLE DELASSUS.

NEW BOURBON, September 9, 1802.

St. Louis of Illinois, September 19, 1802.

Cognizance being taken of the foregoing petition, and in consequence of the orders of the baron de Carondelet, late governor of these provinces, under date of 8th May, 1793, by which it is enjoined "to give to each son of Don Pedro Carlos Delassus concessions according to their means;" being convinced that the quantity which he solicits is corresponding to his means; considering, besides, that he deserves this favor on account of his good services, having been employed, on various occasions, as commandant, interim, of the post of New Bourbon, and havimg served as interpreter of the English language, at the request of the actual commandant, without enjoying any salary since he has established himself in the said post of New Bourbon, I do grant to him the six thousand arpens in superficie, for himself and his heirs, in order that he may have the benefit of an establishment as useful to the party concerned as to the public, on account of the difficulties which are experienced to this day in procuring meat, the cattle being scattered over the royal domain; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the said party in possession of the said quantity of land, in the place which he will select on the royal domain, provided it is not prejudicial to anybody; and, afterwards, he shall make out a plat and certificate of his survey, in order to serve to said party to solicit the title in form from the intendant, to whom belongs, by royal order, the granting and distributing all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

LETTER.

I send back to you the original titles of the concession granted to Mr. François Vallé, of St. Genevieve, who transferred the same to Mr. Dodge, and of which he, Dodge, has ceded the half to Mr. Tardiveau, who has made a donation of it to you, with the examination (visa) and approbation you desire.

By this same opportunity I write to Mr. Zenon Trudeau to grant to you the tract on which you may have made a discovery of lead mines, with the adjacent lands, in sufficient extent for the working of said mines, provided, however, they shall not have been previously granted to other persons.

Your son-in-law and your sons shall have also a plantation, as you desire, in any part of Illinois they will choose, and of an extent proportionate to the kind of cultivation and establishment they may intend to make. This will serve as an answer to your letter No. 3. May God have you in his holy keeping.

No. 196.—E. Parent and E. Goverot, claiming 800 arpens.

To Mr. Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor, and commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois, &c.:

Etienne Parent and Etienne Goverot, inhabitants of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon, humbly supplicate and represent, that wishing to make a farm for the purpose of maintaining cattle during the hard weather in winter, which they cannot do around the villages, they have found a spot fit for such an establishment, and also suitable for a sugar camp, the place being abundant with canes and maple trees; the said place is situated on a branch of the south fork of the river Saline, to the right in ascending the said branch, and consists of ten arpens in length on said fork, to begin at the mouth of the said branch, running towards the north, by eighty arpens in depth. Therefore, the petitioners apply to you, sir, praying that you may be pleased to grant them, for them, their heirs and assigns, in full property, the concession of the said land, such as it is here above described, not only for raising cattle and making sugar thereon, but also to cultivate according as the nature of the soil will permit. In so doing, they shall not cease to pray for the preservation of your days.

ST. GENEVIEVE, March 4, 1833.

Personally appeared before the undersigned, one of the commissioners appointed, &c., Joseph Pratte, who, being duly sworn, gives testimony as follows, in the above claim:

Question, by the agent for claimants. How old are you, and how long have you lived in this State?

Answer, by deponent. I am fifty-nine years of age, and I was born in St. Genevieve.

Question. Are you acquainted with a concession which Etienne Parent and Etienne Govereau obtained from Zenon Trudeau in the year 1798, on a branch of the south fork of the Saline, for 800 arpens?

Answer. I have never seen the concession.

Question. Have you ever seen, or do you know that Etienne Govereau, deceased, made an improvement on this concession of 800 arpens on the south fork of the Saline?

Answer. I have seen the improvement which E. Govereau made on the Saline, and I was there when Govereau was making sugar; and it was a general rule here, that every individual made sugar upon his own claim.

Question. About what time did you see this improvement of Etienne Govereau, deceased, on the south fork of the Saline?

Answer. It was between the years 1798 and 1800, but the precise time I do not recollect.

Question, by commissioner. Do you know of any other grant of land to Etienne Govereau and Etienne Parent?

Answer. I know of none.

No. 197.—ANTOINE and JOSEPH VILLARS, CLAIMING 6,000 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana:

Antoine Villars and J. Athanas Dubreuil Villars, sons of Don Louis Villars, formerly an officer of his Catholic Majesty, humbly supplicate, and have the honor to represent to you that they are desirous of making a plantation as well as a stock farm; therefore, they wish that you would grant and concede to them six thousand arpens of land, to be taken in a vacant place of the domain; the petitioners hope to obtain this favor of your goodness in remembrance of the services of their father. In so doing, they shall never cease to pray for the preservation of your days.

ANTOINE VILLARS.
JOSEPH VILLARS.

Done at ST. GENEVIEVE, October 1, 1799.

We, the undersigned, commandants of the posts and districts of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon, do certify to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana that the petitioners have lost their father, and that they are worthy, under every point of view, to obtain the concession which they ask of the government, as much in consequence of the services of their said father, deceased, as in consideration of their good conduct and industry in works of agriculture; besides, they possess sufficient means to establish and keep in good order a plantation, with a great number of cattle, in any place they may choose, which shall not be previously granted to any person, and shall make a part of the King's domain.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, October 11, 1799.

Due attention being given to the foregoing information of the commandants of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon, and being convinced of the truth of the statement made in the above petition; considering the services rendered by their father, deceased, and the good conduct of the petitioners, which make them deserving of the regard of the government, I do grant to them, in fee, for them, their heirs, and others who may represent their right, the land they solicit, provided it is not prejudicial to anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the parties interested in possession of the quantity of land they ask in the place designated; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to the said parties, with his certificate, in order that it shall serve to them to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

No. 199.—John Burk, claiming 1,000 arpens.

To Don Francis Vallé, captain of militia, civil and military commandant of the post of St. Genevieve:

John Burk, father of a family, and an inhabitant of the village of St. Genevieve, where he has carried on, for a number of years, his trade of blacksmith and farrier, humbly supplicates, and has the honor to represent to you, that all the lands in the vicinity of the said village having been granted to its inhabitants by the government, he now finds himself deprived of the means of procuring wood for his coal kilns, which is an object of actual necessity for the carrying on of his trade; and that to this day he has never asked anything from the beneficent government under the domination of which he, every day, congratulates himself to live; therefore, he hopes that you will be pleased to have the goodness to grant to him, in full property, a concession of 1,000 arpens of land in superficie, to be taken in a vacant place of the King's domain, at his choice. The petitioner presumes respectfully to recommend himself to your justice, and expects to receive a favor which will yet add to his attachment for the beneficient government of which you are the worthy representative.

No. 201.—SAMUEL DORSEY, CLAIMING 800 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana:

Samuel Dorsey, surgeon for the king, in the post and district of New Madrid, humbly supplicates, and has the honor to represent, that, since about nine years that he has been employed in his Majesty's service he has always shown his zeal and activity in fulfilling the duties of his station, being ready at all hours to go where his services were needed, and attending the poor gratuitously. For such long, slavish, and generous services, the petitioner has not received, to this day, any other reward but the small salary allowed him by the government, which is very far from being sufficient for the maintenance of his family, which is composed of ten persons. These reasons, together with the petitioner's confidence in the justice and beneficence of the government he has the honor to serve, induce him now to apply to you, sir, and pray that you will take into consideration the length and faithfulness of his services, and grant him, in way of gratification, the quantity of 800 arpens of land in superficie in the district of Cape Girardeau, where the petitioner intends to settle with his family, and unite to the exercise of his profession that of agriculture. The petitioner presumes to expect this favor of your equity, and he shall never cease to pray Heaven for the preservation of your days.

SAMUEL DORSEY.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, December 13, 1799.

We, commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau, have the honor to inform the lieutenant governor that the petitioner presented himself to us, and communicated his desire to fix himself in this settlement, and obtain therein a concession of 800 arpens of land. To his desire we willingly acceded, in consideration of the utility of his profession, and of his personal merit; for these reasons we are induced to recommend him to the generosity of the government, as being worthy to obtain the favor he solicits.

L. LORIMIER.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, December 14, 1799.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, December 28, 1799.

In consequence of the information given by the commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau, Don Louis Lorimier, and of the circumstances stated by him, (siendo uncaso exceptuado,) it being an unordinary case; in consideration of his zeal and good services, and that the petitioner has more than the number of people and the means necessary to improve the land he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any person; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks on a vacant place of the royal domain, in the jurisdiction of said post; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same, together with his certificate, to the party, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands belong ng to the royal domain.

L. LORIMIER.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, January 19, 1803.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 30, 1803.

I, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel in the royal armies, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, and sub-delegate of the general intendancy of these provinces, having examined the foregoing list of sundry inhabitants who have settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, with the approbation of the commandant, Don Louis Lorimier; considering the just and sound motives which have induced him to permit to them the provisional occupancy of various tracts of the royal domain, all which motives contribute to the best advantage of his Majesty's service, and, also, of his subjects; the industry, honesty and fidelity of the colonists being thus forwarded and encouraged by just and well-deserved rewards; considering, also, the evident difficulty which the greatest part of them have to make out their petitions, and present them, individually, to the competent authority, all which is more fully explained in the official letter of the said commandant, Don Louis Lorimier, under date of 19th January, of the current year, I have thought fit to approve, confirm and ratify the good and judicious dispositions of the said commandant in favor of the 164 inhabitants above named, and by the present decree I do grant and concede to all and each one of them the corresponding quantity of land annexed to his name, as expressed in the preceding list, amounting, in total quantity, to 50,000 arpens of land in superficie, for them to enjoy and dispose of their respective concessions as being their legitimate property. And the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, after having taken cognizance of this title, (which has to remain deposited in the archives of Cape Girardeau,) shall put each one of the interested in possession of his corresponding quantity of land, in the place occupied or selected by him, provided it belongs to the royal domain, and is not prejudicial to any person; after the execution of which, corresponding certificates of survey shall be expedited to them, in order to enable them to obtain the titles of concessions in form from the intendancy general of these provinces.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

In the case of John Bollinger, son of John, claiming 640 acres of land, (see page 439 of this book, No. 6,) the following testimony was taken by L. F. Linn commissioner:

William Bollinger states that he is aged fifty-six years; that he moved to and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, in the year 1800; that he was well acquainted with John Bollinger, son of John, who also settled in said district in the year 1800. He knows of the said John making an improvement on South White Water, in said district, in the spring of 1801, in which year it was run off by B. Cousin, the surveyor. In said year a house was built on said place, and a garden made; the next year, 1802, more ground was cleared, and corn raised on it. The said place has been in cultivation ever since by different persons. The said place has, in part, been entered, as this affiant is informed, and believes. The said place was inhabited and cultivated in the years 1801 and 1802, by John Bollinger.

John Guething, claiming five hundred and eighty-four arpens eighty-one and three-quarters perches of land on Hubble's creek, county of Cape Girardeau. Minutes, book No. 3, page 512; book 4, page 261.

Robert Crump, duly sworn, says that claimant began to build a house on this tract in 1803; planted nurseries of fruit trees. Witness understands that claimant was induced to leave this place by the persuasions of Lorimier, late commandant, who is said to have promised claimant that he should have his head right, without making the usual improvements and cultivation, in consideration of his pursuing his mechanical employments in the village. Every year, since claimant first took possession, large quantities of sugar have been made under arrangements with the claimant, under whose name the place has always gone. It has ever been considered as his property. Whenever persons have been employed in making sugar on the premises, they inhabited the place. Establishments suitable for such operations have been made and kept up. From the appearance of the trees in 1803, witness conjectures that there must have been sugar made in former years.

Robert Gibouny, duly sworn, says that in 1798 sugar was made on this tract, and believes that it was also made every following year, though witness has no certain knowledge. In 1803 this land was claimed by Guething, and considered as his land to this time. See recorder's minutes, page 89.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

George Hacker, being sworn, says he came to the district of Cape Girardeau in April, 1802; in the fall of that year he saw the said John, and knew him from that time up to his death, about the year 1820. The said John was a carpenter by trade, and worked on the King of Spain's house, at the town of Cape Girardeau. He also worked at his trade for other persons in said district; he died without children, leaving Elizabeth as his wife and sole heir.

Elyah Dougherty states that he moved to, and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, in 1800; that he was well acquainted with John Dougherty, who came to the country at the same time, that is, in 1800. The said John Dougherty was a mechanic, a carpenter by trade, and worked on and assisted in building the commandant's house, at the town of Cape Girardeau, in 1801 and 1802. This affiant well recollects hearing the said John apply to the commandant, Don Louis Lorimier, for land soon after his arrival in the above district, in June, 1800. Lorimier told him to select his place, and he would take care of it for him; that, as he was a mechanic, there was no need for him to improve his land, and that he (Lorimier) wanted him to work on his house in the Cape. In the month of July, 1800, this affiant went with the said John when he selected his place on the waters of Byrd's creek, about four miles from the present town of Jackson, in said district. This affiant assisted the said John in making what was called a tomahawk improvement, that is, clearing out a place to build a house, and making brush heaps; after which, the said John went to work on the commandant's house, as stated above.

He was well acquainted with John Dougherty, who moved to and settled in said district in said year 1800. The said John was a mechanic, a carpenter by trade. In the year 1800, this affiant was present when the said John applied to the Spanish commandant, Don Louis Lorimier, for land. Lorimier told him he should have land, and had his name put down on the books, but that he wanted him to work for him, said Lorimier, on his house at the Cape. The said John hesitated, when Lorimier said, "Your land no run away; mechanics are not obliged to cultivate their land, and I will take care of yours for you." This affiant knows that the said John selected his land on the waters of Byrd's creek, in said district, in the summer of 1800; commenced a camp, and made brush heaps on said place at said time. This affiant also knows that the said John worked for the said commandant, on his house in Cape Girardeau, in the years 1801 and 1802, under the faith, as this affiant understood and believes, that it was not necessary for him to improve his land. The said John lived in said district up to the time of his death, in 1829 or 1830.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Ithamer Hubble, being duly sworn, says that he is about 70 years of age; that he moved to Upper Louisiana in the year 1797, and settled in the then district of Cape Girardeau, where he has resided ever since. The said Ebenezer Hubble came to this country at the same time, and settled in said district of Cape Girardeau, where he has also resided ever since. In the year 1803, the said Ebenezer obtained a written permission from Lorimier, the Spanish commandant at Cape Girardeau, to settle lands, and in the same year, that is, in 1803, improved land on the west side of White Water, in said district of Cape Girardeau, and sowed the same in turnips the fall of that year. The said land has been in cultivation by the said Ebenezer ever since, with the exception of two or three years at different times, and with the exception of a part of said claim which has been entered by one Morris Young. The said head right or settlement right was duly surveyed by the proper officer in the fall of 1805. That part of said claim which has been entered by the said Young, includes nearly all the tillable land in said survey, the balance being hilly and broken.

James Cox, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land situate on Randall's creek, county of Cape Girardeau. See record book B, page 320; minutes, book No. 4, page 60; No. 5, page 15.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Richard Waller states that he was well acquainted with James Cox; he first knew him in the district of Cape Girardeau, in the year 1798. He knows of the said James inhabiting and cultivating land on the waters of Randall's creek, in said district, Upper Louisiana, in the years 1801, 1802, 1803, and 1804, and since. The said James had a house on said place, and about six or seven acres cleared in the years mentioned above; there were also stables and corn-cribs on said place.

David Green, who is fifty years of age, states that he moved to and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, in the year 1800; that, in the spring of 1802 or 1803, which he cannot positively state, he was passing from the Big swamp to Byrd's settlement, in said district, when he came in view of two or three improvements on Randall's creek, where he met James Cox, whom he had known in said district for several years. This affiant asked the said James who lived there, and was told by the said James that his father lived at the left hand place, and that he, the said James, owned the other, and lived there. This affiant was well acquainted with the said James, though he had never been at his house. The said James continued to live in said district up to the time of his death, one or two years ago. He was a farmer, and followed that occupation.

John Patterson, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land situate on Hubble's creek, county of Cape Girardeau. See record book B, page 320.

THE STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Hugh Criswell states that he moved to and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, in the year 1801, and that he is well acquainted with John Patterson, then, and still, a resident of said district. This affiant knows of the said Patterson obtaining permission to settle from Lorimier, the commandant at Cape Girardeau, in said year, and that he actually settled a place on Hubble's creek, in said district, in the year 1801, and in 1802 he, said Patterson, raised corn and other grain on said place. This affiant knows that the said Patterson inhabited and cultivated said place in the years 1802, 1803, 1804, and 1805. The said Patterson was a mechanic, a blacksmith by trade, which trade he carried on at said place in the years mentioned above. The said Patterson was a man with a family previous to the change of government, consisting of his wife and three children. The said Patterson had a large hewed log house on said place; an orchard of both apples and peaches, previous to 1804. The quantity of cleared land this affiant cannot state; there were, perhaps, seven or eight acres.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Moses Byrd states that he moved to and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, in the year 1799; that he was well acquainted with Jeptha Cornelius, who moved to and settled a place on Cane creek, a branch of Byrd's creek, in said district, either in the latter part of the year 1801, or fore part of the year 1802, which, this affiant is not sure. The said Cornelius built a house on said land previous to 1803, and raised two crops of corn on said land; and in September, 1803, sold and transferred the said land and improvements to one Joseph Young. The said Young sold and transferred the said land to Henry Howard who moved on the said place early in the year 1804, when the said Cornelius moved out of the house on said place. The said Howard continued to inhabit and cultivate said place until his death, which happened some eight or ten years ago. His widow and family still inhabit said plantation. This affiant recollects that said place was inhabited and cultivated many years after its first settlement, either by Cornelius or Howard, until many years after 1804. The said Cornelius had a family, consisting of his wife, himself, and a good many children; the precise number this affiant cannot state. Henry Howard also had a large family, consisting of his wife and children; but the precise number this affiant cannot state. He speaks of their families as they were when they first moved to the country. This affiant lived, at the time, in the neighborhood of said place mentioned above.

Matthias Bollinger, claiming 640 acres of land situate in Cape Girardeau county. See record book B, page 320; minutes, book No. 4, pages 33 and 280.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Girardeau:

This day personally appeared before. L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners appointed, &c., Adam Stotler, a resident of Cape Girardeau county, of lawful age, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with Matthias Bolinger, senior. This affiant emigrated in company with him from North Carolina to Upper Louisiana, (now State of Missouri,) in the year 1799; that the said Bollinger settled on the waters of White Water, in the district of Cape Girardeau, in said year. This affiant knows that in the year 1803 the said Matthias Bollinger obtained from Louis Lorimier, commandant of Cape Girardeau district or post, an additional permission of 300 arpens of land, so that his original permission to settle 500 arpens might be augmented to 800 arpens, his family consisting of himself, his wife and seven children. This affiant assisted to carry the chain in surveying the additional 300 arpens in 1803. This affiant knows that the said Bollinger has lived on the place he first settled when he came to the country, in 1799, and now lives on the same. Being a farmer, he has made valuable improvements in buildings and orchards. This affiant further states that, on the additional permission which the said Bollinger received, he has gone on improving the same, making a plantation, building a fine house, barn, and other necessary buildings, and growing a fine orchard; this affiant says he knows the said Bollinger commenced improving and cultivated the same in 1800 up to the present time.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

This day personally appeared before me, Lewis F Linn, one of the commissioners appointed under, &c., Matthias Bollinger and Adam Stotler, of Cape Girardeau county, of lawful age, who, after being duly sworn according to law, depose and say that they were well acquainted with Conrad Stotler both in North Carolina and in Upper Louisiana, (now State of Missouri;) that he came, in company with these affiants and a number of others, to the district of Cape Girardeau in the year 1799, then under the Spanish government; that the said Conrad Stotler got a permission from Louis Lorimier, then commandant of the district of Cape Girardeau, to settle on 500 arpens of land, on White Water, in said district; that the said Stotler went on to improve the same by building dwelling-houses, barns, and other necessary buildings, and planted an orchard, which bears fine fruits, and continued to live on and cultivate the said land for 21 or 22 years; that, after the said Conrad had settled, improved, and lived on said land some time, the said Louis Lorimier, commandant, gave to the said Conrad an additional permission, in 1803, so as to make his original permission 700 arpens; which addition the said Conrad laid adjoining his 500 arpens tract, and had the same surveyed. These affiants further state that said Conrad Stotler commenced cultivating the first 500 arpens tract in 1800.

STATE OF MISSOURI, Cape Girardeau County:

Personally appeared before me, L. F. Linn, commissioner, Robert Green, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposeth and saith, that some time early in the year 1802, he was at Louis Lorimier's, former commandant at the post of Cape Girardeau, (Upper Louisiana,) who introduced a conversation with this deponent, by stating that David Green, son of the deponent, had applied to him, some time previous, for a grant of land, or permission to settle on public land; that he, Lorimier, intended the said David should have a certain tract or piece of land that joined this deponent on the north. David Green was anxious to go and improve the same; but, as deponent had settled on a new place, and stood in need of his son's assistance to open a farm on his own land, he told his son David, if he would first assist this deponent to open and improve his farm, he would then assist his son David to improve his tract. David expressed some fears if he did not immediately improve his tract it might be taken from him. Some time after, this deponent saw Lorimier, the above named commandant, and held a conversation with him on the subject, who assured the deponent that, as David Green was settled permanently in the country, it was not necessary for him to improve the land immediately, but at some subsequent time; that his grant should not be taken from him on that account. Some time after this, Bartholomew Cousin, the surveyor, came to this deponent's house, and informed his son, David Green, that the commandant had ordered him to survey his claim of land, which he did, and was paid by said David for the same. The tract of land claimed by said David has been inhabited and cultivated twenty-three or twenty-four years ago, and is now inhabited and cultivated as the property of said David. This deponent states that he will be seventy-eight years of age in September next, to the best of his knowledge and belief.

George Henderson, claiming 300 arpens of land situated in Cape Girardeau county, (see record book B, page 320; minutes, book No. 4, pages 82 and 304,) produces a copy of an affidavit of Louis Lorimier, certified by the clerk of Cape Girardeau circuit court, proving that said Henderson has served in the military expedition to New Madrid in December, 1802.

Isaac Williams, aged about 53 years, and Moses Byrd, aged about 52 years, being duly sworn, depose and say that they first became acquainted with the said George Henderson in the then district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, now county of Cape Girardeau, State of Missouri, as early as the year 1800; that he, said Henderson, was then an inhabitant of said district, and a subject of the King of Spain, and has continued to reside in said district ever since; that in the year 1802 the Indians commenced hostilities on the inhabitants of New Madrid, in said province, now Missouri, and killed some; and for the purpose of repelling said Indians, the commandant of said district issued an order in December of the year 1802, calling upon the militia of said district of Cape Girardeau to turn out and march to said district of New Madrid to repel the Indian attack aforesaid; that, amongst others, by the orders of said commandant of the district of Cape Girardeau, the said Henderson, as one amongst the troops, was called out, and about the middle of December, A. D. 1802, marched to the said district of New Madrid on said expedition, and was by said Spanish authority kept in said service until some time in the month of January, A. D. 1803, having been absent on said expedition in continuation six weeks; that the said commandant, Louis Lorimier, said Spanish authority, promised to pay said troops in grants for land, as a reward for said services; that each of the said men employed in said service received grants of land for the same, which has never been confirmed.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Solomon Thorn, by his legal representatives, claiming 600 arpens of land situate in Cape Girardeau county. See record book B, page 320; minutes, book No. 5, page 508.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

This day personally appeared before me, Lewis F. Linn, one of the commissioners, &c., Robert Giboney, of lawful age, who, being sworn according to law, deposeth and saith that he emigrated to the district of Cape Girardeau, then under the Spanish government, in A. D. 1797. This affiant recollects that, in 1798 or 1799, Solomon Thorn emigrated and settled at Cape Girardeau; that the said Thorn made a settlement and improvement, built a dwelling-house, raised a shop for a gunsmith shop, (as said Thorn was a gunsmith by trade.) This affiant knows that Louis Lorimier, commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau, frequently gave orders to the Indians to go to Thorn, in order to get work done in and about their guns, &c. This affiant knows that said Thorn resided, from the time of his first settlement until his death, about Cape Girardeau, and that he died in A. D. 1820, 1821, or 1822, as near as this affiant can now recollect.

ROBERT GIBONEY.

Signed and sworn to, October 15, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Also appeared William Williams, of lawful age, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposeth and saith that he moved to Cape Girardeau in A. D. 1799, he thinks a little before Christmas; that, when he landed, he found Solomon Thorn living there; that he was a gunsmith; that he frequently worked for the Indians who were then living on Apple creek, in the district of Cape Girardeau. This affiant knows that the said Thorn continued to live in the district of Cape Girardeau for a great many years, but when he died this affiant does not recollect.

No. 231.—ELIJAH FORD, CLAIMING 200 ARPENS.

List of petitions asking for concessions of land, granted by Don Henry Peyroux, commandant of New Madrid, to the inhabitants hereafter named, &c.

No. 199.—Elijah Ford, 200 arpens in Tawapity, adjoining John Banister.

I, the undersigned, Henry Peyroux, captain in the army, and ex-commandant of New Madrid, acknowledge to have in my possession, for the purpose of taking down with me to New Orleans, immediately, one hundred and thirty-five petitions for land, granted by me, during my command, to the several inhabitants named in the foregoing list, &c., and also to bring back the one hundred and eighty-six petitions (decreed upon) mentioned in the caption of this list.

HENRY PEYROUX.

NEW MADRID, March 21, 1804.

To the intendant general:

Elijah Ford, an American, and inhabitant of this post of New Madrid, with the greatest respect to your lordship, represents, that wishing to settle himself in said post, he supplicates your lordship to condescend to grant him 200 arpens of land in the place called Tawapity, at the distance of about 12 leagues from this town of New Madrid, bounded on its principal front by a cypress swamp; on one side by the land of John Banister, and on the other sides by vacant lands; which favor he hopes to deserve of your great benevolence and known justice.

NEW MADRID, June 16, 1801.

At the request of the petitioner, he not knowing how to write.

RICHARD GREEN.

The petitioner having all the qualifications required by the instructions, I do believe him worthy to obtain the favor he solicits. Your lordship will do what you think fit.

Aquilla Wathen, assignee of Polly Boyd, claiming 200 arpens of land situate on Caney creek, district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board an affidavit of permission to settle in favor of Polly Boyd, dated 6th June, 1808.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim was taken at Cape Girardeau, June 4, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner:

James Boyd, duly sworn, says that, in 1803, before and after the 20th of December, Polly Boyd lived on the premises, and in the following year, witness (her father) cultivated flax on the premises for her use. Laid over for decision. See book No. 4, page 64.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Aquilla Wathen, assignee of Polly Boyd, claiming 200 arpens of land.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim was taken at Cape Girardeau, June 7, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner:

James Boyd, duly sworn, says, in the spring of 1802, witness helped to raise a cabin on that place, and also assisted in clearing about 1½ acres of ground, and in breaking it up and planting it. In the year 1803, old Mr. Andrews raised corn on the premises, by permission of witness, as Polly Boyd's father. In 1804, witness put part of it in flax, pulled and put the flax in the cabin which he had built in 1802, which, or a part of it, continued in said cabin until the present spring.

John Boyd, duly sworn, says that he knows but very little more than what the foregoing witness has stated.

Robert Green, sworn, says that claimant employed witness' son, and paid him $20 for raising a cabin on the premises in 1807. Laid over for decision. See book No. 4, page 75.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Alexander Summers states that he is well acquainted with Polly Boyd, and has known her for a long time. He recollects passing her improvement on Cane creek, a branch of Byrd's creek, in the year 1802; there was, at that time, a cabin on said place, and about two or three acres cleared and in cultivation; that is to say, in 1802, at which time the said Polly lived on said place. Said place was situated on the water-course mentioned above, in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, now county of Cape Girardeau, State of Missouri. The said Polly Boyd has lived in said district ever since, though this affiant cannot state that she has always lived on said place.

No. 233.—ALEXANDER ANDREWS, CLAIMING 240 ARPENS.

To Don Louis Lorimier, commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau:

Alexander Andrews, inhabitant of the State of Kentucky, wishing to settle himself on this side of the Mississippi, has the honor to pray you to grant him a tract of land of 240 arpens, on the river Zenon, near and adjoining Mr. Habbell, at the distance of about nine miles W. S. W. of Cape Girardeau, which land he obliges himself to establish and improve in the time prescribed by the law. Favor which he expects of your justice.

A. ANDREWS.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, September 13, 1797.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, September 18, 1797.

Be it forwarded to the lieutenant governor, together with the information that the land demanded belongs to the domain of his Majesty, and that the conceding of the same is not prejudicial to any person. In consideration of which, I have provisionally permitted the petitioner to settle on said land, until you may be pleased to order that he be put in possession by the King's surveyor.

L. LORIMIER.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 5, 1798.

Being convinced (by the information of the commandant of Cape Girardeau, Don Louis Lorimier,) that the land solicited is vacant, and is not prejudicial to the adjoining neighbors, the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the interested in possession of the same; after which he shall make out a plat and certificate of his survey, in order to serve to solicit the concession from the governor general, who is hereby informed that the petitioner deserves the favor which he solicits.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

UPPER LOUISIANA, Cape Girardeau, District of St. Louis of Illinois.

Don Antonio Soulard, captain of militia, surveyor of the settlements of Upper Louisiana, and adjutant major, interim, of this town of St. Louis of Illinois.

I do certify that on the 30th day of March, 1802, a tract of land, of 240 arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of Alexander Andrews, and adjoining neighbors, and measured with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet in length, measure which is adopted in this province. The said land is situated in the settlement of Cape Girardeau, at the distance of about 12½ miles from said village, and bounded on the north and west sides by vacant lands of the royal domain; on the east by the land of Steven Byrd, and south by that of James Boyd; all which is more amply demonstrated in the foregoing plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. Said survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor, Don Zenon Trudeau, dated January 5, 1798.

In testimony whereof, I do give the present (certificate,) with the preceding figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, Don Bartholomew Cousin, to which I certify, the 2d of May, 1803.

James Rogers, by his legal representatives, claiming 766 arpens of land situate on Negro fork of Maramec. See record book B., page 345; minutes, No. 5, page 485.

John Stewart, being duly sworn, says that he is in the 73d year of his age; that he first saw claimant in this country in the year 1801; that, in 1803, he saw James Rogers settled on the land claimed; he had then a comfortable house to live in, a kitchen, and a corn crib, a corn field of at least nine acres, and about an acre fenced in near the house, in which was his garden and a cotton patch; that, by the looks of the place, it appeared to have been cultivated the year before; that said Rogers continued to inhabit and cultivate the same until his death, which happened in 1805 or 1806, he cannot say exactly when; that said Rogers had a wife and nine children; that said tract of land is situated at about two or three miles above Wideman' mill, or Big river. Witness says that he never knew anybody laying claim to said land; that James Rogers was the first who settled the same. Witness further says that claimant had his house and garden on the rise of the hill, and his corn field in the river bottom. See book No. 6, page 509.

In the case of James Rogers, sr., claiming 766 arpens of land. See book No. 6, page 509.

Samuel Harrington, duly sworn, says that he is about 48 years of age; that said James Rogers, sr., came to this country in the month of May, in the year 1801, or 1802, witness is not certain, in company with five or six families, which, after they had come over to this side, rested a few weeks, and went to settle on Big river; that said Rogers, witness heard, had made an improvement on which he staid during the winter, and, on account of Indian depredations, went over to Illinois, where he passed the summer, but returned in the same year to his improvement; that witness saw said improvement in 1804, in the month of July; there were then a couple of cabins, five or six acres fenced in, and corn, pumpkins, &c., growing on the same, and that the place, by all appearances, seemed to have been under cultivation two years and upwards. Witness further says that said Rogers had there with him a wife and eight children; that said Rogers lived on said improvement until his death, which happened about the year 1806, and was buried on said place, which has never since been cultivated, the widow having married again, and gone to her husband's plantation. John McNeal, claiming 640 acres of land situate on Big river, (see record book B, page 236; minutes, book No. 1, page 504; No. 4, page 341,) produces the original survey, by John Stewart, deputy surveyor, dated January 11, 1806.

John Stewart, duly sworn, says that he is about 65 years of age; that he knows that said McNeal took possession of the land claimed prior to the month of December, 1803; that in the fall of 1803, witness went on the place, and saw there a cabin. John McNeal was then clearing the land, and in 1804 raised a crop thereon, had a garden and other improvements. Witness further says that, soon after the American government took possession of this country, he was appointed deputy surveyor to Antoine Soulard, and in 1806 witness surveyed, for said McNeal, the tract of land claimed, as appears by the original plat filed in this case. See book No. 7, page 2.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Joseph Reed, junior, claiming 740 arpens 3 perches of land. See book No. 3, page 126.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. See book No. 4, page 336.

DECEMBER 14, 1833.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Joseph Reed, junior, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land situate in Bellevue, county of Washington. See record book B, page 222; minutes, book No. 3, page 126; No. 4, page 336.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

The claimant produces James Johnson as a witness, aged 44 years, who, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was acquainted with the original claimant, Joseph Reed, junior; that he, witness, came to the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1804, and that in the month of July or August, in that year (1804), as well as he recollects, he assisted in clearing and improving some land on the tract claimed, and that about one acre, more or less, was so cleared, on which some turnips were sown, and perhaps some grass seed; which work went to, and was for the use of, the said Joseph Reed, junior; in some three or four days afterwards, he, the said Reed, raised a house on the said improvement and land. This deponent further states that, at the time he assisted in clearing as aforesaid, there had been some work done on the same place, and the name of Joseph Reed, junior, was marked on a tree on the said improvement; the work had the appearance of having been done the year before this witness assisted to clear as aforesaid; that said Reed sold his claim to one David Gallagher for the consideration of one hundred and forty dollars, and that the said Gallagher took possession of, and lived on, the same place, and continued to cultivate the same till he died, and his widow and heirs continued on the same some time afterwards, and then sold the same to Philip T. McCabe for one thousand dollars, and said McCabe has been in the possession of the said land ever since; that the said Joseph Reed, junior, was, he believes, at the time, above the age of twenty-one years when the improvements aforesaid were made.

JAMES JOHNSON.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 7th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

And also came John Stewart, a witness, aged about 64 years, who, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that William Reed, senior, the father of Joseph Reed, junior, with the said Joseph Reed, junior, came to the country, he believes, in 1802, and that they moved to Bellevue in the year 1803, and cultivated land in Bellevue in 1803, and continued as residents and cultivators until they left the country.

JOHN STEWART.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

MARTIN RUGGLES.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

See No. 6, page 383.

OCTOBER 8, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of Joseph Reed, junior, claiming 640 acres of land, (see book No. 6, page 383,) the following testimony was taken by F. R. Conway, commissioner:

John McNeal, being duly sworn, deposes and says that in the month of November, 1803, he passed by Joseph Reed's spring, and saw chopping done, timber cut round, and some fallen down, and the foundation of a cabin laid; in the month of April, 1805, he met some children coming from said Reed's turnip patch with turnip salad, or turnip greens, and when he went to said turnip patch, he saw a woman in the inside of the patch gathering turnip tops for greens, and the fence was made of split rails and poles, which he supposed included about one acre, and said Reed claimed the same as his head right, and sold the same to David Gallaghar, who lived on the said farm for several years; and, after said Gallaghar's decease, the heirs sold their claim to Philip McCabe, who lives on the same, and has a large farm on said land; and this deponent says that he has never heard that said Reed ever claimed any other land as his head right, before or since, and claims 640 acres as his head right.

JOHN T. McNEAL.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 8th day of May, 1834, at Potosi, Missouri.

STATE OF MISSOURI, Washington County:

Be it remembered that on this 11th of January, 1832, before me, Henry Shurlds, a justice of the peace in and for said county, the following persons appeared:

Daniel Phelps, aged 77 years and upwards, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, some time in the fall of 1806, he was on the tract of land claimed as above set forth, and there was, at that time, a crop of about 6 or 8 acres of corn grown on said place, and a cabin there and occupied; and, from the appearance of the place at that time, he believes it must have been occupied and cultivated two or three years, at least, before that time; that the place, he understood from both Reed and William Sloane, had been sold by Reed to Sloane; and the place he believes to have been occupied and cultivated ever since the period above.

STATE OF MISSOURI, Washington County:

I, John C. Brickey, clerk of the county court within and for said county, do hereby certify that Henry Shurlds, whose name is subscribed to the within affidavit as having taken the same, was, at the time of taking said affidavit of Daniel Phelps, an acting justice of the peace within and for said county, duly commissioned and qualified as such; and that full faith and credit is due to all his official acts.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal of office, at Potosi, this 6th day of May, 1833.

J. C. BRICKEY, Clerk. [L. S.]

MAY 6, 1833.

POTOSI, Washington County:

Personally appeared before me, L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners appointed for the final adjustment of private land claims in Missouri, Mr. Timothy Phelps, who, after being duly sworn, says that he is well acquainted with the handwriting of Daniel Phelps, (who was deponent's father;) that the signature to the above deposition, dated 11th January, 1832, taken before Henry Shurlds, is in the handwriting of Daniel Phelps, his father.

TIMOTHY PHELPS.

Sworn to and subscribed day above written.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

At the same time appeared Doct. Alexander McGreaddy, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says that he was well acquainted with Daniel Phelps, and, from long personal acquaintance, has no hesitation in saying said Phelps was a man of respectability, integrity, and truth.

JANUARY 13, 1834.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Thomas Reed, claiming 747 arpens of land. See page 212 of this book, (No. 6.)

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

John T. McNeal, aged about 70 years, says he knew the said Thomas Reed well, from the year 1802 up. In the month of February, 1804, he passed the improvement of the said Thomas Reed, in the district of St. Genevieve; there appeared to be two or three acres cleared and a cabin built; the land such as if it had been in cultivation the year before. He afterwards understood that turnips had been raised on the improvement. The timber, from the deadening, seemed to have been cut in 1802. This improvement was made in Bellevue settlement. This affiant, in the next year, moved from that neighborhood, and did not return until 1809, when the said improvement was in the possession of William Sloane, who had purchased the same from the said Reed, and has been in his possession and that of his children ever since. This affiant knows the children of the said William Sloane, and believes their names are all mentioned in the caption of this deposition.

In the case of Thomas Reed, claiming 747 arpens of land. See book No. 6, page.

The following testimony was taken by F. R. Conway, commissioner:

BELLEVUE, Washington County, State of Missouri:

Personally appeared before F. R. Conway, recorder of land titles for the State of Missouri, and one of the commissioners appointed, &c., John T. McNeal, who, being first duly sworn, states, in reference to the above claim, as follows: Having heretofore deposed in the above cause, but having omitted to state a fact which deponent hereby supplies, and which fact is believed to be material, he states he knows the above claim, and passed by it in the year 1804, in the month of February; there was on the land an improvement which appeared to have been made the year before; it was then under fence, and had been cultivated in turnips; there was also a small cabin near the improvement; and, at the date aforesaid, it was known to be the aforesaid Thomas Reed's improvement. And further, this deponent saith that the small cabin at the time aforesaid was occupied, and appeared to have been lived in for some time previous, by the marks of fire and smoke on and about the chimney. And further deponent saith not.

No. 245.—FRANÇOIS HEBERT, CLAIMING 80 ARPENS.

We, Don Fernando de Leyba, lieutenant governor, &c.

In consequence of the demand to us made by François Hebert, residing in this post, in his petition dated 24th instant, in which he represents to us, that, wishing to establish himself with his family in the prairie called Prairie of river des Peres, and make there a plantation, in order to cultivate the soil, (but not being able to do it without he is authorized by us to do so,) that we would be pleased to grant to him two arpens of land in width by forty arpens in length, in continuation of the land of Mr. Robert, an inhabitant of said place, which tract shall be adjoining on the west to the land of the said Robert; on the east, to that of Charles Roy; facing, on the north end, the King's domain; and on the south end, which is the front of the said tract, facing the river Des Peres: Therefore we, the lieutenant governor above named, have granted, and do grant, to the said François Hebert the said tract of land of two arpens in width by forty arpens in length, such as it is here above described, for the said François Hebert, his heirs and assigns, to enjoy the same as of a thing to him belonging forever, on condition to improve the said tract of land in one year and one day; and that it shall be liable to public taxes, and others which it may please his Majesty to impose.

No. 246.—Alexis Loise, claiming 120 arpens.

Don Fernando de Leyba, &c.:

In consequence of the demand to us made by Alexis Louise, an inhabitant of this post, in his petition, dated 7th instant, representing that he would wish to settle himself in the prairie commonly called Prairie de la Rivière, in order to cultivate the soil, may you be pleased, sir, to grant to him a piece of land of three arpens in length, adjoining, on the south, the land of Robert, and on the other side, north, to the King's domain. He shall continue to pray for your prosperity.

One × for Alexis Loise's mark.

Therefore, wishing to favor the petitioner in his establishment, we have granted, and do grant, to him, in fee simple, for him, his heirs or assigns, the three arpens of land in width, by the common depth of forty arpens, adjoining on the south side to one Robert, on the north side to the King's domain, the two ends running east and west, for the said Loise, or his legal representatives, to enjoy the same as of a thing to him belonging in full property, on condition to improve it in one year and one day from the date of this present concession, and that it shall be liable to public charges or others which it may please his Majesty to impose.

No. 247—Charles Gill, claiming 400 arpens.

To Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant colonel by brevet, lieutenant governor, and commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois:

Charles Gill, inhabiting and residing on the Maramec, humbly supplicates, and has the honor to represent, that having bought, on the Maramec, a plantation which he is obliged to return to the vender, your petitioner having been deceived by the person who had engaged to make the payment, he wishes to settle on a concession at the river Aux Gravois, on the road leading from St. Louis to Mr. Clamorgan's saline; and having found a suitable place, he claims of your goodness to be pleased to grant him the quantity of ten arpens in front by forty in depth, to be taken on the south side of the road of the said saline, twenty arpens in length on each side of the said river Gravois, making the forty arpens in depth. The petitioner only waits for your approbation to build thereon, and expects of your goodness that you will grant him said approbation, in order to secure the property until he shall have the same surveyed, and obtains the titles in due form. Therefore, may it please you to grant to the petitioner the said quantity of ten arpens in front by forty in depth on the river Gravois, on the south side of the road leading from this town of St. Louis to Mr. Morgan's saline, twenty arpens in length on each side of the said river Gravois, making the forty arpens in depth, and the total quantity 400 arpens in superficies.

The petitioner shall never cease to pray Heaven for the preservation of your days.

248	Jean Cambas....	Arps. 40	Concession, 10th July, 1767.	St. Ange.	Little prairie, south of St. Louis.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

Tuesday, April 29, 1834.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Jean Cambas, by his legal representatives, claiming one by forty arpens of land, it being the north half of a concession granted to Jean Cambas and Jean Ortez, for two by forty arpens of land, situate in the Little prairie south of St. Louis.

See livre terrien, No. 1, page 12; recorder's minutes, book No. 2, page 5; No. 3, page 104; book F, page 151.

Pierre Chouteau, duly sworn, says that Jean Cambas was a carpenter by trade, who obtained said concession in partnership with Jean Ortez, for the purpose of cutting timber to build houses in St. Louis; that Cambas and Ortez used to make their hay on said piece of land; that to his knowledge they did make hay and cut timber thereon for upwards of fifteen consecutive years, under the French and Spanish governments, and before the Americans took possession of the country; that it was known generally, by all the people in St. Louis, that said piece of land was the property of said Cambas and Ortez. Witness further says that he has no kind of interest in the claim of Cambas, a division having been made between Cambas and Ortez's representatives, about eight or nine years ago. See book No. 6, page 519.

The following testimony was taken before Theodore Hunt, recorder of land titles, Missouri:

Auguste Chouteau, being duly sworn, says about sixty years ago St. Ange, the then French commandant, granted to J. Cambas and J. Ortex, a field lot, containing two arpens in front by forty in depth, in the Little prairie; that it was owned and possessed by them for many years; that they used to cut their hay on the same, and it was always known to belong to these men; that afterwards it was divided, and J. Ortez sold his arpen to Pierre Chouteau.

AUGUSTE CHOUTEAU.

See recorder's minutes, book No. 2, page 5.

Baptiste Rivière and René Dodier, being duly sworn as relates to the situation of the claim of Ortez and Cambas, in the Little prairie below St. Louis, say that they are well acquainted with the situation of the same, and that they have repeatedly seen Ortez hewing timber on this same land, and they do both know that the spring branch ran through the middle of said land of Ortez and Cambas, and that these deponents believe that the said land was granted to them in partnership; that is, two arpens in front by forty in depth; that they afterwards divided the same, each taking one arpen by forty arpens, and that the spring they speak of as having seen Ortez at work at, is situated opposite the present residence of John Baptiste Lammi.

No. 249.—FRANÇOIS DUNEGAN, CLAIMING 800 ARPENS.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Francis Dunegan, captain of militia, commandant of the establishment of St. André, has the honor to represent to you that his father-in-law, Mr. John Charet, lived, formerly, on a tract of land of eight hundred arpens in superficies, situated on the river Grande Glaise, about four or five miles lower down than the Little rock, by virtue of a title of concession which was granted to him by lieutenant governor Cruzat. The incursions of the Indians having obliged him to abandon the said land, he settled himself in this town, and from hence at the village of St. Ferdinand, where he died, having the intention to go and end his days on said land, for which, in truth, there can be found no titles; but as it is publicly known that the above named had lived on said place, by virtue of the said title, I expect of your justice that you will please condescend to grant to him (the said petitioner) in full property, the same tract of land of eight hundred arpens in superficies, such as it is here above designated, and in such manner as to have the river Grande Glaise comprised in the said tract. You will please to observe that although he is an ancient inhabitant of this country, and has rendered some feeble services to the government, in establishing the village of St. Ferdinand, and in defending it from the nations of Indians, he has never obtained any concession of consequence from the former lieutenant governors, although it was perfectly known by the lieutenant governors, your predecessors, that, in many cases, he was obliged to make pecuniary sacrifices; that he is the father of the orphans in the little post, of which it has pleased the government to confide the command to him; and it is well known, by all honest men, that he has raised several orphans, and that at this very moment he is the victim of a guardianship injurious to his interest.

After having laid before you this faithful statement of his situation, the petitioner, confiding in your justice, has cause to hope that you will grant the favor which he solicits.

FRANÇOIS DUNEGAN.

ST. LOUIS, December 17, 1802.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, December 17, 1802.

Considering that the petitioner is one of the most ancient inhabitants of this country; that his known conduct and personal merit are recommendable; and being satisfied to evidence as to the truth of what he states in his petition, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, in case it shall not be prejudicial to anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks in the place indicated, and when this is executed, he shall draw a plat of his survey, delivering the same to the party with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form, from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Francis Dunegan has the honor to represent to you, that, in consequence of the steps he has taken relative to the tract of land mentioned in his petition, he would fear that, by persevering in his pretensions, he would be led into difficulties, which, not being in his character, he would prefer you would please to permit him to take the same quantity of land, mentioned in his petition, for which you were pleased to grant to him the concession, by your decree, dated 17th December of last year, in any other vacant place of the domain, at his choice, without being prejudicial to the interests of any one whomsoever.

FRANÇOIS DUNEGAN.

ST. LOUIS, 7th January, 1803.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 8, 1803.

The surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, Don Antonio Soulard, shall conform himself to the tenor of the foregoing petition, presented by Mr. Francis Dunegan, and shall survey for him, in a vacant place of the royal domain, on the spot which shall be chosen by the interested, the eight hundred arpens which have been granted to him by my decree of the 17th of December of last year, under the same conditions which are mentioned in said decree.

Jacque Clamorgan, assignee of Francis Dunegan, claiming 800 arpens of land situate on the Maramec, district of St. Louis, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus, lieutenant governor, dated 17th December, 1802, for 800 arpens on Grand Glaize; a petition, and decree of Delassus, lieutenant governor, thereon, authorizing said Dunegan to locate the land claimed on any vacant land, dated 7th January, 1803; a plat of survey of 750 arpens, dated 28th February, and certified 29th February, 1806; a transfer from Dunegan to claimant, dated 1st July, 1805. It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. See book No. 5, page 405.

DECEMBER 19, 1832.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

François Dunegan, by his legal representative, John Mullanphy, claiming 800 arpens of land, (see book of record C, pages 151, 152, and 153; No. 5, 405,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated 17 December, 1802, and 8th January, 1803; also a deed of conveyance.

M. P. Le Duc, being duly sworn, saith that the signature to the decree is in the proper handwriting of the said Carlos Dehault Delassus. See book No. 6, page 89.

The board met agreeably to adjournment. Present: The Hon. John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, Esq.

David Strickland, claiming, as aforesaid, 1,247 arpens and 62 perches of land situated at the Mine à Breton, district of St. Genevieve, produces a survey of the same, dated the 25th, and certified the 28th February, 1806.

William Bates, being duly sworn, says that the said claimant settled the said land in 1804, raised a crop on the same that year, and has actually inhabited and cultivated it to this day.

The board reject this claim, and remark that no proof is adduced of a permission to settle. See book No. 1, page 506.

Board met. Present: The Hon. Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates.

David Strickland, claiming 1,247 arpens of land situate at Mine à Breton, district of St. Genevieve.

Joseph Decelle, ancient Syndic of the Mine à Breton settlement, sworn, says that claimant applied to him, witness, for permission to settle on vacant land, in 1803; witness told him he could not give a permission, as he, claimant, had a concession for land in Bois Brulé; that claimant then asked permission for his son John to settle on the land claimed, which he then gave him. On a written permission being produced to witness, appearing to be a permission to David Strickland to settle, dated 5th December, 1803, witness says it is the same paper, but that since that time it has been cut and a part taken off, wherein he had revoked the permission given by him to David Strickland, and given one to his son John Strickland, in consequence of David Strickland having a concession. Laid over for decision. See book No. 3, page 282.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Claimant produces a paper, purporting to be a permission to settle, by Joseph Decelle, dated December 5, 1803. Also produces, as a witness, John T. McNeal, aged about 70 years, who, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he, this witness, came to this country in the year 1797, and that he was well acquainted with the original claimant, David Strickland; that he settled on the land claimed in the fall or winter of 1803; that, in the year 1804, he cleared a field of about eight acres, and actually raised corn thereon that year, and that the said tract of land has been actually inhabited and cultivated, either by the said Strickland, or those claiming under him, ever since. And this witness further says that he was acquainted with Joseph Decelle; that he has seen him write; that said Decelle was the acting commandant, or police officer at Mine à Breton, in the year 1803, and that the name and signature to the permission from him to the said Strickland to settle, dated the 5th December, 1803, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Decelle; that, at the time of the settlement on the land aforesaid, the said Strickland had a wife, and some six or seven children at least.

JOHN T. McNEAL.

No. 251.—WILLIAM DUNN, CLAIMING 7,056 ARPENS.

To Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel in the armies of his Majesty and lieutenant governor of this Upper Louisiana:

William Dunn, millwright by trade, and formerly an inhabitant of the United States, has the honor to represent that, having been called to this colony by Messrs. Berald Sarpy and A. Rutgers, in order to build for each of them a water-mill, which undertaking he is on the eve of beginning; seeing the tranquillity and happiness enjoyed by the inhabitants of this country, under the Spanish government; he wishes (after the construction of the mills he is engaged to build,) to undertake the building of a grist and saw-mill on his own particular account. The said undertaking will be advantageous to the country in furnishing a market for the crops of the inhabitants. The petitioner supplicates you, sir, to be pleased to grant to him a concession of a league or square of land in superficies, being 7,056 arpens, to be taken on the domain of his Majesty not yet conceded, as follows: 800 arpens on the river called La Femme Osage, and 6,256 on Cuivre river, those two situations being necessary for the greatest advantage of the establishments he intends to make, he will indicate to the surveyor of this colony, if, as he presumes to hope, you will grant to him the favor he asks.

Your petitioner takes upon himself to assure you that, by his conduct and his zeal for the government, he will always deserve the favor he now solicits.

WILLIAM DUNN.

St. Louis, June 15, 1802.

St. Louis of Illinois, June 18, 1802.

Whereas it is evident that the petitioner possesses more than the means and number of hands (population) necessary to obtain and improve the lands he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the tract of land of 7,056 arpens in superficies, which he solicits in the places indicated in the foregoing memorial, provided it is not prejudicial to any person; and the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, Don Antoine Soulard, shall put the interested in possession of said quantity of land asked by him, in the places above mentioned; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of this survey, delivering the same to the party, together with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title, in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting of all classes of lands of the royal domain, for seven thousand and fifty-six arpens.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antoine Soulard, surveyor general of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of land of 800 arpens (it being part of a concession for a league square granted to William Dunn) was measured, the lines run and bounded in favor and in presence of Arend Rutgers, conformably to a deed of sale passed in favor of the said Rutgers by the original owner, William Dunn, under date of the 26th July, 1803, (the said deed of sale being annexed to the memorial and certificate of survey.) The said measurement was made with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet in length, lineal measure of the said city, according to the mode of measuring land in this province. Said tract of land is situated on the left bank of the river Missouri, at about 30 miles northwest of the St. Louis, and is bounded to the north-northeast by vacant lands of the royal domain; east-southeast by said Missouri; south-southwest by lands of F. Miller; and west-northwest by vacant lands of the royal domain. Said survey and measurement was executed without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7 deg. 30 minutes east, as evinced by the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines and other boundaries. This survey was made in consequence of a petition and of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal fisc, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, under date of 18th June, 1802. In testimony whereof I do give the present (certificate) together with the figurative plat, executed conformably to the survey made by the deputy surveyor, James Mackay, on the 17th November, 1803, to which I certify.

ANTOINE SOULARD, Surveyor General.

St. Louis, December 22, 1803.

St. Louis, December 22, 1803.

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of Upper Louisiana.

I do certify that a tract of land of 6,256 arpens of land in superficies, (it being part of a concession for a league square granted to William Dunn) was measured, the lines run and bounded in favor and in presence of Arend Rutgers, conformably to a deed of sale passed in his favor by the original owner, said William Dunn, under date of the 26th July, 1803, (said deed being annexed to the petition and certificate of survey.) The said measurement was made with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet in length, lineal measure of the said city, according to the mode of measuring land in this province. This land is situated on the head of Cuivre river, 26 miles from St. Charles, and 46 to the north-northeast of St. Louis, and is bounded to the north-northeast by the said river Cuivre; to the south-southwest by vacant lands of the royal domain; to the west-northwest in part by lands of Mackay Whery, Christoval Clark, and vacant lands; and to the east-southeast by lands of Don Carlos Dehault Delassus and those of James Lewis. This survey was made without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7 deg. 30 minutes east as evinced in the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. This survey was made conformably to a petition and to the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delagate of the royal fisc, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, under date of 18th of June, 1802. In testimony whereof I do give the present, (certificate) together with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, James Mackay, on the 13th of December, 1803, to which I certify.

William Dunn, by his assignee, Arend Rutgers, claiming 7,056 arpens of land, (see record book D, pages 117 and 118; minutes, book No. 5, page 490,) produces a paper purporting to be a concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus to Wm. Dunn, dated 18 June, 1802; also, two plats and certificates of surveys, one for 800 arpens, executed the 17th November, 1803, and certified by Antoine Soulard, surveyor general, on the 22d December, 1803; the other for 6,256 arpens, executed on the 13th of December, 1803, and certified by said Soulard on the 15th January, 1804.

M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says that the signature to said concession is the handwriting of Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor; that the signatures to the said certificates of surveys are in the handwriting of Antoine Soulard, surveyor general. See book No. 6, page 8.

NOVEMBER 28, 1834.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of William Dunn, claiming 7,056 arpens of land, (see book No. 6, page 8,) the following testimony was taken by A. G. Harrison, then commissioner:

Jeremiah Groshon, being duly sworn, says that a man by the name of Dunn worked awhile for Rutgers, on a mill, some time in the year 1804; that said Dunn did not finish said mill, nor was there any mill built on said land, claimed by Rutgers, as above stated; that said Dunn had no family as far as witness knew; that where said Dunn worked was on the waters of Dardenne, for Rutgers; that said mill, as undertaken, or commenced, was on Rutgers' claim, and not on Dunn's; that witness did the hewing for said mill, before Dunn came; that witness knew nothing about the contract between Dunn and Rutgers, in relation to said mill.

William Craig, being duly sworn, says that on what is commonly called Dunn's claim, there was no mill built, or attempted to be built; that on Rutgers' claim on the Dardenne, one Dunn did commence building a mill for Rutgers, but did not finish it, but that it was afterwards finished by some one else; that Dunn's claim was on Cuivre, on which there was no improvement made by Dunn or by Rutgers. Robert Cagle, by his legal representatives, claiming 650 arpens of land situate on Sandy creek, county of Jefferson. See record book E, page 323; Bates' Decisions, page 91.

William Harrington, duly sworn, says that he is about forty-six years of age; that he has lived in this country for thirty-six years; that he was well acquainted with the said Roger Cagle, and knows the tract claimed; that, in the fall of 1803, he went on said Cagle's place for the purpose to get him to help deponent's father to gather his corn; that, at that time, said Cagle was working on his place, making clapboards to cover, as witness supposes, a small cabin he had put up; that said Cagle had then his family living at a neighbor's close by, until he could get a house for them to live in. Witness further says that, in the spring of 1804, he went to said place to have some blacksmith work done by said Cagle, who was a blacksmith by trade; that said Cagle had then a double cabin for a dwelling-house, and also a shop; that claimant had then a field of about five or six acres, and witness went to plough for Cagle while he did witness' blacksmith work at the shop. Deponent further states that he was frequently on said place through the summer, and that claimant raised a crop of corn in said year 1804; that claimant had a wife, and, he believes, eight or ten children; that said Cagle lived there two years, until he sold, as witness heard, to William Johnson, and that the place has been under cultivation ever since. No. 253.—Carlos de Vilemont, claiming two leagues in front by one league in depth.

To the governor general:

Don Carlos de Vilemont, captain of the regiment of infantry of Louisiana, civil and military commandant of the post of Arkansas and its districts, with the respect due to your lordship, represents that, wishing to establish a plantation and a stock farm, in order to furnish to the consumption of this post, in which there is such a scarcity of horned cattle that, for many months in the year, the said post is without meat, although this is an indispensable article of life; he supplicates your lordship to condescend to grant him two leagues of land in front by one league in depth, having parallel limits, at the place called the island of Chicot, at the distance of twenty-five leagues below the mouth of the river Arkansas, the cypress swamp, at the island of Chicot, serving as the upper limit. He hopes to receive this favor from your lordship's benevolence.

CARLOS DE VILEMONT.

Fort San Esteban de Arkansas, May 10, 1795.

New Orleans, June 17, 1795.

The surveyor general of this province, or a deputy appointed by him, shall put the party in possession of the two leagues of land in front, by one league in depth, which he solicits, at the place indicated in the foregoing memorial, provided they are vacant, and do not cause any prejudice, under the express condition to make the road and a regular clearing in the peremptory term of one year, and this concession to be null if, at the expiration of the precise term of three years, the land should not be established, and during said term it shall not be alienable; under which conditions (las diligencias de apec) the plat and certificate of survey shall be made out and remitted to me, in order to provide the interested with the corresponding title in form.

EL BARON DE CARONDELET.

Truly translated from the original.

JULIUS DE MUN, T. B. C.

St. Louis, December 1, 1834.

To the honorable commissioners appointed in conformity with the act of Congress approved July 9, 1832, entitled, An act for the final adjustment of private land claims in Missouri:

GENTLEMEN: The petition of the undersigned inhabitants of a tract of country situate on and contiguous to Point Chicot, and which tract is claimed by the heirs and representatives of Carlos de Vilemont, deceased, represent unto your honors, that the undersigned, feeling it a matter of deep concern to themselves, as well as a case in which the character of our common country may be materially implicated, conceive it, therefore, of the first importance to a correct appreciation of the merits of the said claim, that all the circumstances connected with the origin and pretensions of it be fully and clearly understood before any decision be had thereon.

Your petitioners, therefore, further represent to your honors, that, as they are informed and believe, this claim of the Vilemonts is founded only in an occasional arrangement made by one of the officers of the then Spanish authorities in this country with Don Carlos de Vilemont, conditioned and depending for its completion upon the performance of certain acts on the part of De Vilemont, and that, of course, the failure on his part to perform all the stipulations devolving on him would render the contract void, and of no avail: Now, if the conditions of the said contract, or promised concession of land, were such as they have been stated to your petitioners, they know full well that no part of them, nor any part of any one of said conditions, were fulfilled within the time said to have been limited for that purpose. On this ground, principally, your petitioners believe it is that all the attempts which had been made to bring the said claim before Congress, previous to the passage of the act under whose authority your honors are appointed, have uniformly been resisted by the government. Encouraged by the steady and wise policy of the general government, as manifested in its continued repugnance to the confirmation of claims to large tracts of lands to individuals, (claims derived or pretended to be derived from preceding authorities,) in all cases where the titles to the same have not been clear and unquestionable, and still more incited by the several generous acts of Congress, granting pre-emption to actual settlers on the public lands, your petitioners, or at least several of them, have gone on for many years, making extensive and permanent improvements on the tract of land claimed as above mentioned. Some of those improvements are large cotton plantations, now of great value to the individual occupant, and of considerable utility in the public weal. Besides several sections of the lands so claimed have been sold and patented by the general government, and a new and flourishing village is rapidly rising thereon.

Your petitioners further represent to your honors another fact, (perhaps unknown to you) in proof that the government has not recognized this claim, viz: these lands were surveyed as other public lands, under the authority of the general government, in the year 1823, and the lines run to the cardinal points; no attention whatever being then paid to those claimants, as there are no marks or boundaries to designate the lands claimed by them, nor is there any plat or notes of any survey of such claim on record in the proper office, or anywhere else that is known.

Your petitioners further state to your honors, that many of them have, for upwards of twenty years, held peaceable possession of the lands so claimed, and which they still occupy and cultivate; nineteen years of which time they have considered their possession thereof has been under the sanction of the general government, as proclaimed in the primary pre-emption law.

In conclusion, your petitioners beg leave further to state that they have full confidence in the high character of your honors, and in the dignified impartiality which a due consideration of the great responsibility of your station must inspire, that you will not, without the fullest conviction of the inflexible justice of the case, take from a whole county its court-house, its jail, and public offices, and from a great many industrious and useful citizens, their homes, their independence, their all, acquired after years of toil and privations, and give them to foreigners and speculators, (for it should be known that the most of the said claim of the De Vilemont family could not be materially benefited by its confirmation,) who are influenced by no motives but their cupidity, and who have done no service to this country to merit such indiscriminate munificence from our government. All which is most respectfully submitted, and your petitioners, &c., &c.

253	Carlos de Vilemont	Arps. Two leagues in front by one league in depth.	Concession, 17th June, 1795.	The baron de Carondelet.	Point Chicot, twenty-five leagues below the mouth of Arkansas river, on the Mississippi.

Evidence, with reference to minutes and records.

ST. LOUIS, October 4, 1813.

Carlos de Vilemont, claiming two leagues of land in front by one league in depth, situate at fifteen miles (twenty-five leagues) below the mouth of Arkansas, on the Mississippi, at a place called island of Chicot, produces concession from Baron de Carondelet, dated 17th June, 1795.

Joseph Bougy, duly sworn, says, that in 1795, claimant proposed to witness to settle on this tract, promising to give him the choice of situations on it, a tract for his own use; witness declined on account of the supposed danger from the Indians. Indeed the neighboring Indians were at that time so hostile as to render it unsafe. They often committed outrages even in the village. Claimant was known as a Spanish officer and commandant of the post of Arkansas, from the year 1794 till 1802. The danger from the Indians continued until the year 1803.

Francis de Vaugine, duly sworn, says that the Indians continued so unfriendly, or rather hostile, as to make it altogether unsafe to settle at the isle of Chicot, till the year 1803. See Bates' Minutes, page 58.

NOVEMBER 1, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

Carlos de Vilemont, claiming two leagues of land in front by one league in depth, situate at Point Chicot, (see record book F, page 1; Bates' Minutes, page 58; Bates' Decisions, page 24,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from the baron de Carondelet, governor general of Louisiana, dated 17th June, 1795.

M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says, that the signature to the concession is in the true handwriting of the said baron de Carondelet. See book No. 7, page 62.

DECEMBER 2, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

In the case of Carlos de Vilemont, claiming two leagues in front by one league in depth. See book No. 7, page 62.

Pierre Chouteau, senior, being duly sworn, says, that the signature to the concession is in the true handwriting of the baron de Carondelet; that he, Chouteau, first became acquainted with said De Vilemont in the year 1776, or 1777; that he knows that said De Vilemont was captain in the Spanish service; that, in 1802, witness, going down to New Orleans in a boat, stopped at the mouth of Arkansas river, having some business to transact with Joseph Bougy, senior, who lived at the post of Arkansas; that said Bougy told witness that De Vilemont (who was Bougy's son-in-law) had made a settlement at Point Chicot; that witness, on his return in the summer of 1803, stopped at Point Chicot, expecting to meet with De Vilemont, but De Vilemont had gone down to New Orleans; that his agent, living at Point Chicot, gave witness vegetables of all kinds, poultry, &c.; that the improvements witness saw consisted of log houses and gardens; he did not see any fields, they might have been further in the interior; the houses, as well as he can recollect, had the appearance of having been built two or three years before. Witness further says, that he was well acquainted with Joseph Bougy, senior, who testified in this case, before recorder Bates; that said Bougy, senior, was a man of good character, known by everybody for a man of veracity, and who could be relied upon. Witness further says that the De Vilemont family resided on said place, but does not know how long. See book No. 7, page 76.

Carlos de Vilemont, claiming two leagues of land in front by one league in depth. See book No. 7, page 62.

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed to the said Carlos de Vilemont, or to his legal representatives, according to the concession, reference being had to the opinion of the Hon. Joseph L. Smith, judge of the superior court for the district of East Florida, as afterwards sustained by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Arredondo and others against the United States. No. 254.—Silvestre Labbadie, claiming 100 arpens.

To Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Silvestre Labbadie, a native of this place, has the honor to represent to you, that, wishing to form a permanent establishment, free of the misfortunes to which one is exposed on account of the precarious state of commerce in this country; preferring, to the advantages of fortune, the sweet and unalterable tranquillity found in agriculture, he is determined to employ all his means in pursuit of it, and hopes that the government will assist him in his views, and that, with the same protection which it has never ceased to bestow to all its subjects, it will condescend to grant to him on the south bank of the Missouri, at the place commonly called the bottom of Isle au Bœuf, a concession of 100 arpens in depth, by the width comprised between the first hills to the east, (ascending the river,) and the hills which terminate the said bottom of Isle au Bœuf to the west, bounded north by the channel of the above named Isle au Bœuf. The petitioner, full of confidence in the generosity of this government, flatters himself that it will be favorable to the establishment which he solicits, favor which he expects of your justice.

SILVESTRE LABBADIE.

St. Louis, December 19, 1800.

St. Louis of Illinois, December 19, 1800.

Considering that the petitioner is a native of this county, and that his family is one among the most ancient inhabitants of this country, whose known conduct and personal merits are recommendable; being satisfied to evidence as to the truth of what he states in his petition; being assured that the petitioner has more than the means necessary to improve the land he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, provided it is not to the prejudice of anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antoine Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in the place designated; . . . . (omission in the record,) the same to said party with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

No. 255.—Baptiste Duchouquet, claiming 3,840 acres.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the same province:

Baptiste Duchouquet, father of a family born under the domination of his Majesty, and being a member of one of the most ancient families of the country, has the honor to supplicate you to take into consideration that he and his family never having solicited the favors of the government in order to get extensive concessions, he believes that you will be pleased to assist him in his views of establishing a stock farm for the purpose of raising all kind of cattle, cultivating the soil, and cutting timber for firewood, which will become very scarce in this town before ten years; therefore, he has the honor to supplicate you to have the goodness to grant to him four thousand arpens of land in superficies, to be taken on the left side of the Missouri, opposite the mouth of the Osage river, and moreover, all the vacant space contained between the concessions which you have been pleased to grant to Messrs. Etienne St. Pierre and Silvestre Labbadie, on the right side of said Missouri, and the river called à Berger, at the distance of about 66 miles from its mouth. The petitioner hopes that you will condescend to consider that the lands he asks for cannot be of any value but in very remote times, which renders his demand of less consequence than it might appear at first sight, especially as the distance of those lands from any settled points will leave his improvements exposed to the incursions of the Indians, and to many other inconveniences; for these reasons he solicits of your goodness to be authorized to delay the survey until some neighboring grantees shall oblige him to make his lines known.

The uncertainty of all commercial resources and of the Indian trade, which visibly decrease every year, as well as the means of subsistence procured by the hunts, which occupied the inhabitants in the Missouri every fall, are reasons which have determined him to direct his views towards less precarious resources, that may enable him to secure to his family an independent existence. The verbal promise he had received of your predecessor, Don Zenon Trudeau, of the concession for the said tracts of land above mentioned, is a motive which, added to the proofs daily given by you of your desire to favor industry and agriculture, induces him to hope that you will be pleased to do justice to his demand in a way favorable to his projects.

BAPTISTE + DUCHOUQUET.

St. Louis, December 30, 1800.

St. Louis of Illinois, December 30, 1800.

Having examined the foregoing statement, and considering the just reasons of the petitioner, as also the length of time that his family has been settled in this country, and his known integrity; considering, besides, the promise made to him by my predecessor, and that he possesses all the means and conveniences necessary to improve the lands he solicits, I do grant them to him, under the same boundaries he asks, in fee simple, for him or any other who may represent his right, dispensing him of the survey on account of the existing great distance, until some concessions being granted in the vicinity, will oblige him to show his lines; and the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, Don Antoine Soulard, shall take cognizance of this title for his intelligence and government in what concerns him; after which the party interested shall have to solicit the title in form from the intendant general of these provinces of Louisiana, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

NOVEMBER 13, 1811.

Board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Baptiste Duchouquet, claiming 4,000 arpens of land situate opposite the mouth of Osage river, district of St. Charles, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus, lieutenant governor, dated 30th December, 1800.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. See minutes, book No. 5, page 404.

JULY 8, 1833.

L. F. Linn, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

Baptiste Duchouquet, by his legal representatives, claiming, under a special location, a tract of land situated between the lands granted to Etienne St. Pierre and Silvestre Labbadie, on the waters of Berger river, on the right bank of the Missouri, (see book B, page 511; minutes, No. 5, page 404,) produces a paper, purporting to be an original concession, from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated 30th December, 1800.

M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says that the signature to said concession is in the proper handwriting of the said Carlos Dehault Delassus. See minutes, book No. 6, page 220.

NOVEMBER 19, 1834.

F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Baptiste Duchouquet, claiming under a special location, &c., (see book No. 6, page 220,) M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says that by referring to the plat, in the surveyor's office, the quantity of land claimed in this case is 3,840 acres, the tract being two miles in front on the right bank of the Missouri, by three miles in depth. See book No. 7, page 72.

DECEMBER 4, 1834.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe and J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

Baptiste Duchouquet, claiming a special location; see book No. 6, page 220.

The board remark that the 4,000 arpens (on the left bank of the Missouri) asked for in the petition have been confirmed by recorder Bates' Decisions, page 59.

The board are unanimously of opinion that the remainder of this claim (lying on the right bank of the Missouri) ought to be confirmed to the said Baptiste Duchouquet, or to his legal representatives, according to the concession; see book No. 7, page 78.
